Attack Opens On Bill to Put Civil Service Under 1 Man

Reorganization Facing Worst Fight Since Court Battle.

Byrd Seeks to Cut President's Power

A. F. L. Denounces Plan as 'Autocratic' and 'Dictatorial.'

By Robert C. Albright.

A three-way attack was directed last night at the Administration's Government reorganization bill, presaging a Senate controversy approaching in bitterness the Supreme Court enlargement conflict.

Opposition from labor, Civil Service and Congressional quarters crystallized on the eve of an effort by Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, to call up the omnibus bill in the Senate today.

Developments were:

Senator Harry Flood Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, and a strong bloc of Senate supporters, introduced a series of amendments designed to check broad Presidential powers to revamp bureaus and to modify pertinent civil service, audit and policy features of the bill.

Civil Service Bill Scored.

Commissioner Samuel H. Ordway, jr., a member of the Civil Service Commission, made public a report to the President opposing provisions of the Byrnes bill giving a single Civil Service commissioner "uncontrolled discretion by fiat change of rule, to meet pressure for patronage at will." Ordway proposed amendments for an affirmative personnel program.

The American Federation of Labor flatly opposed the Byrnes bill provisions "for the abolition of the United States Civil Service Commission and for the delegation to a Civil Service administrator of autocratic, dictatorial authority over more than 800,000 Government employes."

Byrd Won't Hinder Plan.

Immediately on passage of the independent offices bill, Senator Byrnes was expected to ask that the reorganization bill be made the Senate's "unfinished business." If the motion carries, the bill may be temporarily laid aside to permit consideration of pending appropriation measures.

Senator Byrd, original sponsor of reorganization of New Deal agencies but whose special Senate Reorganization Committee was virtually displaced by Senate and House committees named to handle the President's own bill, will not attempt to block consideration.

With the aid of such Senators as Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana; Chairman William J. Bulow, of the Senate Civil Service Committee; David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts; Edward R. Burke, of Nebraska, and Josiah W. Bailey, of North Carolina, amendments will be offered to modify or eliminate some controversial sections.

Joint Approval Urged.

Senator Wheeler yesterday sponsored an amendment requiring ratification by joint resolution of both Houses of any reorganization executive order issued by the President. This would substitute affirmative Congressional action for negative provisions of the bill. As the measure now stands, Congress could act in a specified period to stop the British Peer and Wife Die With Pilot of Hearst Plane Near San Simeon Ranch; Fourth in Ship Injured.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Feb. 24.—The wealthy Lord Terrence Conyngham Plunket, and Lady Plunket, of London, England, and Pilot T. J. (Tex) Phillips, were killed in the crash of an airplane a mile and one-half south of the Hearst Airport at San Luis Obispo, Joseph Willicombe, secretary to William Randolph Hearst, announced today.

A third passenger in the plane, James Lawrence, of Hollywood, was injured critically.

The party was en route to the Hearst ranch at San Simeon.

Heavy fog which blanketed the coast throughout the day was blamed for the crash.

The plane, owned by the Los Angeles and San Francisco newspapers of Hearst, burst into flames.

Lord and Lady Plunket, trapped in the cabin, were dead when help arrived.

The pilot, thrown clear of the plane, was dead. Lawrence, also thrown clear, suffered a double fracture of his ankle and severe burns.

The nobleman, sixth Baron Plunket and descendant of a historic Irish family, arrived in Los Angeles only two weeks ago with Lady Plunket, who was the daughter of Fannie Ward, famous stage and screen beauty.

Pilot Phillips left the Monrovia, Calif., police department two years ago to become a pilot for Hearst.

By the Associated Press.

Tucson, Ariz., Feb. 24.—Gen. John J. Pershing, leader of America's World War forces, was failing rapidly tonight and members of the family who came tearfully from his bedside indicated the end was near.

His physicians announced that the 77-year-old general, who is suffering from a heart ailment, had lapsed into a coma and that his condition was growing progressively worse.

The announcement was issued at 11:15 p. m. E. S. T., by Dr. Roland Davison and Dr. Verne Mason, of Los Angeles, who arrived an hour earlier for consultation. Lieut. Col. S. U. Marietta also attended the consultation.

All members of the family were called to the bedside shortly after the bulletin was issued. They included Miss May Pershing, an only sister; Gen. Pershing's son, Warren, and Frank Pershing, a nephew, of Palm Springs, Calif. Miss Pershing and Warren arrived only this morning from Palm Beach, Fla.

Sergt. C. C. Shaeffer, the general's orderly the past ten years, emerged from the sick room with tears in his eyes.

"We refuse to believe it is the end," he sobbed.

Gen. Pershing, who has been ill since suffering a heart attack February 5, warmly greeted his son, Warren, upon the latter's arrival this morning.

Mrs. Sheridan Dies; Widow of Famed General

Capital Beauty Passes at 88 at Massachusetts Avenue Home.

Mrs. Philip H. Sheridan, widow of the North's brilliant cavalry leader in the Civil War, died yesterday. The end came after a long illness at her home, 2211 Massachusetts avenue northwest, a short distance from Sheridan circle and the equestrian statue of her husband. She was 88.

Last of the widows of top-flight Union Army leaders, Mrs. Sheridan was a noted beauty and popular in Washington society. She is survived by her three daughters, Mary, Irene and Louise Sheridan, and two grandchildren, Carolina Sheridan and Philip H. Sheridan 3d, the children of her son, Philip H. Sheridan, who died here in 1917.

Mrs. Sheridan lived in Army circles all her life. Wife of the General of the Army, she was a daughter of Gen. D. H. Rucker, quartermaster general of the Army. Her grandfather and two brothers were

Plane Can Cripple Battleship, Secret Tests by U. S. Reveal

By the United Press.

War and Navy department officials are in possession of highly confidential reports of "mock wars" between airplanes and battleships which show that the dreadnaughts are vulnerable to aerial bombardment, it was learned last night from a high official, whose name cannot be revealed.

The official said, in the face of denials from the War and Navy departments, that tests were conducted on the Pacific Coast which led to the conclusion that battleships may be easily crippled by modern bombers.

It was said the tests showed a 1,000-pound bomb—standard equipment for modern bombers—exploding 50 yards from a battleship, can seriously injure the internal machinery and render the vessel a "navy cripple."

It was pointed out that such tests have never been carried out with a vessel that was fully manned and capable of using its anti-aircraft weapons, which can shoot a 5-inch explosive shell 50,000 feet into the air. Nevertheless, it was said, the pilot of one bombing plane equipped with several 1,000-pound bombs could disable, and possibly sink, a dreadnaught if he dared defy the vessel's anti-aircraft fire.

Similar test were said to have been made with bombing planes and cruisers, with the results showing a more devastating effect on the

Politics Perils Help for Aged In Oklahoma

Officials, Pleading for Continuation, Pledge Drastic Reform.

Growing Pains, Pledges Caused Irregularities, Board Is Told.

The Social Security Board last night took under advisement continuation of Federal grants to Oklahoma, whose welfare officials yesterday admitted that $685,000 had been paid out irregularly in old-age pensions.

The welfare officials blamed harassment by the Oklahoma State Legislature, indiscriminate political campaign promises of old-age pensions for all aged, and "growing pains" of setting up the social security plan, under an avalanche of applications, for the inefficiency and irregularity.

Drastic Reforms Promised.

Drastic reforms, some of which already are under way, were promised by the Oklahoma officials as they pleaded for continuation of Federal aid to the 107,000 persons receiving assistance under the social security program, 70,000 of whom receive old-age pensions.

During their part of the two-day public hearings yesterday the Oklahoma officials made no attempt to deny earlier testimony by security board investigators that pension checks had gone to dead men, that a butler had greeted an investigator calling at the home of a pensioner and that $685,000 had been paid out irregularly.

To Keep Record Open Week.

The security board announced at close of the hearing that the record would be kept open a week, during which time Oklahoma officials could submit new evidence to support their plea. After that time a decision will be made on continuing Federal grants.

"The burden of the situation seems to be that Oklahoma has been confronted with such difficulties—external and internal—that the degree of efficient administration desirable and necessary to achieve their goal has not been possible," said Arthur J. Altmyer, chairman of the security board, in summing up the hearing.

"The situation appears that there is still a very large percentage of ineligibles receiving assistance and that grants are not upon an equitable basis.

"The distressing fact is that in this situation some people are not receiving the assistance they need but the Federal Government is making large grants to Oklahoma.

"Shall the Federal Government continue to make grants? The board is confronted with the difficult task of making a decision upon this question.

"The board wants to make the decision which will react to the French Give 4 Spies Total of 47 Years

The leader of the ring, described as Hans Lorenz, Berlin merchant, escaped. The quartet sentenced included Baron Rudolf von Juchen, 60, born in Cologne, Germany.

Guffey Won't Quit Seat to Be Governor

Will Stay in the Senate as Requested by Roosevelt.

Spikes Pa. Plan to Put C. I. O. Leader in the Senate.

By Franklyn Waltman,

President Roosevelt yesterday intervened in the confused Pennsylvania Democratic situation, but only to the extent of asserting that he needed Senator Joseph F. Guffey in the Senate. Guffey immediately announced he would comply with the President's suggestion, thus taking his name out of consideration as a compromise candidate for the Pennsylvania Democratic gubernatorial seat.

Mr. Roosevelt was described as declining to have anything further to do with the warring factions of the Keystone State and shunned any reference to the demand of John L. Lewis, C. I. O. chairman, that the Democrats nominate Lieut. Gov. Thomas Kennedy, secretary of the United Mine Workers, for the governorship.

Indeed, Kennedy seemed to be further out in the cold, as far as the Pennsylvania State and national Democratic organizations were concerned, than prior to yesterday's White House conference. Until Mr. Roosevelt suggested that Guffey be left in the Senate, some consideration was being given to the idea of the latter running for Governor, with the understanding that if he were elected Kennedy would be named to his Senate seat. But that solution is now definitely out of the question.

Parley Lasts An Hour.

All this happened at a conference of more than one hour between the President, Senator Guffey, Gov. George H. Earle, Democratic State Chairman David Lawrence, and J. David Stern, Philadelphia and New York newspaper publisher. Contrary to earlier reports that the President had summoned these leaders, both the White House secretariat and the Pennsylvanians asserted the latter had requested the conference in order to find a solution of the party's difficulties.

Mr. Roosevelt heard the troubles of the Pennsylvania Democrats shortly after he received Paul Vories McNutt, High Commissioner to the Philippine Islands, whose Indiana friends this week launched a Presidential boom in his behalf. McNutt briefly discussed Far Eastern and Philippine affairs with the President, asserting subsequently that Mr. Roosevelt was "not disturbed" over the acclaim given to the Hoosier aspirant.

On the whole, the visit of Pennsylvania's Democratic "big four" to the White House left the political situation in that State as unsettled and confused as it has been now for Arthur Godfrey, red-headed radio star, whose word production is terrific, last night made a brief but fateful announcement. He said, "I do," and thereupon became the husband of pretty, blonde Mary Bourke.

The wedding took place at Burgundy Farms, the home of Dr. and Mrs. William McClellan, a few miles south of Alexandria.

Arch McDonald, Washington's favorite sports broadcaster, was Art's best man, and Mrs. McDonald was the matron of honor. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Pierce Ellis, Baptist clergyman, of Alexandria.

The marriage was the culmination of a romance that began when Godfrey was broadcasting from the N. B. C. Studios, where Miss Bourke was employed until recently.

'Jewish Provocateurs' Target of Latest Berlin Drive.

Putsch Veterans Hear Der Fuehrer

Stern Measures Pledged 'Representatives of Internationale.'

By the United Press.

Munich, Feb. 24.—Reichsfuehrer Hitler, speaking to veterans of his abortive "beer cellar" putsch here 15 years ago, announced today that Germany is about to take stern measures against "Jewish provocateurs" stirring up hatreds.

His subsequent remarks indicated he placed a part of the foreign press, described by him as "international poisoners," in the category of "Jewish provocateurs."

Der Fuehrer, speaking before the "old guard" of the Nazi on the eighteenth aniversary of the adoption of the Nazi Party program, said:

"We soon shall proceed energetically against Jewish provocateurs in Germany. We know they are representatives of an internationale and we shall deal with them accordingly.

"They can do nothing but lie, slander and incite hatred. We know they would not fight in any war, but would only profit by war."

Reiterates Demands.

Hitler also declared Germany demands "unconditional equality" with other powers and the restoration of her war-lost colonies.

He lashed out again at "poisoners" of the foreign press, repeating the attacks which he made in his Reichstag speech last Sunday.

He said that only a few days elapsed after his speech before the "poisoning" was resumed.

"Thus the London News Chronicle," he said, "does not shrink from writing that, despite the Berchtesgaden agreement (with Austria) 40,000 men of the Austrian (Nazi) Legion have been concentrated along the Austrian frontier, and adds that these men possess maps showing how to march into Austria from three directions, converging on Vienna.

"The newspaper further says that 10,000 men are ready to march into Czechoslovakia. All these formations are said to have been reorganized after February 4 (the date of Hitler's military reorganization).

Branded as Lies.

"These allegations are lies from the beginning to the end. This is a new instance of how the Jewish international poisoners manufacture and circulate lies. We may derive a lesson from this."

Hitler told the "Old Guard," and high party officials, that his prophecies (supposedly those of his "mein kampf"—my struggle) had been increasingly fulfilled since the Nazi assumption of power.

Eden's Successor Answers Critics and Warns of World 'Confusion.'

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press.

London, Feb. 24.—Viscount Halifax, temporary successor to Capt. Anthony Eden as foreign secretary, replied to critics in the House of Lords tonight with a statement that Britain is "not the least afraid" to go to war with Italy, but refuses to be drawn into a conflict simply because of world "confusion."

Lord Halifax, taking up the defense of Prime Minister Chamberlain's "realistic" bargaining with Premier Mussolini, made the statement in answer to loud protests among the peers regarding the government's readiness to recognize Il Duce's Ethiopian conquest in exchange for a pact of friendship in the Mediterranean.

As the attacks on Chamberlain's alleged "surrender" to the dictators carried into the House of Lords, Fuehrer Hitler sent word that he,

Uproar Over War Control Bill Halts Diet in Air-Scared Tokyo

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo (Friday), Feb. 25.—Riotous debate over a war control measure forced Parliament into recess today after Japan had spent four terrified hours waiting for a "phantom" Chinese air armada that never appeared.

The uproar in the lower house, one of the most turbulent scenes in Japanese parliamentary history, broke up debate last night on the government's national mobilization bill, which would impose wartime regulation of Japanese business, finance, property and private lives.

The scene in Parliament arose in the first five minutes of debate on the government's long-awaited mobilization bill and grew to such pitch the speaker adjourned the house overnight.

A cabinet crisis was predicted unless the government revised the bill, which twice had been referred to a planning board for modification.

A few hours earlier, air raid warnings had been canceled on Kyushu, southwestern island of Japan proper, on the main island of Honshu and the colony island of Formosa, ending a scare that had proved false.

Chinese bombers, which Wednesday raided Formosa, had been reported headed across the China sea toward Kyushu.

In Tokyo, much of the reaction dwelt on the fact that Vladivostok, Russian Siberia, where a huge Soviet air fleet is concentrated, is almost as close to the capital as Formosa is to China.

Schuschnigg's Defiance

By the Associated Press.

Vienna, Feb. 24.—Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg tonight dedicated himself to a relentless fight to preserve Austrian independence, which he said Germany unmistakably had guaranteed.

Addressing the Diet, he defiantly proclaimed "Austria must remain Austria" and declared that since illegal political activity in the nation was finished for all time the Austrian mission now was to develop her own independent life.

Austria's independence, he declared as both Austrians and Germans listened to an international broadcast of his speech, was guaranteed by Chancellor Adolf Hitler of Germany, by the Austro-German friendship accord of July 11, 1936, and the agreement which he and Hitler reached February 12 in their Berchtesgaden conference.

Milestone Toward Peace.

Schuschnigg called the agreement with Hitler a "milestone toward peace" and an assurance Austria may preserve her sovereignty.

He said it merely was an extension and confirmation of the friendship accord and each agreement, he insisted, contained:

German guarantee of Austrian independence.

A commitment by each government to refrain from interfering in the internal affairs of the other.

An Austrian promise that her policies always would be based on recognition of the fact that Austria was a German state.

A clarification of Austria's role in the Rome protocols alliance among Austria, Italy and Hungary.

Agreements on practical measures to bring about internal pacification.

"Both the German chancellor and I hope the meeting at Berchtesgaden will be a milestone in the relations between the states, assuring permanent friendship," he said.

"Austria Is Capable."

He recited industrial and commercial statistics to establish that Austria was capable of independence and able, with the co-operation of 3,000,000 members of the Fatherland Front, to perpetuate the Christian authoritarian form of state.

While the chancellor's oft-repeated determination to fight for independence aroused enthusiasm in the Diet and throughout the Nation, there were some manifestations of opposition.

TVA Dam Fight Delays Offices' Fund in Senate

Bitter Storm Breaks Upon Plan for $112,000,000 Kentucky Project.

Projected TVA construction of a new $112,000,000 dam in Kentucky at one fifth the cost of the entire Tennessee Valley program yesterday encountered bitter bi-partisan opposition in the Senate and delayed passage of the $1,142,069,465 Independent Offices appropriation bill.

Assailing the project as unjustifiable from a power navigation or flood control standpoint, Senator John E. Miller (Democrat), of Arkansas, and Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, led the fight on a initial $2,763,000 outlay.

House Act Reversed.

Funds for construction of the Gilbertsville, Ky., dam, 20 miles from the mouth of the Tennessee river, had been eliminated by the House but the Senate Appropriations committee put them back in the bill.

While Vandenberg compared the dam to the virtually abandoned Passamaquoddy and Florida ship canal projects, and Miller called it "putting al our eggs in one basket," Senator George W. Norris, Nebraska Independent, and father of the TVA act, declared it would be an economic sin to eliminate the fund. Norris charged the power trust was behind the opposition.

Board Funds Restored.

Earlier, the Senate restored the Senate Appropriations Committee $385,000 cut in the National Labor Relations Board's budget for next year, over vigorous opposition to the increase. Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), Virginia, said he thought the board "ought to be abolished," and Senator Edward R. Burke (Democrat), Nebraska, called the labor board's administration "a national disgrace."

Vandenberg told the Senate the proposed TVA Gilbertsville project would be six times larger than any of the seven main river dams, with a volume of approximately 60 per cent of the total of all dams on the Tennessee River.

The Michigan Senator quoted from a letter from Chairman Andrew J. May, of the House Military Affairs Committee. May said the dam "will cost more than 20 per cent of the total estimated cost of the TVA project, is of questionable value and involves serious engineering difficulties." May favored $100,000 for further study.

Norris Assails Tactics.

Norris replied that Vandenberg had "hunted out" in the person of May the bitterest foe of TVA. Norris conceded the cost for power alone would be high, but declared flood control and navigation were the primary considerations.

"The reason for opposition to this appropriation," said the Nebraskan, "is that the power people don't want it."

Senator Miller replied the dam could not be justified from the standpoint of power "because there is a superabundance of power already in the Tennessee Valley" and the TVA has "resorted to the sale of power to private power companies contrary to the spirit of the act." Miller contended if the dam was justified for flood-control purposes, "then it would not be worth anything for navigation."

All Eggs in Basket.

"The building of the dam at Gilbertsville may be an essential in the ultimate development of the Tennessee Valley," said Miller. "I do not know, but I do know that we have committed $505,000,000 of Government funds to the Tennessee Valley. . . . I am not in favor of putting all our eggs in one basket. There are other communities in this Nation besides the Tennessee Valley."

Vandenberg said the cost per kilowatt of installation at Gilbertsville would be $581.84 compared with $95.27 at the Wilson Dam and an average cost of $227.21 for all other TVA dams. He cited a National Resources Board report to show the average cost of steam installation was $75 to $125 per kilowatt. He urged the Senate not to proceed until it had cleared up the "many doubts" about the project.

Voice Vote Taken.

Restoration of the $385,000 cut in National Labor Relations Board funds came on a voice vote of the Senate. Senator Glass had asked the Senate to hold the fund to the $2,570,000 recommended by the Appropriations Committee, which he said was the same amount it received last year. He said the board "had not been able to justify" employment of added personnel.

"The committee did not want to extend the Labor Board's tentacles into every community of the United States," said Glass. "Some of us believe the Labor Relations Board ought to be abolished."

Wagner Defends Board.

Senator Elbert D. Thomas, of Utah, and Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York (Democrats), hurried to the board's defense. Thomas said opposition to the board was no reason to cripple and injure administration of the labor act. He contended the board has successfully carried out provisions of the act, and Wagner cited the board's record of victories in the courts.

Senator Burke, author of the sidetracked resolution for a Senate investigation of board activities, said he did not favor attacking the board indirectly by cutting its funds, but declared he could not allow assertions that the board has improved labor relations to go unchallenged.

Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, said the Senate committee cut the board's budget because it believed there would be fewer labor disputes next year and the work of the board would be diminished.

Utility to Negotiate.

Knoxville, Tenn., Feb. 24 (AP).—The Tennessee Public Service Co. was ready today to negotiate with the city of Knoxville for the sale of its electric power properties.

City officials and representatives of the privately-owned utility will meet here Monday with officers of the Tennessee Valley Authority to open negotiations. The move was the first within the vast area embraced by the TVA in which a power company has voluntarily agreed to negotiate the sale of its properties.

Counsel for 18 private utilities filed an appeal to the United States Supreme Court today from the decision of a three-member Federal Court holding the operations of the TVA constitutional.

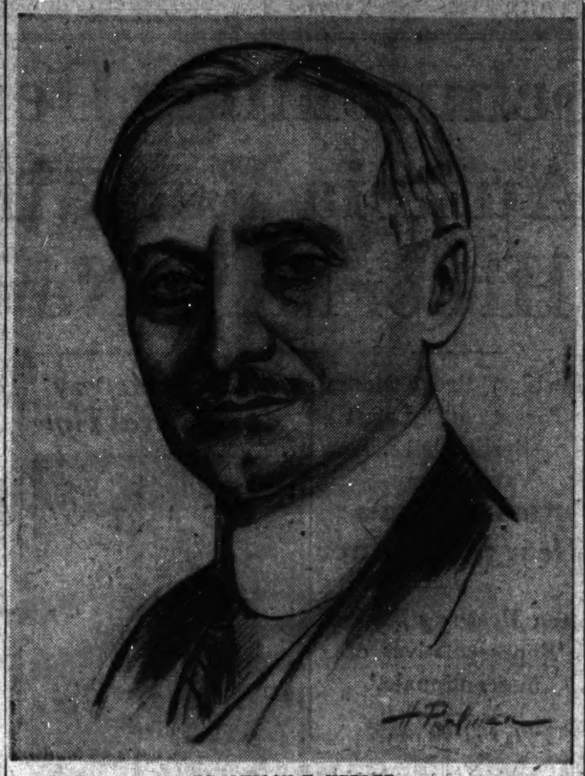
Protection of Property Values Is Citizens Forum's Chief Aim



DR. LYMAN F. KEBLER.

Dr. Lyman F. Kebler, One of Founders, Keeps Columbia Heights Group Active in Promotion of Community Health.

By Christine Sadler

The Citizens Forum of Columbia Heights was organized in 1926 for the principal purpose of protecting property values in the neighborhood. That is still its main fight, according to Dr. Lyman F. Kebler, 75-year-old chemist physician who has been president of the forum for two terms and was one of its founders.

Dr. Kebler, who has spent many years working in behalf of pure food laws, is author of the widely read "Eat and Keep Fit" and is one of its best advertisements. By following his own advice he has knocked more than a decade from his age, if strength and looks are what count.

Due to his interest in health and the fact that his wife, Mrs. Ida E. Kebler, has been in community center work for many years, Dr. Kebler's organization is wide awake in its consideration of these subjects.

It opposed using the old Tuberculosis Hospital as an emergency wing for Gallinger, insisting that the welfare of the community demanded the site be given over to recreational purposes, as originally intended.

It is also in favor of the Board of Education "running the schools and all recreational and playground projects connected with them." Another resolution adopted by the forum asked compulsory vaccination for diphtheria and smallpox as a requisite for entering school.

"We would favor an income tax for the District if it would tax everyone alike. We have taken no action in regard to the business privilege tax, but I am personally opposed to it because it is inequitable and unfair," Dr. Kebler said.

Tuition for children living outside the District and attending Washington schools has been asked by the Citizens Forum.

Dr. Kebler has been interested in civic work in the District for many years and was director of the Columbia Heights Community Center for two decades. After coming here to work with the Government as a chemist he took a medical degree from George Washington University.

The chemical-medical combination he has used to great advantage in the cases he has worked up for the Government in pure food, drug, and patent medicine fields. As a result of his work in co-operation with Dr. Harvey Wiley, many fraudulent schemes were stopped. "I'm glad I took chemistry at the university instead of Greek and Latin which everyone tried to urge on me. You see I was born in 1863 and the classics had a strong hold on education at that time," he said.

He resigned from Government work in 1929 to enter private practice. For a while he did nutritional and health work with the Biltmore hotels. For several years he taught at George Washington University.

Dr. Kebler is a member of the Business Men's Club of his neighborhood and recently joined the Lions Club. He is a Mason and an Eastern Star, has three children and four grandchildren, and lives at 1322 Park road northwest.

On Monday—Maury T. Warren, president of the Washington Highland Citizens' Association, will be next in the "Working For Washington" series.

New Tax Bill Eases Burdens, Vinson Asserts

Will Not Keep Business From Expanding, Says Representative.

By the Associated Press.

Representative Vinson (Democrat), Kentucky, yesterday said the tax revision bill tentatively approved by the House Ways and Means Committee would ease materially the tax burden on virtually all corporations and businesses.

"The bill will not keep firms from expanding and branching out and providing employment—if they really want to do it," he said in an interview.

"Our objective was to relieve hardships and inequities and to raise the same amount of revenue, and I think the bill will do that."

Purpose of Proposal.

The legislation, drafted by a subcommittee which Vinson headed, would modify the undistributed profits and capital gains taxes and put a new surtax on family or closely held corporations.

A minority member of the subcommittee, Representative Crowther (Republican), New York, asserted there was "no great issue left in the bill."

Vinson said the highest tax applicable to any corporation under existing law is 32.4 per cent. The biggest rate proposed in the new bill for ordinary corporations is 20 per cent. Thus, he said, there is a 40 per cent differential between the old and new top rates.

Tax Limit Explained.

The highest tax proposed for any corporation with earnings of $25,000 or less, Vinson said, is 14.1 per cent, while those with net incomes up to $5,000 would pay 12½ per cent at the most. A provision for permitting deductions for property depreciation, he continued, allows "very material relief."

"This tax on closely held or family corporations—called the 1b tax—is generally misunderstood," he said. "While the rate is 20 per cent, the amount of income to which it is applied is materially reduced from the original net income and at no time would it possibly be what some folks consider a second 20 per cent tax."

The Gallup Poll

Public Ownership of Railroads Opposed by 70 Per Cent of Voters.

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Feb. 24.—As President Roosevelt gives major attention this week to the plight of the railroads, one-third of whose mileage is in receivership and another third on the edge of bankruptcy, many observers declare that unless the railroads can put their house in order there will be public pressure for Government ownership.

George Gallup

To determine how much sentiment already exists for nationalizing the rails, the American Institute of Public Opinion has conducted a study covering three aspects of the issue.

The results show that a sizable majority of the voting public still favors continuation of private ownership. Less than one-third want the Government to take over the carriers.

One question put to a cross-section of voters throughout the Nation was: "Do you believe the Government should buy, own and operate the railroads?" The vote is:

Yes	30%
No	70

Administration policy has thus far not definitely favored nationalizing the roads. Although the subject may not be discussed at the President's rail conferences, there are many advocates of Government ownership in Congress. Judging by the Institute survey, however, the movement is not likely to have wide popular support at the present time.

Efficiency Questioned.

One reason for public opposition appears to be the belief that the Government could not run the roads any more efficiently than private management.

This view is revealed in the answers to a second question in the survey: "Do you think the railroads would be run more efficiently if the Government owned and operated them?"

The vote is:

Yes	38%
No	84

Nationalizing Not Inevitable.

Apart from the issue of whether the Government should take over the roads is the question whether it will have to take them over eventually if their economic plight continues. Current earnings statements show a heavy recent decline in railroad income, with consequently suffering to investors.

But on the whole the public is not yet resigned to the belief that the Government will be forced to step in. Of all voters who were asked: "Do you think the Government will have to take over the railroads eventually?" only 38 per cent said "yes," 62 per cent "no."

Reasons for Opposition.

The chief reason given by voters for their opposition to Government ownership is that it would set a dangerous precedent for direct Federal interference in privat business. "It's high time the Government tried to help private industries instead of putting them out of business," is the opinion of one typical voter.

Is America in favor of paying a pension to the widows and children of World War veterans who die from causes not connected with the war? See the Gallup Poll in Sunday's Post.

Hearing Set Today On Holmes Shrine, New Art Gallery

The House Library Committee this morning will hold a hearing on various bills, including proposals to establish a Smithsonian Gallery of Art and to make a national shrine of the recent home of the late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, at 1720 I street northwest.

Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, Treasury officials, and local artists are to testify in favor of the Smithsonian Art Gallery.

No witnesses other than the author, Representative McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, are listed on the Holmes resolution, which has been introduced in the Senate.

Sponsors of the Holmes memorial point out that the property will be sold at auction unless taken over by the Government.

Job Survey Head Says Slump Has Touched Bottom

John D. Biggers, Toledo glass manufacturer and administrator of the unemployment census, said he had informed President Roosevelt yesterday he believed the economic recession had reached its limit.

"It looks to me," he said after a luncheon conference with the President, "like the recession will not go beyond its present bounds.

"It is dragging along the bottom, and consumer goods industries, in my opinion will soon show a pick-up."

Biggers' main purpose was to present to the President and James Roosevelt another unemployment report covering the characteristics and composition of the unemployed in 16 States. This report will be made public today.

Road Chief Asks Congress to Build 'Superhighways'

By the Associated Press.

Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the Federal Bureau of Public Roads, told a Senate committee yesterday the time had come for Congress to consider construction of a superhighway system, but expressed some doubt whether toll charges would finance such a program.

Testifying before a banking subcommittee, considering a bill introduced by Senator Bulkley (Democrat), Ohio, to build ten superhighways, three running East and West and seven North and South, MacDonald indicated the experience of other countries with tolls on special motor roads had not been happy. Italy, he said attempted to finance highways in that manner but had to abandon the idea.

Under the Bulkley bill the superhighways would be financed ultimately by the imposition of tolls.

Wheeler Attacks Rail Rate Change

By the Associated Press.

A request by railroads that the 50-year-old "long-and-short-haul rule be abandoned in fixing rates brought a charge of inconsistency yesterday from Chairman Wheeler, of the Senate Commerce Committee.

The Senate committee began hearings on the Pettengill bill to modify the "long-and-short-haul" provision. The bill has twice won House approval.

R. V. Fletcher, general counsel for the Association of American Railroads, denied the carriers were inconsistent, saying that the 15 per cent freight increase and elimination of the long-and-short-haul provision were both intended to increase incomes.

Maryland, District Trade Police Calls

Officials from Maryland State police and metropolitan police yesterday inaugurated a new system of interstate police broadcasts at the Washington station, WPDW, at the Tenth Precinct station.

The new system, which has been operating experimentally for three weeks, provides for Maryland police relaying calls from Washington to Maryland police cars, and vice versa, in an attempt to apprehend criminals who cross the State line to escape arrest.

Land Rezoning Vote Reversed In Montgomery

Commissioners Rescind Act to Permit Building of Apartment Houses.

Reversing themselves as Clay Plummer sat on the board for the first time since his appointment, the Montgomery County Commissioners, meeting in Rockville yesterday, voted to rescind the action at a recent meeting, which permitted rezoning of a tract of land in Sligo Parkway so that apartments could be built there.

Last week Commissioner Charles E. King voted for the rezoning with the "old line" Democrats, although he was elected on a Fusionist ticket. He resigned, and was succeeded by Plummer.

Yesterday's vote on rezoning saw Plummer, Board President Frank H. Karm and Paul Coughlan, Fusionists, in favor of rescinding the rezoning measure, while Robert Hagner and Richard Lansdale, the Democrats, voted against the measure.

King's resignation followed a storm of protest from various civic groups of the rezoning of the tract for apartment house construction.

The Commissioners yesterday voted to dismiss Frank Ricketts as superintendent of county roads, effective March 1.

King, the former commissioner, was named by the county board to succeed Ricketts. His appointment was made effective immediately.

Samuel Thomas was discharged, with 30 days notice, as investigator for the superintendent of county aid.

King sided with the two Democratic commissioners in voting for Thomas' appointment to the $125 a month job a little more than a week ago.

Cannon Lafayette Kissed Goes Back To Yorktown, Va.

The Secretary of War yesterday fired one shot that ended the argument over possession of the cannon that Lafayette kissed.

He declined to rescind the order for removal of the weapon from the Watervliet Arsenal in New York State to Yorktown, Va. So the gun goes back to the battlefield where Fafayette's troops took it from the British at the time of the surrender.

The controversy dates from last summer, when the National Park Service asked that the famous gun be returned from Watervliet to Yorktown. New York patriotic organizations protested that the gun had been in New York for more than a century, and the plan was stalled for a time.

This week the Park Service gave notice it was preparing to remove the weapon and objections were sent to the War Department by Gov. Lehmann, of New York, and Albany civic groups. They explained the sentimental value of the gun to the arsenal and related how Lafayette had kissed the cannon while on an American tour. The War Department announced tersely yesterday that New York's request had been rejected.

Seminole Chief Kills to Avenge Honor of Girl

Aged Leader Fells Tribesman Who Abused His Daughter.

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Feb. 24.—John Osceola, grizzled 78-year-old chief of the Seminole Indians, killed another Seminole today, police said, to avenge abuse of Osceola's daughter.

Police said Osceola felled John Billy with a shotgun blast after an Osceola kinsman called Billy from the latter's home in the Indian village on the outskirts of Miami.

The officers said the aged man freely acknowledged the slaying and added that he was receiving plaudits and coins from admiring relatives. The United States Indian agent was summoned. No charge was entered.

Police said they had learned the elder Osceola, crippled by rheumatism, had a kinsman lift him into a truck and drive him to John Billy's home and call to the latter to come out.

When Billy appeared he was killed by one shot and the Osceolas then drove back to their pirates' cove home, where John Osceola was found later sitting cross-legged and placidly smoking his pipe.

Police said Osceola referred to his victim as "much bad man" and accused John Billy of attacking the chief's daughter, Mary, and the wife of another Indian known as Little Tiger.

The two Indian villages are popular tourist attractions. Osceola was described as a direct descendant of Robert Osceola, leader of the Seminoles during their wars with the whites.

Triple Attack Is Launched on Reorganization

orders. Such action could be vetoed by the President, and a two-thirds vote would be necessary to override the veto.

Senators Burke and Bulow joined in an amendment to continue the present three-man Civil Service Commission, which the Administration bill would abolish in favor of a single civil service administrator with sweeping powers.

Another proposed amendment would completely eliminate a section of the Byrnes bill giving the President power to make personal appointments, without regard to civil service rules and regulations, to all so-called "policy-making" offices.

Auditor General Opposed.

Still another amendment, jointly sponsored by Senators Byrd and Bailey, would eliminate the present General Accounting Office section of the bill, providing for an auditor general, in lieu of the present Comptroller General, responsible to Congress but having power only of post audit.

This proposed amendment would provide instead that appeals could be taken from rulings of the present Comptroller General's office to the United States Court of Claims.

With a view to economy objectives, which he has consistently stressed, Senator Byrd has prepared a policy amendment to the bill requiring that all reorganization efforts be directed toward an ultimate 10 per cent reduction in the administrative expenses of government.

Wants Costs Stated.

Byrd further would require that all executive reorganization orders issued by the President must state the amount of increased or decreased costs involved in any particular transfer, merger or abolition of a Government agency.

Amendments proposed yesterday by Civil Service Commissioner Ordway were all directed at "safeguarding" the merit system by "protecting the (civil service) administrator from pressure for change of rules to meet individual demands" and to strengthen departmental personnel set-ups.

Ordway said these proposals were his own, individually, and not necessarily those of the other commissioners, Harry F. Mitchell and Lucille F. McMillin. Asked whether his "minimum requisite amendments" were proposed at the request of the President, he said he offered them of his own accord.

His 11-page report, which is in the hands of the President, concluded it would "be far safer to maintain the commission, and omit those sections which create an administrator," unless the nine amendments he proposed are adopted.

Urges Passage of Bill.

Ordway proposed amending the Byrnes bill as follows:

Require the new central civil service agency to submit rules and regulations to the President for approval or disapproval.

Direct the central agency to "initiate, supervise and enforce a system" for recruitment, examination, investigation and certification of applicants, as well as for transfer and reinstatement of classified employes.

Require heads of departments and independent agencies designated by the President to establish divisions of personnel supervision and management under a chief personnel director. These officials would supervise appointment, training, and tests for promotion of workers. They would establish rating boards and arrange for hearing of employe grievances.

Set up a Council of Personnel Administration, including chief personnel directors of the various agencies, representatives of the budget bureau and the central agency, and up to seven outsiders appointed by the President.

Provide by "a mandate that the departments themselves must observe the minimum competitive requirements in making promomotion."

Provide in the law for the maintenance of transfer and reinstatement registers in the central agency.

Give the central agency authority to provide redress, after hearing, for an employe unfairly removed.

Authorize the central agency to subpena witnesses in enforcing its rules, and to make recommendations to appointing officers for discipline or dismissal of employs for discipline or dismisal of employes for infractions.

Pennsylvanians Carry Political Fight to President

Senator Joseph F. Guffey (second from left) eliminated himself as a possible candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania after a conference of Pennsylvania Democrats with President Roosevelt yesterday to seek party harmony. Green Submits Entirely New Wage-Hour Bill

Plans for Compromise in House Conflict With Drastic Request.

Proposals to "compromise" the deadlocked House wage-hour bill yesterday conflicted with recommendations for more drastic legislation, as the House Labor Committee made a futile attempt to agree on a course of wage-hour action.

Chairman Mary T. Norton called another meeting of the committee for this morning when proposals will be made to negotiate difference with the House Rules Committee, predominantly opposed to the Administration's wage-hour bill.

Green Submits Draft.

An entirely new draft of a bill was submitted to the committee by President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor for study.

The federation bill provided a flat minimum for wages of 40 cents an hour and a maximum work-week of 40 hours for what Green called "oppressed and sweated industries." The provisions would be uniform throughout the Nation, without geographic differentials.

$100 Fines Suggested.

No provision would be made for establishment of any administrative machinery, but violations would be prosecuted by the Justice department in the courts with fines set at $100 for each offence. Child labor and convict labor would be prohibited.

More rigid than the bill which passed the Senate and failed in the House, the federation measure was expected to encounter an almost solid bloc of Southern and Rules Committee opposition.

Compromises Offered.

Two more moderate "compromise" proposals were outlined to the committee by Chairman Norton, who has had confidential committee prints drafted. One of these provides for wages up to 40 cents an hour and a work week as short as 40 hours, to be administered by a single official in the Labor Department. The other provides for a 1934 "standard" wage scale, following wage lines of the old NRA codes.

The bills would apply to farm labor, as neither measure provides for exemptions.

U. S. Lends $2,750,000 To Cured Leaf Co-ops

By the Associated Press.

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration announced yesterday that loans totaling $2,750,000 would be extended by the Commodity Credit Corporation to associations of growers of fire-cured and air-cured tobacco.

Officials said the loans, made under provisions of the new farm law, would be used by the associations to continue purchasing tobacco now being offered them and to meet expenses incurred in grading and carrying the product until its disposition.

Roosevelt Shuns C.I.O. 'Deal' In Pennsylvania's Politics

Politics

a week. But some observers professed to see the withdrawal of Guffey as a gubernatorial contender as opening the way for a compromise candidate other than Charles A. Jones, Pittsburgh lawyer, tentatively slated last week.

At all events the muddled situation will be put before the Pennsylvania Democratic State committee when it meets at Harrisburg this afternoon. The committee has been summoned to indorse an organization slate of candidates for United States Senator and State offices. Chairman Lawrence, on leaving the White House, said he believed the committee would exercise its usual function of indorsing a slate—but he did not specify whether any changes would be made in the slate tentatively approved by leaders last week.

Factionalism Revealed.

Approval of this slate brought into the open the smoldering Democratic factionalism in Pennsylvania which Republicans hope will give that State back to them. The slate included the little-known Jones for lieutenant governor and Thomas A. Logue for secretary of internal affairs. The surprise was the omission of Kennedy's name—an omission which constituted virtual defiance of the powerful C. I. O. chairman.

Lewis quickly accepted the gage of battle, asserting that Kennedy would seek the gubernatorial nomination anyway. Then Guffey announced he had withdrawn his indorsement of the leaders' slate. Then came the suggestion, said to have been taken seriously by Guffey, that the latter become the organization's gubernatorial candidate and the appeasement of Lewis by promising Guffey's Senate seat to his protege.

Fear Lewis' Control.

The Guffey organization turned thumbs down on Kennedy for several reasons, but chiefly because it did not wish to deliver their organization into Lewis' hands, it is reported by Pennsylvanians. Should Kennedy be elected Governor, Lewis and his protege through control of the lush State patronage would be in dominant control of the party, it is explained.

But there are also other cross-currents in the Pennsylvania situation. Some of the leaders apparently do not want Senator Guffey intrenched at Harrisburg as the party's dictator, which he would be if elected Governor. It was Guffey's lieutenant, State Chairman Lawrence, who persuaded the party leaders to accept Jones for the Governorship. Lawrence subsequently has asserted that 80 out of the 113 members of the State committee favor Jones. Earle likewise has been at cross-purposes with Guffey.

Those familiar with the Pennsylvania situation last night expressed the belief that as a harmony move Jones may now be thrown overboard and a "dark horse" selected as the party's candidate for Governor, but all agreed that Kennedy will not be the compromise candidate, if one is chosen.

Earle acted as spokesman for the Pennsylvanians who conferred with the President. For several minutes he tantalized a large group of political writers by explaining how the group had discussed with the President the situation of the anthracite industry and the relief needs of the State. Then he got down to the real purpose of the conference.

"The President," he said, "listened with great interest to everything we had to say about the political situation in Pennsylvania. But he had no suggestions of any kind, except one. He said that 'I need Joe Guffey in the Senate and I suggest you leave him there.' It was both a suggestion and a request. Otherwise the President was hands off of the Pennsylvania situation."

In response to questions Earle said he was still a candidate for the seat of Senator James J. Davis, Republican, as he had announced last Saturday. He said the "purpose of the conference was to get the President's advice about our situation but he would not give it."

Guffey Will Comply.

"I am going to comply with the President's request that I remain in the Senate," Guffey said, adding he might make a statement before the State committee at Harrisburg today.

Following the White House conference the Pennsylvanians prepared to leave for Harrisburg to consult with State committee members in advance of today's meeting.

McNutt, on leaving the White House, said he had reported to the President on conditions in the Philippines and on his Far Eastern discussions with Rear Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, commanding American naval forces in Chinese waters.

He said he told the President he was "not disturbed" by the published accounts of the reception and added that the President was not disturbed by what had been written about McNutt's candidacy.

The commissioner said he touched only the "high points" on the Philippines and China and would return for a luncheon conference at the White House tomorrow.

Open Primary Talked.

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 24 (AP).—Talk of an open primary gained new attention in some Pennsylvania Democratic quarters tonight on the eve of the State committee meeting to select a slate of candidates.

Should the committee set aside a rule calling for it to make indorsements, some pointed out, further breaks might be avoided in a State party leadership already split wide in informal parleys.

However, State Democratic Chairman Lawrence said there was little likelihood the committee would fail to pick a slate.

At least a three-way fight for the governorship seemed assured after Senator Guffey removed himself as a possible candidate.

Plane Cripples Battleship, U. S. Tests Indicate

Defense

lighter craft than on the battleships.

It was learned the Army Air Corps conducts regular bombardment tests from great altitudes against sham battleships in the basin of Lake Muroc, in the Mojave Desert of California's Imperial Valley. These tests have shown the increasing accuracy of aerial bombardment.

On the bottom of the lake the Army has outlined the "hull" of a battleship, barely visible from the air, as a target. The number of direct hits on this target within a few minutes was said to be sufficient to disable any battleship afloat.

The Army also has devised a moving target, about the size of an ordinary cruiser, which is towed across the bottom of the lake at approximately 40 miles per hour—the speed of a fast cruiser. The United Press informant said this target has been "sunk" theoretically within a few minutes after attack by the Army's crack bombing planes.

Heavier Armor in Future.

Although it was emphasized that such bombing practice is not a fair test for battleships or cruisers, the results indicated a mass bombardment flight would seriously menace an enemy fleet.

It was further pointed out that the super-battleships proposed under President Roosevelt's naval expansion program will be much more heavily armored than those in existence today.

The question of airplanes versus battleships is expected to be threshed out at length today when Rear Admiral Arthur B. Cook, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, testifies before the House Naval Affairs Committee in support of the big Navy bill, which authorizes an increase of 1,000 airplanes in addition to 47 surface ships.

Cook may be followed by airplane manufacturers in view of mounting demands for more expert testimony on the relative strength of the two weapons.

British Assailed.

The House Military Affairs Committee yesterday, by unanimous vote, authorized a sub-committee headed by Representative Dow Harter (Democrat), Ohio, to investigate the Army Air Corps situation with a view of strengthening it. First witnesses will be Gen. Malin Craig, Chief of Staff, and Maj. Gen. Orean Westover, Chief of the Air Corps.

Earlier, Representative Harry B. Sauthoff (Progressive), Wisconsin, testifying before the Naval Affairs Committee, attacked the President's billion-dollar expansion program and advocated co-ordination of national defense in one department. He charged the President departed from this country's traditional foreign policy in his "quarantine" speech at Chicago.

Representative Thomas O'Malley (Democrat), Wisconsin, charged that Great Britain is helping to direct American policy, asserting that the British foreign office has a "shirt-tail brigade" in the State Department. He attacked the necessity for a bigger Navy as "ridiculous" and said the theory came from "perfidious Albion" propaganda.

Representative Richard Welch (Republican), California, urged an amendment to provide increased shipbuilding and repair facilities on the Pacific Coast "in order to prevent serious crippling of the entire defense system in event of a major conflict in the Pacific."

Representative Herman Koppleman (Democrat), Connecticut, charged that British overtures to placate Italy and Germany represented a "double cross" of the United States.

$428,000,000 Utilities Registered With SEC

By the Associated Press.

The Cities Service Power and Light Co. and its subsidiary, the Federal Light and Traction Co., registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday. They have assets listed at about $428,000,000.

These registrations brought to about $6,800,000,000 total utility assets now registered under the public utility holding company act of 1935. Aggregate assets estimated to be subject to the act total about $15,000,000,000.

permanent advantage of the needy in Oklahoma and of the taxpayers not only in Oklahoma but in the country as a whole," he said.

Enough Money on Hand.

John Eddleman, chairman of the State welfare commission, testified that the State had on hand or would receive in a special sales tax approximately $2,500,000 during the next two months—enough money to carry on the social security program during the time without Federal funds.

During February the State will spend an estimated $1,325,200, of which $1,050,000 will be for old-age pensions. Since 1936 the State has received from the Federal Government through February $9,505,790.31, of which $8,350,218.92 was for old-age pensions.

"Task Not So Easy."

"It is easy to pile up instances of weakness in administration," said Dr. Raymond Thomas, member of the welfare commission. "But the actual task of doing the job was not so easy."

He declared that promises in political campaigns had given a general misunderstanding of the Social Security act so that 90,000 persons deluged welfare officials, when old-age pensions were started, in the belief that all aged were eligible for pensions.

"The convening of the Legislature afforded another means of exerting pressure on an overworked staff," he added.

Old-age pension rolls are crowded because thousands of pioneers to Oklahoma failed to strike it rich after the Indian Territory had been opened for settlement, Representative Massingale said.

It is not at all startling that 584 out of every 1,000 persons over 65 in the State were "needy" pensioners, for persons without wealth poured into the State when the Territory was opened, and during subsequent oil booms, he said, and they failed to accumulate any money.

Fraud Case Recounted.

In promising speedy reform of the welfare commission, State Director Henry J. Denton added another "irregularity" to the long list board investigators had compiled. He told of the only case in which fraud had been attempted by a pension recipient.

He told of a colored man who moved near a county line so he could receive pension checks in two counties.

"He's now in jail," Denton added, crisply.

He also testified re-examination of the 70,000 pensioners had been handicapped in an investigation during the past seven months because 18,642 new applications had to be examined during that time, allowing an inadequate staff time to look into only 16,120 old cases.

"We were bound to make mistakes," Eddleman said during his testimony. "We know that there are possibly people on the rolls who don't belong there. There are possibly people not there who do belong.

"But we've tried to comply with the law. We've suffered many growing pains."

Other Factors Outlined.

Other points brought out during the testimony were that politics had forced the commission to depart from a merit system in making appointments to the staff; that there was interference with the social security program by county boards supposed to be only advisory, and that funds were denied for an adequate administration staff.

As a result of the hearing, Representative Gomer Smith (Democrat), Oklahoma, proposed that Congress inquire into administration of the social security program.

Meanwhile, Senator Lodge (Republican), Massachusetts, proposed an amendment to the social security act to reduce old-age taxes on workers and employers and to institute a "pay-as-you-go" policy to eliminate the contemplated $47,000,000,000 reserve fund.

Declaring "we are paying too much for the security we are to receive under the present act," Lodge said his plan contemplated an initial rate of 1 per cent, increasing to a maximum of 5 per cent in 20 years.

Frank Bane, executive director of the Social Security Board, said other States were likely to be called before the board for hearings on the inefficient use of Federal funds for the social security program, but he would not name them.

Wabash Policies On Funds Scored

By the Associated Press.

Senator Truman (Democrat), Missouri, criticized yesterday the action of the Wabash Railway Co. in "syphoning" funds from subsidiaries to make its own cash position appear in a better light in 1930.

Truman, acting as chairman of the Senate Railroad Finance Committee, contended the road built up its income account artificially in order to have its bonds listed in New York and other States as a legal investment for savings banks.

A. K. Atkinson, treasurer for receivers of the Wabash and a former vice president, testified that the company dipped into the resources of its subsidiaries to offset steadily declining earnings, but did so because of confidence that "prosperity was just around the corner."

Mrs. Sheridan Dies; Widow of Famed General

Sheridan

Army officers, as well as her husband and son.

Nineteen years younger than her husband, who was born in 1831, Mrs. Sheridan spent most of her girlhood in Washington and at Army posts. She was born at Fort Union, in New Mexico, where Gen. Rucker was stationed, and later moved to Washington. A devout Catholic, like her husband, she was educated at church schools here and in Philadelphia.

While a bridesmaid at a wedding in Chicago, in 1874, Irene Rucker met Gen. Sheridan, who made his headquarters there. For the next few months he courted her steadily, and contemporaries still recall the hero of the Civil War and the "pretty Miss Rucker" riding down Wabash avenue in an open carriage.

Shortly after their marriage, a few months after they first met, the general and his bride moved here, living in a large house on Rhode Island avenue and Seventeenth street northwest, bought for them by Chicago citizens grateful for Gen. Sheridan's work after the fire of 1872.

Had 300 Callers a Day.

The young girl who had been called the "pretty Miss Rucker" now was called the "lovely Mrs. Sheridan." One of the most popular members of Washington society, her home often saw as many as 300 callers a day. The Sheridans had four children, three daughters and the son, who died in the war. All three, the Misses Mary, Irene and Louise, survive their mother.

Since her husband's death, in 1888, Mrs. Sheridan divided her time between her Washington home, where she lived with her three daughters, and a summer home in New England.

Since the World War, she had not been active in Washington affairs. Earlier, however, she took an active part in several charities, in patriotic organizations and in Catholic societies.

Funeral services will be held in St. Matthew's Church tomorrow at 11 a. m. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Parade, Talks Here to Decry City Bombings

30 Groups to Join Mass Protest of Slaughter in Spain.

Members of 30 Washington political, fraternal and religious organizations will meet at Equitation Field in Rock Creek Park tomorrow afternoon to protest the continued bombings of noncombatant civilians in Spain, Washington Friends of Spanish Democracy announced today.

Heywood Broun, New York columnist and president of the American Newspaper Guild, will be the principal speaker, and he will be joined by members of Congress and trade union leaders.

The meeting will climax a parade of more than 100 cars, many of them decorated as floats, through downtown Washington. The parade, led by a corps of Washington motorcycle police, begins at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow at the zero milepost on the Ellipse, and continues east behind the White House and the State-War-Navy Building to Vermont avenue, down Vermont avenue to Fifteenth street, up Fifteenth to R street, then west on R to Sheridan circle. The parade will break up officially at Sheridan circle, but most of the cars will continue to Equitation Field, near the Shoreham Hotel, for the mass meeting.

The Washington Friends of Spanish Democracy, led by Gardner Jackson, chairman of the committee, are making elaborate plans for the parade. Artists have been working on the floats for more than a week. One of the displays, in which young children will participate, will be contributed by Peter Borras, president of the local Spanish committee for the defense of democracy.

Dr. Overholser Is Appointed to Staff of G. W. U.

St. Elizabeths Head Named Professor of Psychiatry.

Appointment of Dr. Winfred Overholser, superintendent of St. Elizabeths Hospital, as professor of psychiatry at the George Washington University School of Medicine, was announced yesterday.

Selection of the head of the largest Federal institution for mental diseases to head the psychiatry department at G. W. U. was made known by Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, university president, at a testimonial luncheon which followed Dr. Overholser's delivery of the Smith-Reed-Russell lecture.

Dean Gives Luncheon.

Dr. Earl B. McKinley, dean of the medical school, gave a luncheon at the Cosmos Club in Dr. Overholser's honor. The appointment will become effective at the opening of the academic year in September.

The St. Elizabeths superintendent succeeds to the post held by Dr. William Alanson White from 1904 until his death last March.

In his memorial lecture, heard by the medical student body and a large representation of practicing physicians and research scientists, Dr. Overholser paid deep tribute to Dr. White's achievements in increasing the prestige of psychiatry and fostering modern methods of treatment.

The third of a century in which Dr. White was in charge of St. Elizabeths coincided with the era in which sentiment began to waver from the old belief that psychiatry could serve only those confined in institutions, the speaker said.

Deplores Specialization.

Emphasizing that mind and body should be considered a whole, rather than the sum of many detachable parts, he deplored the growing tendency to super-specialize in the practice of medical specialties. He lauded Freud, Dr. White and Dr. Adolf Meyer for their work in expounding the "organism as a whole" philosophy.

Dr. Meyer, head of the department of psychiatry at Johns Hopkins Medical School and founder of psycho-biology, attended the lecture and the luncheon.

"Psychiatry has no desire to preempt the entire field of medicine," said Dr. Overholser, "but it has emerged from the corner to which it was formerly relegated, and has made as its lasting and most useful contribution the concept of the organism as a whole.

"With this contribution it stands ready to aid the internist, the surgeon and the practitioner of the several specialities in restoring as useful integrated personalities, well adjusted to the demands of the environment, those who seek help in their difficulties."

The Cosmos Club luncheon, as well as the lecture, was attended by members of the medical school faculty and representatives of the Army and Navy medical services and the United States Public Health Service.

Japanese Reply to Chinese Bombs

The Japanese replied to Wednesday's bombing raid on Formosa by dropping bombs on the Chinese air base at Foochow. Nearby bases at Kiangsu and Amoy escaped, but another airdrome farther north was raided. Japanese feared raids on naval bases at Kure and Sasebo. Shaded areas on the map show Formosa, scene of Wednesday's attack, and Kyushu, which expected a Chinese attack yesterday. Meanwhile, Japanese troops drove south trying to cut the Lunghai Railroad, backbone of China's resistance on the central front. A battle was reported at Kinsiang.

England Not Afraid of War With Mussolini, Says Halifax

London

like Mussolini, is ready to agree to a British formula for withdrawing German, Italian and other foreign "volunteers" from Spain.

"I have felt as strongly as anyone regarding Italian action in Abyssinia and nothing can ever make me feel differently about what has happened there," Viscount Halifax, leading champion of friendship with the totalitarians, said.

"But let's face the facts. We cannot ignore them because we can not get rid of them.

"The plain fact is that we could have stopped the conquest of Ethiopia by war and, of those who speak so loudly now, there are few indeed with any sense of responsibility who were or are prepared to face that hard fact.

"I am not afraid of war in the sense that I fear defeat because I know the temper of this country and that if this country ever embarked on a war which it thought to be both right and inevitable it would never let go.

"But what hangs over the world today is confusion. That's our great danger. Confusion might very well lead to war."

Leading the House of Lords attack on the government was Lord Addison, who asserted it was unwise to "enter into negotiations with a power which consistently has violated its contracts in the past."

"To lend money to one who is trusted by none and who might use it to bear arms against us and spread propaganda against us abroad is foolhardy," he said.

Ready to Quit France.

London, Feb. 24.—Germany tonight followed Italy in acceptance of Great Britain's plans for withdrawal of foreign troops from Spain.

Agreement on that issue has been a fundamental requisite of Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain for friendship talks between Great Britain and Italy.

With Italy's acceptance in principle already indicated, German agreement would place Hitler close behind Premier Mussolini in new gestures toward Britain since the resignation of Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, whom both disliked.

French indications tonight that Premier Camille Chautemps might shift French diplomacy into line with Britain's through conversations both with Italy and Germany strengthened the possibility of a four-power agreement to solve Europe's problems.

Agrees to Plan.

Dr. Ernst Woermann, German charge d'affaires, was understood to have agreed to the plan for the recall of foreign troops in a visit to the Earl of Plymouth, chairman of the European nonintervention in Spain committee.

Dr. Woermann is at the head of the German Embassy since Joachim von Ribbentrop, the former German Ambassador, returned to Berlin as foreign minister. Further negotiations between Germany and Britain were expected when Von Ribbentrop comes to London to take formal leave of his post here.

France Turns to Britain.

Paris, Feb. 24 (AP).—Premier Camille Chautemps, with his own Government strengthened by the refusal of political leaders to form a national union cabinet, turned tonight toward the British plan of negotiating with Italy.

Leaders of the various political parties earlier had rejected the Premier's offer to dissolve his cabinet if a national union government could be organized to cope with France's serious foreign problems.

The reaction in chamber lobbies was that the decision enhanced Chautemps' position by showing the parties were not ready to drop their squabbles.

Spanish Rebels Reach Important Mountain Pass

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, France (At The Spanish Frontier), Feb. 24.—Picked Spanish insurgent shock troops tonight reached the "gate to Valencia"—the mountain pass of Escandon—in their drive toward the Mediterranean coast.

Insurgent tacticians ordered the troops to advance into the rugged hills on both sides of highway to Sagunto, southeast of Teruel, which are defended by strong government barricades.

Gen. Jose Varela, commanding the offensive, sought thus to avoid what he called a "death trap" between the precipitous La Clavela mountains to the southwest and the barren hills above the Valbona River valley to the northeast.

No advance along the highway itself, insurgent military advices said, will be attempted beyond Escadon until Navarrese cavalry units report the hills on both sides have been swept clear.

Insurgents said one column of the offensive aimed between Barcelona and Valencia, the government's main strongholds, had broken through Castralvo, on the Sagunto highway about 15 miles southeast of Teruel.

Another, they said, was consolidating positions between Villa Espese and Villastar, about the same distance southwest of Teruel.

Japanese Advance 40 Miles in Day Toward Railroad

Shanghai, Feb. 24 (AP).—A Japanese army racing for the glory of being first to cut the Lunghai Railroad, backbone of China's resistance on the central front, was reported today attacking Kinsiang, about 75 miles from its goal.

The column, one of Japan's forces converging on the Lunghai corridor from the north, apparently had advanced 40 miles due south from Kiasiang in western Shantung Province. Kiasiang was reported captured only yesterday.

British Plane Lost In Record Attempt

London (Friday), Feb. 25 (U.P.).—A Royal Air Force bombing plane, practicing for an attempt to break the world's long distance record, was missing today with the two pilots chosen for the flight.

The plane was last heard from yesterday over Rothbury, Northumberland. It carried three crew members, Flight Lieut. T. F. S. Gardner, Flying Officer G. A. D. Thomson and Sergt. George Hicks. Gardner and Thomson were among the pilots selected by the air ministry for a long distance attempt scheduled shortly from an Egyptian airdrome to Australia.

$5,000 in Jewels Taken as Woman Puts Down Purse

Examining a brooch in a downtown department store, Mrs. Providence Sweet, 4550 Connecticut avenue northwest, yesterday was robbed of a handbag containing jewelry worth $5,000.

Mrs. Sweet told police she laid her bag a foot from her elbow on the glass counter before she lifted the brooch to the light.

Hearing a slight metallic click a few seconds later, she turned to find her bag had vanished.

The missing jewelry includes emerald and ruby rings sets with diamonds, a diamond and platinum engagement band, a diamond-clustered knot pin, a bar pin set with diamonds and sapphires, and a silver rosary.

Hull Awarded Medal Of Foreign Service Unit

Secretary of State Cordell Hull has been awarded the 1938 gold medal of the Foreign Service Order, C. I. McReynolds, grand commander of the organization, announced yesterday.

This medal is conferred annually on the person considered to have contributed most effectively to friendship between the United States and other countries.

British Radio Muzzles Opponent of 2 Dictators

London, Feb. 24 (AP).—Col. Josiah Wedgwood, Laborite member of Parliament and former wartime military commander, was banned from the radio by the British Broadcasting Corporation today after he refused to delete criticism of Hitler and Mussolini.

Wedgwood and Dr. Alfred Salter, also a Laborite member of Parliament, were scheduled for a debate, on the subject, "The Way to Peace."

country out of defenselessness and weakness and we have made it a country of unity and power. Since adoption of the Nazi party platform a new Germany has come into being."

He said national socialism always would retain that same platform and that he "hoped" Germany never would desert Nazism, because it opened a door to a new era in the Nation's history.

Paris-Moscow Pact Target.

Berlin, Feb. 24.—An even bigger stake than domination of Czechoslovakia—the possibility of dynamiting the Franco-Russian alliance—loomed large on the Nazi horizon tonight as Fuehrer Adolf Hitler's followers celebrated the eighteenth anniversary of the Nazi Party.

Czechoslovakia and her 3,500,000 Sudeten German minority for whom Nazis have demanded autonomy was shoved somewhat into the background of the rapidly shifting European diplomatic stage.

Pointing their editorials at the British swing to co-operation with Nazi Germany and Fascist Italy which caused Anthony Eden to be sacrificed as Britain's foreign secretary, the controlled German press declared:

"France must at last choose between London and Moscow."

"France must make a fundamental decision," one inspired commentator observed. "Will she go hand in hand with British foreign policy or not?"

One informant at Hitler's chancellery tonight pictured Der Fuehrer as not bothering about small game—Czechoslovakia—for the time being, when large game—France—was ready to be bagged.

Czechoslovakia is much more likely to give in to German demands once France has been weaned away from her alliance with Soviet Russia and once negotiations for a four-power pact are well under way, Nazi strategists believe.

Rumanians Chorus 'Yes Sir' to Carol In Oral 'Election'

Bucharest, Feb. 24 (AP).—Rumania apparently has approved King Carol's new constitution in an oral plebiscite in which more than 88 per cent of the adult population voted.

The populance displayed keen enthusiasm in voting for the constitution Carol proposed three days ago to give himself increased power over a government organized along guild lines.

Oral voting was decreed especially for the plebiscite on the constitution. Henceforth the secret ballot will be used, as under the 1923 constitution which Carol suspended.

Several hours before the voting ended the ministry of the interior declared approval of the constitution was assured. In all Bucharest, the ministry announced, only 156 votes were cast against the proposal. The 88 per cent vote compared to a 60 per cent turnout in the last election.

The result of the election will not be announced officially until Sunday.

London Police Scatter Opponents of de Valera

London, Feb. 24 (AP).—Police squads were called out tonight to scatter demonstrators shouting outside the Picadilly Hotel of Prime Minister Eamon de Valera of Ireland and his delegation, here to negotiate with the British government on trade, defense and other problems.

A spokesman for the demonstrators charged that "De Valera and his colleagues are in London falsely representing themselves as leaders of the Irish nation.

from the flagpole atop the city hall and it remained there throughout Schuschnigg's address.

Vienna police and members of the Fatherland Front scattered several groups of Communists and Nazis in Vienna, the police on several occasions using the flat sides of their sabers.

In blunt phrases, the scholarly chancellor flouted German efforts to make a one-party Nazi state out of Austria.

"For us it is not a question of national socialism or socialism, but patriotism," Schuschnigg shouted to the diet he used as a sounding board to tell the world Austria still was on the European map as a free nation.

"What We Have, We Keep."

"We did not choose our borders. We did not make the map.

"But what we have we are bound and determined to keep."

The packed audience in the reichstag hall of the parliament building, unused since the fall of the Austro-Hungarian empire in 1918, interrupted almost every sentence with frantic applause.

Radio carried the address to millions of listeners throughout the country.

Demonstrations organized by the Fatherland Front, Austria's only legal party, completely overshadowed any outbursts which the Nazis might have planned.

As the chancellor left parliament, 10,000 members of the front formed a noisy parade which wound through the streets of the inner city.

Nazis Sing Horst Wessel.

When several hundred Nazis started singing their marching song—the Horst Wessel—in front of the opera, mounted police flashed their sabers—but did not use them.

"The government stands firmly behind the 1934 constitution and is directing all its efforts toward Austria's freedom and independence," Schuschnigg said, his voice trembling with emotion.

"The constitution recognizes no parties and no party state."

It was his answer to world fears that his historic February 12 meeting with Hitler had opened the way for Nazi domination of Germany's little German-speaking neighbor and eventual loss of Austrian independence in union with the Reich.

"What we Austrians want cannot and must not be designated by political concepts of red, black, brown and green, and right and left—it is not a party-bound people's front, but a single compact front of our people."

Jews Encouraged.

Jews who were fearful that Austria's new tolerance of Nazi ideology might stimulate anti-Semitism were encouraged by the chancellor's comment that all who fell in line with the Fatherland front would be equal before the law.

He failed to mention the Jewish problem directly although Jewish leaders said they had a private assurance from him there would be no persecution.

Schuschnigg acknowledged a debt to Premier Mussolini of Italy in saying:

"We have always admired his unbendable determination in the leadership of his own country.

"We admire him for his understanding of Austrian problems, although he always tried to avoid any impressions of interference in our internal affairs.

"Inspired Confidence."

"This inspired confidence in me, making it repeatedly possible to discuss with him matters outside the political problems of today."

Monarchists expected to derive little comfort from Schuschnigg's address—and got none.

The Hapsburgs were not mentioned, indicating the chancellor believed the monarchist movement for which he often expressed sympathy was on the shelf for an indefinite time.

Young members of the fatherland front and the Strumkorps, organized to fight Nazi influence, flanked the rostrum from which Schuschnigg spoke.

Cordons of police were thrown about the parliament building. All traffic was stopped for blocks around to guard against any attack on the chancellor's life.

Launching into the most anxiously awaited section of his speech, Schuschnigg defended his meeting with Hitler at Berchtesgaden as a milestone toward peace and Austrian independence.

Schuschnigg spoke slowly, earnestly and emphatically as he pointed out that fulfillment of the July 11, 1936, agreement with Germany had been obstructed by difficulties "in which there were sources of danger."

He declared he visited Hitler at his Berchtesgaden retreat to reach a peace honorable to both sides and end five years of fratricidal strife.

With particular emphasis, the Chancellor reminded his listeners that Hitler—whom he did not once mention by name—had confirmed in his speech last Sunday to the German Reichstag that the Austro-German accord assured Austrian independence and non-interference in internal political matters.

Freedom for All.

Schuschnigg, referring to the placing of Nazis in the government, said Austria's new political life "contemplates freedom for all within the borders of the fatherland front and insofar as they do not disturb the fundamentals of government.

"It is time to forget the past catchwords and slogans of clericals with long beards, of conservatives and of liberals.

"What is healthy in anyone's program will find a place in ours."

Schuschnigg said that Austria had shown herself worthy of independence and if her material progress was not as great as that of other nations, "We at least are able to demonstrate a most respectable showing for a land which has been tried as sorely as Austria."

Then he began giving figures—as Hitler did in his Sunday speech—showing increases in Austrian production, exports and creation of work. He outlined a broad program to combat poor housing and unemployment.

"We seek to live in harmony with our neighbors and with all peoples of the world," the Chancellor said. "We regard it as our right and also our duty to keep on good terms with all, including the great democracies, England, France and the United States."

Austria's future, he said, depends "upon the strong will for freedom in every Austrian heart.

"I take courage from the example of Dollfuss and all martyrs, and I place my trust in God, who will not forsake Austria."

He ended his speech on that reference to Austria's assassinated chancellor, Engelbert Dollfuss, who was killed in an abortive Nazi putsch.

Earlier he said his policy was based on the last words of Dollfuss, "We wanted only peace. We attacked no one."

"A dying man does not lie," Schuschnigg said. "He speaks the truth."

One of the most attentive visitors at the Diet session was Franz von Papen, retiring German Ambassador, who helped arrange the meeting between Schuschnigg and Hitler.

At the conclusion of the address while the Austrian national anthem was being sung, Von Papen stood stiffly at attention, his hand outstretched in the Nazi salute.

Speech Angers Berlin.

Berlin, Feb. 24 (U.P.).—Nazi quarters were angered tonight by the "almost defiant" tone of Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg's speech before the Austrian Federal Diet in Vienna in which he announced that Nazi elements will remain outlawed.

German Nazi leaders openly expressed resentment at the Austrian chancellor's announcements.

Schuschnigg's assertion that Austria will "fight to the death" to maintain her full independence were described here as being ineffectual insofar as preventing any "development toward Nazification" in Austrian internal affairs.

"There is no reason for excitement, because the speech probably will not change the situation," one Nazi said.

[Nazis resented particularly the Austrian's warm praise for Premier Mussolini in contrast with his failure to say a kind word for Hitler, the Associated Press reported.—Editor's note.]

Alien CIO Leader Must Leave U. S.

By the United Press.

Harold Pritchett, president of the International Woodworkers Union, lost his fight to remain in this country yesterday when Immigration Commissioner James L. Houghteling, refused to extend his visitor's permit.

Pritchett, a Canadian and West Coast leader, hurried here to make a fruitless plea for a fourth extension of his visa on which he has resided in the United States since 1936.

Mary O'Connor Trial Draws an Investigation

Philadelphia, Feb. 24 (AP).—The legislative commission investigating criminal courts in the State announced tonight that it would investigate the acquittal of Mary O'Connor on a murder charge. A jury last week acquitted the 19-year-old physical education student after she testified that she had struck—"a slap with the back of my hand"—a 5-year-old girl and left her for dead.

Student Denies 'Spree' Robbery Of Gas Station

Ellis Tippett, 20-year-old Ardmore (Md.) High School student, yesterday in District Court asserted he knew nothing about the robbery of a gasoline station at 2651 Benning road northeast to which his younger brother, Ellsworth, 17, has pleaded guilty.

The brother and a young girl were arrested with Ellis when police surrounded their tourist camp home on the Virginia roadside.

The two men were indicted for an alleged wild spree that occurred the night of January 12. The brothers were named in indictments accusing them of six robberies, two assaults with intent to commit robbery and one assault with intent to kill.

As police reconstructed the picture, the brothers set out with the girl so that Ellis could marry her.

"HOT BUTTERED RUM
'T'is just the Chilly Night for it" said CAPT. LAWRENCE

When other clipper masters called on that hardy Nantucketer, Capt. Ezra Lawrence, he was sure to serve hot buttered rum if the weather were chilly. We got the recipe from his great grandson and it's delicious!

"A good full measure of Virgin Islands rum in a large glass, about a teaspoon of butter, a spoonful of sugar, fill up with very hot water, sprinkle on nutmeg freely."

To make this recipe nowadays, you need Government House Rum, the principal rum from the Virgin Islands. A sound, honest rum, distilled directly from cane juice.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Britain Rescinds Ban on Disney's 'Snow White;' Picture Now Available to All Ages in the Empire

London Censorship Authorities Nullify Earlier Barring of Children Under 16 Without Adults; We Keep a Dinner Date—Almost; Postman Rings Once; Grace Moore Arrives Today; Theater Notes.

IT BECOMES necessary to revise this column's earlier bitter denunciation of the British film censors for having banned Walt Disney's "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" for English motion picture patrons under the age of 16. As I recall it, we denominated that edict as "a new low in censorial stupidity." Since Old Albion now has reversed itself, we take it all back.

BELL.

According to cabled advices to Ned Depinet, of the high command of RKO-Radio Pictures, intrusted with the international distribution of "Snow White," the London County Council licensing authorities have given this fabulous feature an unrestricted certificate of approval making possible its general distribution to all and sundry without let or hindrance. This is as it should be, but makes no less pertinent the observations of a recognized authority upon the original ban.

"Little Yankees seem to be made of sterner stuff than their British cousins," recently said Mrs. Clara Savage Littledale, editor of Parents Magazine, in commenting on the British censorship decree that no child under 16 should see the Disney masterpiece, unless he or she be accompanied by an adult.

"I am sorry," Mrs. Littledale said, "for any child who is so fear-ridden, so easily upset that he has to be kept away from the picture, for he will miss one of the rarest, most delightful pictures ever produced. I feel that such overstrung youngsters are few in number. I believe that the normal, healthy child sees the picture for what it is—grand make-believe in which unpleasant situations serve to heighten the effect of the happy situations into which they are resolved."

I quite subscribe to that view. Evidently, the British monitors do, too, upon sceond and slightly belated reconsideration. I congratulate the kids of Great Britain that they are finally to be permitted to enjoy one of the unique experiences of their lives in the theater.

And that reminds me. It is about time to make the semi-weekly trek to Mr. Meakin's opera house to view this amazing Technicolor production for the severalth time. Three viewings are by no means enough. I set myself six as a possible limit, for no other reason than to see all that there is to be seen in Mr. Disney's inspired reproduction of the fanciful things that can befall a very young and very beautiful maiden in distress. My favorite characters in the gossamer charade still are the ambitious young bluebird, who hits that false note in his vaunting effort to be a feathered Caruso, and the diminutive rabbit that is the only one with nerve enough to find out what Snow White is all about when she is lost in the wilderness. If I can ever manage to keep my eyes off these two young fellows, maybe eventually I will be able to see some of the rest of the film and make some new friends among its rhapsodic characters. I said maybe. I wouldn't be sure.

Travel Department.

The road map didn't help much. It stated with some completeness all the things we should do to reach that 7 o'clock dinner engagement on time, but omitted the equally important items of what we should not do.

Cross the Memorial Bridge to the Mount Vernon Highway, it said, and do not turn off at the Richmond pike after you have passed through Alexandria. Go straight ahead to the Belle Haven road, turn right and then proceed to the top of the hill and turn left. It is the first house you will reach.

The trouble with that was that the hill seems to have two tops. It flattens out a bit at a crossroad, so we turned there and found a house that wasn't it. So we turned around—almost. We would have made it except for that muddy ditch. No dice. Also no traction. A heavy manila rope, borrowed from a kindly roadside resident, failed to help. It especially failed to help the rope. It broke in 9,000 different places, more or less, and never budged the car. You could have smelled the scorched tires for a mile. Lots of people did. The A. A. A. in time came to the rescue with chains and a derrick. Then a back tire blew out, due to the grinding on sharp gravel mixed in an unholy combination with the mud.

We reached the 7 o'clock dinner at a quarter to 9—and it was still a repast fit for the gods, due to the miraculous preservative qualities of a modern electric kitchen.

Very punctilious dinner guests, these drayma desks—with the accent on the punk!

But Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Muto, long affiliated with the Washington office of the M. P. P. D. A.—slang for the Will H. Hays office—have a lovely new home down in Belle Haven, Va., once you find it. It is 85 feet wide, commands a ten-mile view of the Potomac, has a spacious ground-floor terrace and upper sun-deck verandas that ought to make a monkey of the high summer temperatures. I'd like to visit there again some time, but doubt if I'll ever be invited. Even Tippy, the cocker spaniel, barked at me when I arrived, and he can't even tell time!

Society Notes.

Ol' Massah Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theater Owners of America, was dancing around in the Variety Club last night and the night before that and the night before that . . . Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel for the Will H. Hays organization, hereinbefore referred to as the M. P. P. D. A.—and if you must have the truth, that means Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America—has been sojourning in the Capital these past few days, principally relaxing in deference to a slight indisposition . . . Fred Hessick, the big fuel and refrigeration man, not to mention perpetual host to the world's most beautiful women, insists that Ed Kuykendall's name in Hoffnickel . . . He has convinced Ed to the point where he will answer to either one . . . At that organization meeting of the Women's Auxiliary of the Variety Club on Wednesday afternoon, Helen De Titta, wife of the Washington manager of Fox Movietone News, was elected president, and Mrs. Sam Wheeler, vice president. There is a "board of governesses" that would knock you eye out. The good eye, at that.

With that high-strung Southern gentleman, Mr. Sam Galanty, division manager of Columbia Pictures in the Washington territory, vacationing on the hot sands of Florida, it is his private secretary who calls up to say that Grace Moore, a few days in advance of her local concert engagement, will arrive in Washington this afternoon at 2 o'clock on train 302-42, traveling the tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad. Miss Moore will be ensconed in the Raleigh Hotel and probably will receive the press. I wouldn't be so sure about the autograph hunters.

Dirty-Work-at-the-Crossroads Note.

Now I know why Dr. Archie D. Engel, optometerist, has been mailing me all those postcards from his Carribean cruise. He is trying to wear out my eyes so I will have to order a new pair of cheaters when he gets back. I should have known.

The Princess Holds a Reception

When Snow White is banished from the palace of the Queen, because she is a little too beautiful to suit the regal taste, she finds a new coterie of sympathetic friends among the "birds and beasts of the forest." This, of course, occurs during the action of Walt Disney's imaginative gem of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," the Technicolor feature in cartoon form, which today enters its third week as major screen attraction at RKO-Keith's, where it is shattering all previous boxoffice records.

In 'Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., Feb. 24.—Henry Fonda is so proud of his baby he brought her home in a market basket over his arm.

HEDDA HOPPER.

Here's something new in Hollywood.

Many big stars are being given time off to have or adopt a baby, which has made every movie home in the colony kiddie conscious. If they can't have one themselves, or are too busy, there's a place called the Cradle in Chicago, where they're doing a land-office business in babies. Henry wanted one of his own—expected a girl and got it. That boy's always been lucky.

While Henry was here making "Jezebel" with Bette Davis, his wife, Frances, stayed in New York making arrangements for the hospital. Got a cut rate from the doctor. This being her second child, she got it for half price. Her first daughter was by a former husband.

Henry won't talk much about his family; says that a man's homelife is his own affair and refuses to share his with anybody.

I was in England when Henry and Frances first met, and came back on the same boat with them. Frances was so in love with him that she never let go of his hand till she got him to the altar. After they were married she gave him a trumpet, but he didn't need to blow on that to let his friends know how happy he was.

He made a picture over in England but never got paid for it. His salary and expense account got mixed and tied up over the income tax. One glance at Fonda and you can tell that he came from the Middle West. He has that farm boy look about him, though he never did any farming. He walks with a long, loose stride, the kind of lope ordinarily associated with plows, yet he never followed a plow in his life. He was born in Grand Island, Nebr., May 16, 1905. There must be something virile in the air of that State. Bob Taylor came from there, too.

Henry graduated from the University of Minnesota, and then went seeking a newspaper berth, which he didn't get. But did, by accident, get a job in the theater in Omaha. His first part was in Phil Barry's "You And I." He told me it took him two weeks to stop blushing and four more to relax. He stayed with that amateur company two years. Learned to paint scenery, adjust lights, work the curtain and to be the janitor.

Then he got a job in vaudeville and thought himself a millionaire when they paid him $100 a week.

The following summer he joined the Mount Kisco Stock Company as a scenic designer, and incidentally, told them he could play the iceman in "It's a Wise Child." If you know the play, the iceman is the best part in it. He got it. The next year he didn't paint scenery; he was an actor. Then followed five years of stock before he got his big chance on Broadway, "The Farmer Takes a Wife," in which Walter Wanger saw him and brought him to Hollywood.

Fonda is quiet and studious. He hates fan magazine writers. One of them betrayed him once. Wrote a story about his love life which brought him loads of publicity and fan mail—all bad. He doesn't mind newspaper folk, but finds it difficult to talk with them. He's just a normal kind of guy, except when you mention the baby, then he's off to the races! Just like any other proud father—well, you know how they go on.

Miami Beach, Feb. 24.

A FEW WEEKS before his death, George Gershwin was at the Clover Club in Hollywood playing No. 10 at the roulette table. His mother noticed a $1,200-stack of chips in front of him. "You've been playing No. 10 for more than three months," she berated, "and it never turned up. It's time to quit." The composer agreed, and cashed in his chips . . . Last night Mrs. Gershwin entered the gambling casino at the Royal Palm Club. She watched the play at the roulette table and placed one chip on No. 10. She won.

A SUBURBAN PUBLISHER will purchase a Brooklyn newspaper within 30 days . . . Sammy Fain, who wrote "Penthouse on Third Avenue" and "That Old Feeling" in collaboration with Lew Brown, declared yesterday that he never will write another song with Brown, despite the fact that both songs were hits. Fain charges incompatibility . . . Harry Richman's Beechhurst home, which cost $300,000, is for sale—for $40,000 . . . Tommy Dorsey will follow the example set by Benny Goodman's Orchestra. He'll give a swing concert at Carnegie Hall in the spring.

CORNELIUS VANDERBILT, SR., has a magnificent estate at Townsend Island, near Biscayne Bay. It features a large swimming pool, hothouses, acres of lawn and costly landscaping. Vanderbilt, however, didn't erect any house on the island. It has a pier where he anchors his yacht, the Alva. He and his family live on the yacht while in Miami . . . Last week the beach guards advised a gray-haired visitor that he was getting too much sunburn. "And too much sunburn might drive a guy nuts." "I know all that," the visitor shrugged. "I'm Harry K. Thaw."

BILLY LEEDS, the Tin-Plate King, sold his yacht, the "Moana," and negotiated for the purchase of a 243-foot Swedish freighter which had been converted into an ocean-going yacht by Allison Armour, of the Chicago Armours . . . "Freighters usually have a bad cargo odor," Leeds suggested . . . "Don't worry," he was assured, "Armour did a complete overhauling job." And so Leeds made the purchase . . . Last week Billy opened some new hatches below deck, and almost was overcome by the odor. "Peeyeww," he lamented, "it's still a freighter" . . . "Oh, no, sir," the captain declared. "That's reindeer smell. Just before he sold the yacht to you, Mr. Armour brought 152 reindeer from Alaska."

EVALYN WALSH McLEAN is wearing her Hope Diamond while visiting the night clubs here. Two detectives always accompany her . . . Mrs. McLean was introduced to Mabel Boll, the Diamond Queen, who was wearing three rings weighing more than 200 karats. "No wonder Sonja Henie couldn't skate here," Ben Bernie told them. "You two girls cornered the best ice in town" . . . Tom Mix, who admits to being 59 years old, explains his excellent condition: "I don't smoke, I don't drink—and I keep the same hours as my horse." Mix, called upon to speak at the Dempsey-Vanderbilt, stammered one line: "A horse, a horse, my kingdom for a horse."

DAVE WILENTZ insisted yesterday that he won't run for public office in New Jersey . . . All the "Drive Safely" electric signs have been removed here quietly . . . Carl Fisher leased one of the Government islands nearby for $12 a year, and then lost the lease when some one entered a sealed bid of $24 a year. The new tenant claimed the $20,000 home Fisher had erected on the island, and announced that he would sue for possession. And so on the day before his lease was to expire, Fisher settled the matter—by dynamiting the house.

FRED SNITE, JR., the boy in the iron-lung, was host at a bachelor party last week, in honor of his brother-in-law-to-be. Cross & Dunn were brought from the Hollywood Yacht Club to entertain for the stage, and young Snite even sipped some champagne . . . Denis Scanlon brought Dr. Wilson, the famed paralysis expert, to see the lad, and to test a new iron-lung. Within the next few days, therefore, Snite will be transferred from the huge machine he now occupies to Dr. Wilson's newest device—which is smaller and less burdensome.

Starlet Sets Aside Scholarship Fund

While Judy Garland hopes that her screen career will continue for many years, the young singer is not going to take any chances. For that reason the starlet has asked her mother to start a trust fund for her lawyer career.

Mrs. Garland has arranged to bank part of Judy's weekly salary, so the youngster will be able to complete seven years of college.

The seven years is necessary because Judy plans to follow her first ambition and study law. The young actress, whose most recent picture is "Everybody Sing," has just three more years of high school to complete before she is ready to enter college.

If time permits, she will follow out her idea regardless of her screen careere, she says.

Tom Thumbs Seen In Shirley's Film

Although Shirley Temple is the tiniest star in moviedom, she will be supported in her newest picture, "Little Miss Broadway," by a young man and woman in their twenties, who are even more diminutive.

This apparent paradox means merely that George and Olive Brasno, the famed midgets who played Gen. and Mrs. Tom Thumb in "The Mighty Barnum," have been cast as residents of a theatrical hotel, in which much of the action of the picture takes place.

Theater Rebels HateHollywood So Stay on Job

Alison Skipworth and Savo Can't Catch Tempo, But Are Still Trying.

By Frederick C. Othman.

Hollywood, Feb. 24 (U.P.).—Alison Skipworth, who does not like Hollywood or any of its works, reported today that she could not understand why the moviemakers insist upon paying her a fat salary every week.

Miss Skipworth, who is perhaps the only unreconstructed rebel from Broadway left in town and one of the best-liked character actresses in the business, plumped herself down in her easy chair and said:

"I don't like pictures. I never have liked 'em. I don't like playing into a little wooden box.

"I've been at it for eight years, though, and they've paid me handsomely and been very nice—and I can't for the life of me understand.

"I've never been civil to anybody in this town. I don't know why they want me.

"The only reason I got into pictures was because I had to have some money to pay my income tax. The reason I didn't have any money was because I'd been in 20 consecutive failures on the stage and I was nearly broke.

Four Weeks Make Eight Years.

"So I came out and they gave me a four-week contract at $600 a week. I insisted they write in the contract that they'd pay my fare back, because I was sure I'd be a flop. I was, too, but they gave me another contract for $650 a week, and it's been going along that way ever since.

"Now I'm working for Republic Pictures. I say, working. I mean, I'm collecting a pay check regularly. I finished a picture a couple of weeks ago. They called it 'Sidewalks of New York.' I thought that was a terrible title.

"They changed it to 'King of the Newsboys.' I don't like that, either.

"As soon as my contract runs out I'm going back to New York. I've been going back to New York every Monday morning for the last eight years, but this time I mean it. I'm going. I don't know whether anybody will give me an offer to go on the stage, but if I get one, I'll jump at it. I'll leap."

Age Doesn't Count.

It's no fair to tell a lady's age, but Miss S. is one who doesn't care. She was born in London in 1870 and life for her has been one round of excitement ever since.

She lives alone now in a house near the studio. Its a nice house, with three garages including an added starter, because she couldn't get her car out of the original stall. She always was bumping into the house. This was tough on the walls. She's having the scars painted, though, and if anybody wants to buy her house Miss Skipworth will be glad to show it to you and even give you a spot of tea. She serves every afternoon at 4. Sometimes there's nobody there but her and the cat.

At the studio, nobody seems to take her threats to leave seriously. A new picture is in preparation, co-starring her with Polly Moran, and the dope is that Miss Skipworth will remain in Hollywood, hating it aloud, as usual.

Jimmy Is Abashed.

Another unreconstructed Broadwayite here is Jimmy Savo, the internationally famous pantomimist, but he's no rebel. He's trying his hardest to learn the ropes.

"The only trouble," he said, "is that I've been saying nothing at all on the stage all my life, and here they give me a talking part. They've even got me singing."

The tiny Savo, who has made audiences howl the world over with his silent clowning, is playing in Universal's "Reckless Living." He has the part of a horse race tipster who's always broke, because he bets on his own tips.

Savo, who was born in New York, began his stage career as a juggler. That also brought on his greatest disappointment.

"For nearly two years I practiced one of the most difficult juggling tricks there is," he said. "That was to balance one billiard cue on my chin, another on a finger of my left hand and juggle three balls with my other hand.

"It was a hard thing to accomplish. But I finally got it down pat and sprung it on the audience, and they just looked. I never got a sign of a hand for it.

"Then I balanced a feather on my nose—that's the easiest trick any juggler does—and I got a tremendous round of applause."

'Uncle Vanya'

Superlative entertainment was the order of the evening at the King-Smith Playhouse Wednesday night, when "Uncle Vanya," Anton Tchekoff's familiar classic, was presented under the expert guidance of Keinert Wolff, who is making his directorial debut with this group. An international flavor permeated the atmosphere as dainty Chinese maidens dispensed Russian tea in the lobby, and an American cast acquitted themselves admirably in this drama of the intensities of the Russian mood. The Chinese motif was present due to the first night's proceeds having been assigned to the benefit of China's war sufferers.

However, as far as Mr. Wolff was concerned, the play was the thing, and his capacity as a fine director was capably demonstrated in mood, tempo and stage groupings. It is not to be inferred that the excellent actors, who comported themselves so ably, belong to the controversial Gordon Craig school of the uber-marionette, but Mr. Wolff's painstaking care as a teacher is evident and he pulled more than a few strings in professional manner.

To Arthur de Huff, portraying the difficult role of the neuropathic Uncle Vanya, go first honors for assurance and clarity. Sonya, as characterized by Barbara Ann Thompson, was delicate and sincere. Arthur Greenfield, as the professor, and Austine McDonnell, as his distraught and unhappy wife, were convincing portraits. Evelyn Crump has a neat bit as the nurse, Marina. Jack Taylor, Arsenio Calle, Pauline Le Veque and Judith Owen completed the cast.

The single set, exquisitely mounted and effectively lighted, showed no trace of petty economy in its completeness.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

CONCERNING EXCELLENT SERVICE: It has been our long contention that the group of employes in those highly difficult jobs at the Congressional Library Reference Room are among the most obliging and altogether efficient public servants in Washington . . . To a man, they have acquired the pleasant facility of making your requests appear interesting to themselves—which must be a very difficult thing to do with all the requests that pile on them, requests generally hard of fulfillment, sometimes absurd . . .

And while we're patting the Reference Room employes on the back, the Farm Credit Administration people step forward and congratulate their telephone operators on the "splendid service" and take opportunity of chiding some telephone users for not "concentrating." That one should "concentrate" while transacting the fleeting business of saying "Give me number so-and-so" occurs as something new in the fields of the telephone technique. But there are always new frontiers for the mental processes and much to learn in life and of telephoning.

"When making a call, concentrate," says a notice on the subject. "If you are in the midst of a conversation with someone in your office when the thought comes to you to telephone to some other person, either cease your face-to-face conversation, or postpone your telephone call. Similarly, when receiving a call, concentrate," the notice continues. In other words, to put the thing more bluntly, have the number you want on the tip of your tongue, concentrate on it instead of on the number that might hit the jackpot today, or the number of touchdowns your favorite football player made last season, or the number of hits your favorite batter will make this season, or the number of hours before you can go home. By such concentration, the girl who says "number please" will get some idea of the number you want, and the numbers that everyone wants will so be speeded along.

It's an interesting idea to speed up, even more, this already speed-up life . . .

THE MEMBERS of A. G. O. Lodge, No. 2, A. F. G. E., start thinking out loud about the probable effects of the amendment which would require Presidential appointment and Senatorial confirmation of all employes receiving $4,000 per year: "What assurance do employes have that another group, say the $2,400-a-year group, will not be the next target of attack? It may be possible that eventually even the jobs paying $1,200 per year must receive political indorsement if such a proposal is enacted into law." Which isn't far-fetched thinking, by any means.

STANLEY W. CROSTHWAIT, a leader in the I. D. R. A., makes known his attitude on how to keep happy though working: "How many of us have the attitude that our employment in the Interior Department is only a means of supplying us with a livelihood? Did you ever stop to think that we spend more than a third of our time at work? Why should we not make work a pleasure instead of a task? Realizing that work becomes a task unless we can get some pleasure out of it and realizing that it is interesting and a source of enjoyment when we are working with persons we really know, the I. D. R. A. provides the means whereby we may learn to know better not only the persons employed in our divisions and bureaus, but those employed in other bureaus." The theme is elaborated on in the forthcoming issue of the I. D. R. A. News.

'Elizabeth'

Due to the needless restlessness and extreme discourtesy of the audience gathered to witness Maxwell Anderson's stately drama in blank verse, "Elizabeth The Queen," as presented by the Community Center Department in Roosevelt High School last evening, the effect of director Forney Reese's craftmanship and the work of the entire cast was somewhat marred.

For those who do not appreciate the majesty of Mr. Anderson's poetry, or the efforts of those who labored for its successful initial amateur presentation, it might seem charitable to keep silence for the benefit of many who enjoy a real play on their theater menu.

The production, which treats of the time in Elizabeth's life when her love for Lord Essex almost overcomes her desire to retain her sovereignty, was cast with Anne Ives in the leading role, which leaves little more that could be said. Miss Ives' performance, as the lovelorn, yet oft despotic, Queen was excellent, and would send many a cocksure professional back to drama school for another semester. Her shading of lines and points seldom missed, showed finesse, and not to mention the fine makeup would be traitorous.

The Queen's fool was absorbed entirely and played beautifully by Hugh Smythe, a sterling performer remembered for good work in past productions. William Draper characterized Sir Frances Bacon with sincerity and the closest approach of any to the meter in the lines, barring Miss Ives. George Miller contributed a convincing Lord Cecil, and J. Francis Buckley a studied Essex. Mr. Reese, in addition to his direction, donned grease paint for an effective playing of Lord Burleigh. Others in the cast playing creditably were Charles Grunwell, as Capt. Armin, and Mrs. Evelyn Fuqua as Penelope Gray, lady in waiting to the Queen.

The settings and lighting were achieved effectively by the always dependable Harold Snyder, of the Community Center Department.

Man, Woman Indicted for 2d Degree Murder

D. C. Grand Jury Accuses Spinster, 60, of Larceny After Trust.

In a report to Justice Jesse C. Adkins in District Court yesterday the District grand jury accused a man and a woman of second-degree murder and alleged that a 60-year-old spinster had obtained $1,131 from a Washington woman through "larceny after trust."

Alma McConnell, colored, 27, was accused of beating William B. Rudy, white, 62, over the head with a brick last December. He was injured fatally. Police said that Rudy went to the woman's home late at night and that an argument ensued.

In another second-degree case, George Jackson, colored, 32, was charged with shooting Marion Brackett, colored, 32, last January. Police ascribed the shooting to jealousy.

Miss Elzina Howell, 60, charged with larceny after trust, is alleged to have obtained $1,131 from Katherine Kilpatrick, 507 Third street northwest, by inviting her to invest in a public utility stock. Police said the investor had failed to obtain an accounting of her money.

Daniel W. Kingsbury, former employe in the office of a Congressman, was indicted for forgery. He is alleged to have cashed checks that were signed by a name other than his own on the theory he was a member of Congress.

The jurors charged Thomas W. Blackstock, 42, with assault with a dangerous weapon on his estranged wife, Mrs. Ola Mae Blackstock, 1302 Massachusetts avenue northwest, in her office in the Internal Revenue Building February 14. Police reported the husband grabbed his wife as she walked in the corridor of the building and struck her three times with a hammer, inflicting serious injuries.

Others indicted were William A. Thornton, Clayton W. Gray, James R. Norfolk, William H. Smith, Thomas Parker, John S. Lomax, Leo Roy Harley, housebreaking; Leo Roy Harley, Ralph H. McCalip, assault with a dangerous weapon; Kenneth R. Lockett, John O. Patterson, Edward Wofford, James Walker and Ralph H. McCalip, robbery; James Wilson and Edward N. Cummings, joy-riding; Oliver H. Harris, forgery and uttering.

Daniel Webster Cunningham, James E. Walker, Samuel Adams, Lyman D. Strong and Eugene Monroe, gaming charges; Bing Chong, violation of the Harrison narcotic act.

'Relied Too Long on Pretty Face'

Gungirl Jailed For Assaulting Police With Car

Jersey Judge Unmoved by Isabelle Messmer's Pretty Face.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Newark, N. J., Feb. 24.—Isabelle Messmer, 21-year-old gungirl who has been arrested in Washington several times in the last few years, today was sentenced to an indeterminate term in Clinton Reformatory for assault and battery with an automobile.

"You've relied too long on a pretty face," Judge Richard Hartshorne told her.

Miss Messmer, who was arrested in Washington almost four years ago when she loitered in front of a downtown store, clad in boy's clothing and carrying a pistol, told the court she did not recognize the two men who waited in front of her apartment January 28 as policemen.

"Imagine my surprise," said she, "when I saw two men who looked like gangsters. When they tried to stop me I hopped into my car, stepped on the gas and almost ran over them."

"Utterly incredible," commented Judge Hartshorne.

She pleaded to go back to her home in Indiana.

"Name the man who hopped from your car during the chase," the court asked the gungirl.

"I'm a lady," said Isabelle. "And ladies never tell."

Jurisdiction Lack Stops Mrs. Bilbo's Suit for Alimony

Justice Peyton Gordon in District Court yesterday dismissed, with leave to file an amended complaint, a suit filed by Mrs. Linda R. Bilbo, estranged wife of Senator Theodore R. Balbo, of Mississippi asking that she be awarded a monthly maintenance fee of $100.

Justice Gordon held the local court did not have jurisdiction over the Bilbo matter and that Senatorial immunity would place a hazard against any action he might take.

Thomas Rhodes, attorney for Senator Bilbo asserted last night the leave to amend Mrs. Bilbo's petition was granted to permit a search to see if the Senator owned any property in the District. Associated with Rhodes is William E. Richardson.

The Only Effective Attack.

The growing recognition of syphilis and gonorrhea as something more than the unmentionable wages of sin came to flower a few months ago with the Conference on Venereal Disease sponsored by the Public Health Service here. Now that flower has begun to bear fruit. A Senate committee has approved a bill to appropriate $9,000,000 to combat the two insidious scourges on a national scale.

Aside from budgetary considerations, only the arguments of those few doctors and druggists who make a racket of venereal disease treatment are expected to be raised against the bill. At least, the delegates to the "V. D." conference which comprised outstanding syphilologists, public health experts and social workers, agreed that more money was the first requisite for their program. As only six States spend as much as one cent per capita on venereal disease control, while several spend less than one mill, the request for Federal money has an obvious appeal.

Nine million dollars is a large sum. However, $271,000,000 to be spent over a 13-year period, was the original request. The successful treatment of syphilis involves more than the mere purchase and administration of drugs. First, patients must be induced to submit to the inconveniences and occasional discomforts of treatment; second, they must be persuaded to carry on with treatments for 40 or more weeks even though outward evidences (but not the infection) of the disease may long since have disappeared. Since syphilis runs most rampant among the least intelligent groups, these difficulties can be overcome only at considerable expense.

Efficient and easily accessible clinics must be established; free drugs and competent physicians must be readily available; each case must be carefully checked until the last treatment. It would be pointless for one city or even one State to install such facilities if other States were not similarly equipped. Syphilis knows no borders. Given funds, the competent Public Health Service, working through State and local medical agencies, could for the first time begin the type of concerted, Nation-wide campaign against venereal disease which in other countries, notably in Scandinavia, has proved to be the only effective attack.

An Inauspicious Start.

The decision of the National Bituminous Coal Commission to revoke all minimum-price orders was the result of court action forbidding application of minimum-price schedules to the railroads and certain other groups of consumers until adequate hearings had been held. As explained in the revocation order, it would have worked great hardship if certain groups had been forced to pay higher scheduled prices while others secured at least temporary exemption.

Presumably the commission will again set minimum prices following conclusion of public hearings enabling interested parties to express their views. In the meantime the industry will have to get along as best it can without governmental restrictions upon price cutting. It is an unfortunate beginning for the N. B. C. C. While it does not necessarily indicate that the whole price-fixing program is doomed to failure, it does show what a tremendously complicated task is imposed upon any regulatory agency set up to control prices in a highly competitive basic industry.

In an endeavor to provide better returns for the depressed coal industry, for example, the commission has aroused determined opposition from another deeply depressed regulated industry—the railroads. Every one of its orders, moreover, results in changes in living costs and in production costs which affect some groups adversely and favor others. Thus, in the nature of the case, price fixing begets price maladjustments and leads to demands for an extension of price-fixing systems.

There is no question that the coal industry is really "sick," but it is very doubtful whether any governmental agency is competent to administer successfully the system of price fixing established under the Guffey coal act. With the Senate Commerce Committee reporting favorably upon a proposal to investigate the whole price structure, possibly more light may be thrown upon the problems of the coal industry. In fact, it seems unlikely that Congress would ever have voted to set up elaborate price-fixing machinery for this industry if it had taken time to study the infinite complexity of the price structure and realized the difficulties of devising any formula that would provide a satisfactory substitute for market bids and offers.

Hungary's Debt Offer.

In an official memorandum the Hungarian Minister, John Pelenyi, explains that his country's offer to resume payments to the United States on her post-war relief debt is due solely to a desire to effect a general settlement with all her creditors. Suspension of payments on foreign debts, private and public, was forced by an internal crisis at the end of 1931 and had no relation to defaults of other debtors to the United States.

With her financial position improved, Hungary now desires to wipe the slate clean of undischarged obligations that cannot be met and thus start afresh. Emphasis is placed upon the fact that the debt offer to this country is not made with any thought of seeking special favors. No trade negotiations are in prospect and Hungary is not, furthermore, concerned about the ban imposed by the Johnson act upon loans to defaulting governments.

While the terms on which Hungary offers to settle would represent a very decided scaling down of the amount payable under the debt funding agreement, Hungary received much less favorable treatment originally than other Danubian states with which we subsequently reached agreements. Indeed, as is well known, negotiations carried on over a period of years with war debtors resulted in a bewildering diversity of terms and a variety of concessions that could not be justified on rational grounds as due to differences in capacity to pay. It was anomalous for Hungary to be given the same terms as Great Britain, for instance, while France and particularly Italy were accorded more favored treatment.

Hungary's desire to settle with the United States is commendable and the arguments for revision of the debt agreement along the lines suggested seem quite reasonable under the circumstances. From our viewpoint, the offer is, however, important mainly because of its bearing upon the whole question of revision of the war debts. Some members of Congress may fear that any concession to Hungary might entail a series of similar concessions to others. As pointed out, however, there is no warrant for any such assumption in view of the erratic character of the original debt agreements.

Moreover, Congress cannot indefinitely refuse to consider offers of part payment from debtors, who make them in all sincerity, just because, for political reasons, it fears to reopen the controversial question. Some day the issue will have to be faced and the sooner this is done the better. For the war debts stand as an ignored but persistent threat to international amity, a potential obstruction to freer international trade, and an obstacle to the future resumption of international borrowing by governments.

Federal Aid To The Schools.

The report of the Advisory Committee on Education which President Roosevelt has transmitted to Congress is a document which deserves careful study. Moderate and well-reasoned in its approach to the vital problem of public-school education in this country, the report calls needed attention to a state of affairs which Americans interested in the Nation's future welfare cannot help viewing with concern.

As the committee points out, "glaring inequalities" exist in educational opportunities among the various States, with school facilities in numerous areas "below the minimum necessary for the preservation of democratic institutions." This is particularly true in the rural districts which, with nearly twice as many children in proportion to adults as is found in large cities, are financially less able to take care of their educational needs in adequate fashion.

To cope with this situation, the committee recommends new Federal grants to the States for educational purposes, beginning with a total of $70,000,000 in 1939 and increasing year by year to $199,000,000 by 1944. In addition, the committee suggests that existing Federal grants, amounting to more than $50,000,000 a year, should be continued.

It must be said in the committee's favor that in considering the problem of Federal grants, it has sought to avoid the pitfall that such grants would, sooner or later, lead to Federal control over education. While it would be up to the Federal Government to allocate the grants to States on the basis of their needs, the States would participate in formulating decisions as to how the money should be spent.

However, it is questionable whether, in the long run, the influence of the Federal Government in this respect could be sufficiently restrained. Paying the piper, there is a strong probability that Congress would, sooner or later, try to call the tune. And it is even more questionable whether, at the end of the six-year period suggested by the committee as the limit of the Federal-aid program, the present plan could be dropped or even curtailed. It is much more likely that in this particular, as with respect to other Federal grants, the temporary aid would become permanent with the curve of expenditures steadily rising.

This budgetary aspect looms particularly large at the present time. For as a result of pressures of various kinds and from various groups, each convinced of the rightness of its demands for Federal funds, the budget bids fair to get even more out of kilter than it has been during the past six years. That dismal prospect necessarily becomes the controlling factor in considering any project which calls for large and steadily increasing expenditures by the Federal Government.

Essential To Social Security.

Negligent administration always seems particularly inexcusable when it involves tax funds set aside for relief of the poor. For every dollar that is improperly spent means suffering on the part of some needy person for whom the money was intended. Reports of wholesale misuse of such funds, moreover, tend to discredit in the public mind the system under which the benefits are distributed.

The Social Security Board is fully justified, therefore, in demanding a strict accounting from the Oklahoma State Welfare Commission which is reported to have paid $685,121 in pensions without proper proof of the recipients' eligibility. The board's investigation has brought forth evidence of intolerable carelessness. Unless these abuses can be eliminated, the board will certainly be compelled to deny further old-age benefits to Oklahoma.

There is nothing in the board's procedure to suggest that it is encroaching upon States' rights. No State has any absolute claim upon Federal funds for the benefit of its aged population. In passing the social security act Congress granted the States the privilege of co-operating with the Federal Government for the solution of various problems that the States were not able to solve by themselves. The relationship between the two governmental units is one of partnership. When one partner fails to carry out its part of the agreement, the other is compelled, in fairness to its own taxpayers, to withhold its contribution.

The board can not be too strict in compelling States to maintain efficient and well-managed agencies to administer social security funds to which the Federal Government contributes. To ignore laxity in one instance would be to encourage it in others. And such a policy would lead directly to the disintegration of the social security system in which so much hope for orderly relief of human distress has been placed.

Congressmen who have any faith whatever in the social security system ought to give their hearty indorsement to the board in applying this policy. Thoughtless politicians may be inclined to crack down upon the board for doing its simple duty. But their efforts will undoubtedly be futile. For the great majority of our legislators realize full well that the success of the social security program is dependent upon strict compliance with the law and conservation of available funds for the needy groups Congress intended to aid.

Only A House Vote Needed.

The bill to create a small claims and conciliation division in the District Municipal Court has cleared all but the final hurdle. Passed last year by the Senate, it has now been given unanimous approval by the House District Committee.

Only one important change has been suggested. The House committee would not permit the court to try cases involving the relationship between landlords and tenants. However, such cases might be arbitrated by the court. For the rest, the bill stands as approved by the Senate. In effect, it would eliminate much of the expense and delay which now discourage many citizens from pressing minor claims.

Requiring no additional appropriation or personnel, the small claims court would be limited to cases involving $50 or less. By eliminating technicalities, legal assistance could also be suspended. Further to enhance its accessibility, fees would be reduced to $1, and even this small sum could be waived in necessary cases. The whole emphasis of the court would be sociological rather than legalistic, though rights of trial by jury and of appeal would be carefully preserved. It is expected that most cases would be settled through arbitration.

Small claims courts have been successfully installed by 16 States and a number of large cities. Apparently the plan has the support of all but a handful of citizens in Washington. It is recommended by every consideration of straight dealing and common sense. In these circumstances, prompt passage by the House, which would assuredly convert the bill into law, seems to be indicated.

An astronomer declares that Venus is trying to signal the earth. Even so, we doubt that she has an important message for us. Most likely she is merely trying to ask, "Say, what the devil's the matter down there?"

Billboards In Virginia.

From the Dallas Morning News.

Virginia, which gains considerable profit from tourists and hopes to obtain more, is making a serious attack on the billboard problem. A committee of the House of Delegates recently voted, 13 to 2, to report favorably a bill for regulating, restricting and licensing outdoor advertising on highways outside cities and towns. This measure requires fees of 50 cents to $2 for each sign, the fee varying with the size.

The more progressive tourist States already have in operation statutes that push billboards back several hundred feet from rights of way, eliminate signs entirely in zoned areas and impose a licensing and fee system on all roadside advertising signs. In some States progress has been made also in establishing freeways—strips just beyond the right of way that cannot be used for commercial purposes.

The problem of billboards and other roadside signs is one that Texas will have to solve before a large tourist industry can be developed here. Tourists will not come from other States to Texas to see glaring advertising signs that hide the State's many scenic views and that divert the attention of drivers from the road ahead. On the other hand, reduction of the State's billboard nuisance to a minimum would be a most valuable factor in attracting visitors from distances.

Britain's Burden.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post cartoonist in the issue of February 22 places John Bull upon the German swastika with the legend, "On the spot!" This representation of the British position in international affairs will occasion widely different reactions. I would say "No other nation could be more fully trusted to solve the problems which now confront the British people."

We see in the resignation of Eden another examplification of the "nine old men" idea, where age comes to its own when experimenting youth fails to meet the issues. Eden may have been the white-plumed knight to certain groups in England such as we have in our own country, but seasoned statesmen, such as the English people seem always to have a goodly crop, will not knowingly let Europe be plunged into another war which must jeopardize civilization.

France is frightened out of her wits, and the United States dilly-dallies on the matter of protecting the democracies of the world. This leaves England to bear the brunt of the attack now made against democracy. It ill behooves our own country to look on indifferently, not to say scoffingly, while the British Empire holds the war dogs of Europe and the Far East in check. Our place was in the League of Nations, but we have waited until it has well-nigh disintegrated. Meantime, some of our spitfire elements of the insurrectionary sort have used the public press to vent their antagonisms to England, so that many of our American readers see that country through yellow glasses.

The British face the issue. May the good God who rules the destinies of men give England wisdom and patience to "tread the wine press alone," if she must do it!

Juvenile Vandalism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A news item in your paper a few days ago respecting the vandalism of certain Chevy Chase children has shocked but not surprised me.

Are the children of Washington and vicinity more degenerate than in other cities? I ask this advisedly, because I endured much the same treatment when living in Washington, in a neighborhood where supposedly the residents were respectable, law-abiding people. After appealing to the parents on several occasions and meeting only rebuffs, I was forced to ask for police protection. Thereafter I lived in peace.

This same condition has been reported to me by residents of other localities, and one friend having a lovely home in Chevy Chase told me several years ago she was forced to fence her property, because of annoyance by the neighborhood children.

Can no action be taken against the parents of such young vandals where property such as that reported is destroyed? A strange situation that children can not be held to account for such actions when adults suffer punishment by the law. And can parents not see the threat of a future criminal record when they bring up such children as these?

Is there too much maudlin sentiment about present-day children which makes such conditions possible? MRS. E. B. NEWMAN.

F. D. R. Resign?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: John B. Oakie made a very timely and sensible suggestion in his letter, "Fire Roosevelt," published in your issue of February 6.

However, I don't think it ought to be necessary to "fire" him. I think he ought to be willing to resign and give someone else a chance to clean up the mess he has created.

BERNARD L. HENNING.

Washington, Feb. 14.

Fuehrer And Duce.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a three-hour manifesto of vitriolic rhetoric Adolf Hitler smeared the dignity of the self-governing democracies in an almost unprecedented declaration of demands. Return of her colonies, condemnation of the League of Nations, guaranteed protection for all Teutonic peoples, recognition of the puppet state of Manchukuo, and a concrete denunciation of bolshevism were the significant high lights of der Fuehrer's speech.

The major part of these demands has been enumerated time and again by Hitler in an effort to hypnotize his people's vanity so as to divert their minds from the social and economic despoliation occurring at home. He has sung the old tune of "Bring Back My Colonies to Me, to Me," for the past two or three years, and most everyone knows by this time that he holds no love and kisses for Stalin and his red kimono.

Hitler is out for more than just this, and his present attitude toward John Bull as regards the long-sought colonies is a "feeler," no doubt, in his underlying desire for a United States of Germany. Why do you suppose Il Duce made his little excursion to the Fatherland a few months ago if it wasn't for the purpose of co-operatively planning a means to an end? Hitler stated in his speech before the Reichstag that it was his sincere wish that the co-operation existing between the two fascist governments in Europe would be intensified.

The crisis is grave in England, for, instead of the dignity and respect of this great empire being preserved by the British lion snapping his tail with vengeance, it has been dealt a wicked blow and become more like the domiciled cat who is sometimes chased all around the kitchen by the wee wee littye mouse. The fascist nations abroad are determined in their quest to exploit the weaker peoples on the continent and to appropriate their territorial integrity. They are playing the game of big bluffing bully, for certainly their resources do not substantiate all of their bellowing.

Their insidious effrontery has perturbed both England and France to the heights of humiliation, but they have withstood such in order to ward off a war which would engulf the whole of Europe. The people in England, however, are fed up with present conditions, as was clearly marked in the demonstrations against the resignation of Eden.

Mussolini and Hitler have paraded around for the past few years with chips on their shoulders, daring someone to knock them off, but I am very much afraid if they continue their little antics of inviting trouble, they will awake some fine morning to find themselves with splints on both their arms.

Congressional Tags.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your action in calling attention to the violations of local traffic regulations by members of Congress has been widely approved by the citizens of Washington and the District of Columbia, judging from the comments I have heard on the subject.

Unfortunately, a few individuals are always able to color the actions of an entire group. This is, probably, the present situation, as I doubt that any large proportion of the Senators and Representatives attending the Seventy-fifth Congress desire to place themselves above observance of the local traffic laws.

I have heard much speculation and debate in various gatherings as to whether or not there exists any specific authority in the Federal laws or statutes operating to remove Congressmen from observance of the local laws and regulations, or exempting them from the usual penalties for non-observance. Some claim such exemptions exist, while others assert the situation has been brought about by reluctance on the part of city officials and police to apply penalties to members of Congress for violation of traffic regulations. JEROME B. McKENZIE.

Washington, Feb. 23.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Only last week I witnessed in front of the Medical Building an incident where an officer walked up to a car parked in a "No Parking" zone and took out his little book and started to write out a ticket. He had noted the tag numbers when two well-dressed men touched the officer on the shoulder and called his attention to the Congressional tags on the rear of the auto. The officer, with a look of utter disgust, folded up his little book, put it in his pocket and proceeded on his beat.

Why maintain police?

Also, why not abolish all laws and regulations insofar as they relate to traffic and leave it to a survival of the fittest.

CASUAL OBSERVER.

Washington, Feb. 23.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I want to add a word of approval to the campaign you are conducting in favor of observance of traffic regulations by Congressmen and other higher Government officials. There is no doubt in my mind that the knowledge that a portion of the population is considered immune to the traffic laws creates a cynical disrespect for traffic laws, as well as for other laws. Nor do I doubt that the publicity you are giving to the situation will in the end prove of great benefit.

A poll such as those conducted by the Institute of Public Opinion might develop the fact that voters expect their Congressmen to obey District laws, as well as those in effect at home. INTERESTED.

Washington, Feb. 19.

Washington's Birthday Trade.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On the birthday of Washington, after whom this city is named, we are treated to the edifying spectacle of stores, large and small, open for business as usual. I recall no other city in which this phenomenon, on a national holiday on which reverence should be shown to the father of our country, is to be witnessed.

One would think that on this one day at least, merely as a matter of common decency, the greed of this city's merchants could be curbed. Why select this particular day to hold so-called sales, the cheap atmosphere of which serves further to lower the dignity of a patriotic holiday? DISGUSTED.

Britain's Advice.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There are few wealthy and docile powers left to aid Britain in her hour of need, so it is little wonder that that country takes so unsympathetic a view of American isolationism. Whenever Britain disapproves in vociferous fashion of any American policy, it becomes clear that Britain would thereby stand to lose something. When Britain says: "Bravo, America! Welcome!" we must beware.

England has acquired and kept her colonies through massacre, clever diplomacy, intrigue, subterfuge, opportunism and unflinching pursuit of any campaign she deemed expedient at the moment. They call it their "genius for compromise." The rest of us are too easily awed and made servile by this continual, self-complacent deceit. We may entertain the highest respect and envy for her genius in looking out for herself in international affairs, and try to imitate her in this matter; but we cannot afford to pay any attention—whatever to British advice about our plan of action, since, more times than it is pleasant to remember, this would cooperate too well with interests not our own.

The Post Impressionist

Finnish-ed.

I HAVE sworn off Finnish baths, forever and ever.

Last night was a special occasion. The uncle of my landlord's next-door neighbor, in Takoma Park, came to pay his nephew a visit. Having just completed a new bathhouse in his back yard (which forms an extension of my own), he decided to make a festive occasion of the avuncular visit and give the surrounding little colony of Finns a treat.

The treat was to be a bath in the good "old-country" fashion. All who would come were invited. My landlord, whose own ancient bathhouse on the rear of his lot had long since assumed the grimy appearance of a smokehouse, thought it would be nice to invite his new tenant (that's me) in on the affair.

All innocent and full of daring anyhow, I accepted the hospitable invitation. It would put me right with my landlord, I thought. At any rate—what could I lose?

Armed with a towel and cake of soap as advised, promptly at 8 o'clock I slipped into a pair of sneakers and bathrobe and out my back door.

Perhaps 75 steps from there is the bathhouse, a small, cement-block structure, about the size of a modest henhouse. Thick black smoke belched from the tin chimney. Just inside the door is the "dressing room." 5 by 5, three nails on the wall and a plank bench across one end.

Already my landlord and another Finnish neighbor are inside. I hang my robe on a nail and we all enter the inner door. I am brave for whatever may come, my cake of soap in one hand, a cigarette in the other.

As my landlord opens the inner door to the bathroom proper, a blast of air hot enough to singe the hair off my chest smites me full in the face. I give a heave like a wind-broken horse and look inquiringly at my host. He laughs (I cannot just find the word to describe the quality of the laugh . . .) and pushes me forward. Through vibrating waves of invisible steam I note three planks, like bleachers, ascending to within about 3 feet of the roof. My host prods me to the top shelf.

Gasping, I squat like a hen on the burning board over which has been thrown a handful of water. It takes a certain amount of courage to appear in any degree nonchalant when one's bare buttocks and tender feet are being planked like a filet of halibut.

Before me is a brick-and-concrete furnace, roaring away like one possessed. The heat from it curls the tips of my ears. Perhaps the place is on fire?

A bucket of water is thrust between my scorching legs—what for, I soon find out.

My landlord removes a tin piece from the top of the furnace. Over the booming nest of flames have been placed a bushel or so of smooth stones, each about 6 inches long, like Idaho potatoes. Into this batch of stones he tosses a great canful of water.

A pause, then rises a column of that invisible steam into the air-tight room. Oh——!

I am a small man. I weigh but 121 pounds. I am game—but this is too much. I will die! I am surely about to gag out my last breath to the world.

"What—how—how hot is it now?" I choke, feebly, to anyone who will hear.

"Hot?" echo my inquisitors. "It is not hot yet; no. Only about 160. Wait until it gets hot."

More cans of water on those brimstones. More.

I had asked. "Oughtn't we to drink a lot of water so we can sweat properly, before we go in?" and got only knowing winks and grins for answer.

Now huge blobs of water have begun to roll down my landlord's legs. I can see no higher than that: if I raised my head, my brains begin to boil and bubble. He and the fellow on my right are carrying on a conversation in their strange tongue. Faintly I hear these sounds.

I begin to sweat. Sweat, I said? Is there another word for this running-over process? Every pore is like an open faucet turned on full.

Now I understand why the bucket of water. My Finnish friends sluice their bodies to keep from being boiled alive. I dip and dip frantically, frenziedly, I dash cold water on myself to keep alive. In a vague way I think of lobsters I have eaten.

Faraway hands are rubbing me with something rough. My towel, undoubtedly. I am scourged with twigs and kneaded with knuckles. Somebody is laughing rudely.

I feel my feet on the ground. I am staggering to my back door. I hear my landlord's voice: "Now go to bed. You will feel so pe-aceful."

My wife helps me to bed. I feel something criss-crossing on my poor back. She is playing tit-tat-toe on my parboiled flesh, where the lines of the game remain in white streaks, until she has won with a row of x's.

I awake this morning. I have a headache, my eyes goggle in their sockets, I have a stiff neck and every bone in my body is shrieking "Revenge! Revenge!"

Never, never again. Let the Finns go through their ordeal by fire-and-steam as they will. I shall be content with my lukewarm shower.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

Mr. Hoover's Mistrust.

Kansas City.

FROM TIME TO TIME Mr. J. Edgar Hoover, our modern young King Brady, who can solve a crime by smearing magic chemicals on an echo, has indicated his distrust of city and county police officials in certain parts of the country. Mr. Hoover has his little faults, including an operatic temperament, which prompts him to take applause intended for others, but his suspicions cannot be scoffed away as being due to professional jealousy. Mr. Hoover knows something about the character of many local police organizations.

PEGLER.

He knows, for example, that in Kansas City almost every cop is the protege of some politician and that some of the politicians in the local machine are underworld leaders.

The ruling machine openly plays ball with the underworld, and it is obvious, therefore, that if Mr. Hoover should open his heart to the local police there would be a dangerous chance that the criminals under investigation would be tipped off. That risk is inherent in a system which permits gambling-house magnates to place envoys in the police organization.

• • • •

THE POLICEMAN'S political sponsor may be a racketeer who derives his influence from his ability to turn out the vote for the machine in his zone of operations. He may be a lawyer in the criminal line and attorney for the man under suspicion. The possibilities are many where the underworld is publicly recognized as a legitimate political division and granted certain rights as such.

Suppose Mr. Hoover were investigating the activities of a criminal adherent of the Pendergast machine with a good record of service to the organization. If he were to appeal to the Kansas City police for co-operation he might discover that he had placed his trust in men who were, in effect, lookouts for the crook. Evidence might be destroyed or concealed and witnesses adjusted or sent away.

The great series of kidnapings and other wild crimes in St. Paul, regarding which Homer Cummings remarked that there was something rotten in St. Paul, could not have happened if the local police had been trustworthy. Naturally, therefore, in many places the Department of Justice men have a feeling that they must outwit not only the criminals but the police as well. Hot Springs, Ark., is another stamping ground of criminals, and there are sheriffs in some Missouri counties whom even the police of Kansas City look down upon as unreliable and the partners and protectors of crooks.

IT MAY BE an old story to the residents of those regions, but the country at large does not understand that there are towns and rural districts in the Midwestern crime belt as tough as any of our big cities at their worst.

In Kansas City the frank policy of the machine is to bribe the criminal element to refrain from violent and spectacular misbehavior which tends to make bad publicity and give the town an evil name. The bribe consists of a license to rob the citizens and wayfarers with phony dice and marked cards in gambling joints which pay their dues to the organization. Popular opinion seems to hold that this is the least troublesome solution of a difficult problem, even though it does turn over to the underworld the balance of power in local elections.

Comparatively few communities make any pretense of selecting their policemen for their professional qualifications or of schooling them in their duties. A badge and gun are all that are needed to transform a town loafer, who may have been a bootlegger or may own an interest in a string of slot machines, into a cop or deputy.

Mr. Hoover cannot be blamed for hesitating to confide hard-won information to a local sheriff when there is reason to suspect that the sheriff or some of his deputies may have close business and political relations with the suspects.

Cicero Fulpan On The Farm Bill

Petunia Congressman Explains Ideology Of Program.

By Louis M. Jiggitts,
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Petunia, R. F. D. No. 1.
Jan. 24, 1938.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I have a plan to reorganize the Government. You wrote me last year that you had a plan that would startle everybody, too, but they have been talking about it so long up there I guess they are still looking for something. Do you think I ought to give it to them now? I don't want to go to the trouble to work it out if you don't think it will help them.

I don't want to worry you about little matters when you have so many important things to straighten out, but I think you ought to put an end to Congress as soon as possible and come on home. Hezekiah Hawks and Miss Fannie Blotz are going around poisoning everybody they can and saying your end will soon be here.

Do you understand the farm bill either?

Your old friend,
PINKUS PRATT.

Washington, D. C.
Jan. 26, 1938.

Mr. Pinkus Pratt,
Petunia, R. F. D. No. 1.

Dear Friend Pinkus:

I was delighted to receive a letter from one of my most true, tried and trustworthy friends. You may believe me that a word from a loyal constituent following a strenuous day in the House is like a breath of fresh air after a gas attack.

Of course, I am more interested in solving the many intricate problems that confront our great Nation today than I am in my re-election. As you know, one of the cardinal principles of my life has been the subordination of personal ambition to the interests of my constituents and my country. But to keep the record straight, I would like to know what malicious gossip the two parties you mentioned have been spreading over the district.

I shall be very interested in having your plan to reorganize the Government. You may be sure that Congressmen are always delighted to receive plans and ideas from constituents. We subscribe faithfully to the ideology of democracy.

Assuring you that it is always a pleasure to hear from an old friend, I am

Your friend,
CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Petunia, R. F. D.,
Jan. 29, 1938.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I am glad to know you are going to put my reorganization plan into law, but I think I ought to come to Washington to explain it. I have been reading about some of the leaders up there and I think if you could get them together I could show them how simple my plan is better than I could write it. Could you get Senator Harrison, Speaker Bankhead, Senator Ashurst, Representative Reyburn, Representative Snell, Senator McNary and Senator Borah to meet me? I think it would be well to have the Vice President, too, don't you? We don't have to meet at night, do we? I want to get both Democrats and Republicans together on my plan.

Mrs. Lotta Sizzel, who lives 5 miles down the road, wants to know if you think the farm bill is constitutional, and why?

Hezekiah Hawks and Miss Blotz are saying the recession has lapsed into a depression while you just stood by and let it. They said you were for a farm bill you didn't understand any better than anybody else. How can I answer that?

Your old friend,
PINKUS PRATT.

P. S. What do you mean by ideology?

Washington, D. C.
Jan. 31, 1938.

Mr. Pinkus Pratt,
R. F. D., Petunia.

My dear Mr. Pratt:

I regret that the Congressman has found it necessary to advise with other leaders today on a very important course of action the Govment should take, but I can assure you that he understands that farm bill perfectly. If you are at all confused please do not hesitate to call on this office to explain, and I can assure you that the farm bill is Constitutional. Things are more Constitutional now than they were a few years ago.

I am afraid the Congressman may not find it feasible to insist that the leaders you mentioned meet with you.

I know that the Congressman will regret to learn that Mr. Hawks and Miss Blotz have been going around trying to sabotage him, and I feel sure that he will take appropriate action at the proper time. You may tell them that the Congressman is no more responsible than they are.

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

P. S.—Ideology is just a fancy

CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

name for your belief in a thing; like Bronx Cheer is a fancy name for horse laugh, or buffoonery for horseplay, or condiment for horseradish, or equus caballus for just plain horse. It is used by the intelligentsia to confuse the bourgeois and I am glad to explain it to you.

Petunia, R. F. D. No. 1.
Feb. 2, 1938.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Congressman Fulpan:

Why can't you get the leaders together for me? I want you to have me summoned and fix it so I'll be in contempt if I don't come so my wife can't object. You know I wanted to see the Senators and cherry trees in bloom last year but my wife used the money for new spring clothes and I haven't any this year on account of the recession. So I want you to have them make me come in spite of my wife. And I know they will like my plan, anyhow.

Since you understand the farm bill you might explain it. And I can't find sabotage in my dictionary. Is it another fancy name?

Your old friend,
PINKUS PRATT.

P. S.—I think I understand ideology now. You mean it's just your belief in things about horses.

Washington, D. C.
Feb. 4, 1938.

Mr. Pinkus Pratt,
R. F. D., Petunia.

My dear Mr. Pratt:

I regret to inform you that the Congressman is indisposed today but even if he were in good health I feel sure that he would not find it possible for Democrats and Republicans to agree on government policies. Under our system members of opposite political parties have different ideas of policy and people do not expect them to get together. As they say in England, it just isn't done, it wouldn't be cricket.

Sabotage is not a fancy name. It comes from the French words, sabot, meaning wooden shoe, and age, meaning to kick with.

Assuring you that it has been a great pleasure to answer your important inquiries, and trusting that you will send us your reorganization plan, I am

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

Petunia, R. F. D., No. 1,
Feb. 7, 1938.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I think your secretary must be the one confused this time. Hezekiah Hawks never had a pair of wooden shoes in his life and if he tried to kick, his rheumatism would give him more fits than you did when you didn't give him the Detour postoffice.

I told Mrs. Sizzel what you said about England when she dropped in today and she says she has been wondering about that understanding with England and it looks mighty funny you can't do something because the English don't do it. She said she had about decided to support you this summer in spite of you not getting a farm bill last year as she wrote you, but that if you are entering any private foreign agreements she guessed she would change her mind.

What are they going to do about more relief money? And you haven't explained the farm bill, either.

Your old friend,
PINKUS PRATT.

P. S.—What is this in the papers about new Jefferson nickels?

Washington, D. C.
Feb. 9, 1938.

Mr. Pinkus Pratt,
R. F. D., Petunia.

My dear Mr. Pratt:

The Congressman is busily engaged in advising the other leaders about relief today, and I know you will be delighted to know that he has decided it is time to prime the pump again. The Congressman is always solicitous for the welfare of his constituents, and feels that circumstances this year call for more relief for the deserving.

I am glad to explain the farm bill to you. It is designed to raise farm prices to the level of 1909 to 1914. If you don't get these prices for your crops you can write the Congressman and ask him why, and I am certain he will be glad to tell you why.

The farm bill is also democratic, as it protects the minority. It is only compulsory if two-thirds of the farmers vote for control. The other third will then have themselves protected whether they want to or not. It also enables the Secretary of Agriculture to outsmart the grasshopper and the boll weevil and gives him a big advantage over the weather. Farm prices will be on a sliding scale, going up and down in parity with other people's income. Hereafter staple crops must be stable.

Please inform Mrs. Sizzel that the Congressman emphatically denies he has a private understanding with England or any other country. He has made a rule to be friendly with everybody.

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

P. S.—They are going to put nickels with Jefferson's picture on them in circulation.

Petunia, R. F. D. No. 1.
Feb. 12, 1938.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I saw Slim Slack in Petunia this morning and we got to talking about you working on the relief matter. He said it looks like if you have to prime the pump so much you ought to see what's wrong with the pump. I told him last year that when priming didn't do any good I took my pump apart and found it full of waste. The waste had been soaking up a lot of the priming water.

Mrs. Sizzel will be all right this summer now.

Are you going to fix it for me to come to Washington soon?

Your old friend,
PINKUS PRATT.

P. S.—Mr. Slack says it would be a good thing if they would put some of Jefferson's ideas back in circulation, too.

Washington, D. C.
Feb. 15, 1938.

Mr. Pinkus Pratt,
R. F. D., Petunia.

My dear Mr. Pratt:

I am sure that the Congressman will be delighted to know that your pump is now in good order and that Mrs. Sizzel will be all right by summer, too.

I regret to inform you that the Congressman will not be in a position to have you called before a special committee. The Government is trying to economize in every way and the Congressman would not feel like insisting upon violating this policy. I feel sure that he would be very reluctant to cause you to be in contempt of Congress. However, I know that he will be very pleased to receive any suggestions you have by mail.

Trusting that we may have your excellent advice, I am

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

Petunia, R. F. D. No. 1,
Feb. 17, 1938.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Congressman Fulpan:

It's beginning to look like I am not going to get to Washington. I don't want you to break any Government policy for me, but it does seem funny that I want to come there so much and can't and a lot of others don't want to come there and have to.

I don't feel like writing my plan, as it would take too long, but I have a fine scheme of placing all the Congressmen and Government officials on a sliding pay scale so that their income will go up and down with the farmers' income, like you fixed it in the farm bill for the farmers' income to go up and down with other people's. What do you think of this?

Your old friend,
PINKUS PRATT.

P. S.—What is all the rumpus about the biggest cheeses in the Senate?

Washington, D. C.
Feb. 19, 1938.

Mr. Pinkus Pratt,
R. F. D., Petunia.

My dear Mr. Pratt:

Your very interesting letter arrived during the absence of the Congressman. I regret to inform you that I am fearful that the Congressman will not be enthusiastic over your suggestion. While he is anxious to raise the farmers' income, he has stated that he is satisfied with his present salary, and would prefer to sacrifice himself for the welfare of his constituents.

Assuring you that it has been a great pleasure to have your good advice, I am

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

P. S.—I am afraid you are confused again. They were talking about where the biggest cheeses are, New York or Wisconsin. There are no cheeses in Congress, except in the House and Senate restaurants.

Petunia, R. F. D.,
Feb. 22, 1938.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I guess it's no use. My wife told me today that I ought to stop trying to reorganize the Government and do a little reorganization of the farm for spring plowing. My wife doesn't understand government, but I think it's best to humor her. As you know, Editor Cy Skribbels, of the Verbena County Weekly Bugle and Gazette, has been trying to get people interested in government. When he wrote an editorial the other day saying it is our Government and when we think of the Government we ought to think of ourselves my wife said she just couldn't think of herself being $88,000,000,000 in debt. She said if I would think more of the farm and less of the Government it would be better for both of them. And rather than argue about it, I am

Your old friend,
PINKUS PRATT.

P. S.—Mr. Hawks says that's what you think.

Washington, D. C.
Feb. 24, 1938.

Mr. Pinkus Pratt,
R. F. D., Petunia.

My dear Mr. Pratt:

In the Congressman's absence I can assure you that he will read your fine letter with the greatest interest.

Assuring you that it is always a pleasure to hear from a constituent, I am

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

Off the Record

By Ed Reed

"Are you sure you still care for me as much as you used to, Dear?"

Free Health

By Jerry Voorhis,
Member, House of Representatives.

Tax-Supported Medicine.

IT HAS REQUIRED two national calamities—the war and the depression—to awaken the American public to the alarming state of public health in this country and the inadequacy of established medical machinery to meet its demands. Mr. Louis J. Reed, formerly a member of the research staff of the Committee on Costs of Medical Care, has attempted not only to analyze the need for the extension of medical service to meet decent requirements and to point out possible means for doing so, but is concerned with the problems which confront both the doctor and the patient in seeking a mutually beneficial solution.

• • • •

AT THE HEART of the matter is the tradition of the "country doctor" who, in a simple economic unit, was able to serve his fellow citizens unselfishly and well. Simply stated, his code was "From each according to his ability; to each according to his need." That his method is not possible in the more complex society of today is apparent even without the startling revelations of public health surveys. Nor could the medical profession itself return to the days when a bag of pills and a thermometer were adequate equipment. For medical science, along with industry, has advanced immeasurably in skill and equipment during the last 30 years and, with this new body of knowledge, specialization is not only desirable but necessary.

To clarify the situation, then, Mr. Reed considers the matter from the producer-consumer standpoint; with the medical profession as the "producer" and the general public as the "consumer." And here we encounter a familiar problem: An "overcrowded profession" on the one hand and a desperate need for the services of that profession on the other. "Do people . . . receive all those medical services which at the present stage of medical knowledge are considered necessary for the prevention and cure of disease and the attainment of the fullest possible mental and physical efficiency? They do not," says the author, and continues: "Of the 1,400,000 deaths annually, at least 250,000 are from preventable causes."

CONCERTED AND ENLIGHTENED public action has brought results. The death rate from tuberculosis, for instance, has been cut by 65 per cent since 1900. In Sweden, where proper public measures have been instituted to control syphilis, "the rate now is only one-tenth of the rate 15 years ago. If the rate for Sweden were applied to the whole population of the United States, we would have annually only 8,620 cases. Compare this with Public Health Service estimates of 720,000." And he adds, significantly, "The secret of the success of these countries is that they have made treatment free and compulsory." The economy of such a program from the preventive standpoint is in striking contrast to the general practice of taking care of syphilitics "more expensively, as patients in mental institutions."

Thus, with statistics and example, Mr. Reed exposes the almost unlimited "consumer demand" for more medical service. And here the lack of "purchasing power" is again the obstacle: an obstacle dependent not only upon inadequate income within our largest economic groups, but also definitely influenced by the emergency character of sudden and expensive illness in the family unit. And if this is significant from the standpoint of the family, it is even more so from that of society as a whole. The depression, for instance, found the income of privately financed institutions serving the dependent and low-income group cut materially at a time when the need for their services was greatest. At the same time, the medical profession found itself unable, financially, to continue to meet the demand for free service when its own income had dwindled to a fraction of its former figure.

Mr. Reed's plea is for abundance of medical attention. This, he contends, is what the Nation needs, what the sick people need—and what the doctors need.

AND HERE we encounter the problem of the "producer"—the medical profession. Competent statistics show that the young doctor must wait about seven years before his practice produces adequate income. This, in addition to an expensive education, constitutes a formidable obstacle from the standpoint of entering the profession. At the same time, the "sliding scale" whereby established doctors had sought to balance their income by exacting higher fees from higher-income patients to balance free service to indigents no longer served. Only one solution was possible. The "Government stepped in," thus relieving not only the health problem of the patient, but the financial problem of the doctor.

What is the ultimate answer? Voluntary health insurance, whereby, for specified amounts, employed individuals were able to assure a measure of security for themselves, was a beginning. Compulsory health insurance in larger and industrial groups offered extended service. But the answer was not yet complete. "Charity" must temporarily provide for the rest, but this is both expensive and devitalizing.

Mr. Reed conceives the Nation's interest in its citizens' health as paramount. And so he concludes that the ultimate solution will be found in a system which makes "care available to the entire population, organized along the lines of the public education system, supported from general government revenues, and with the service given by full-time salaried physicians, dentists and nurses in the employment of Government-controlled hospitals and clinics." Mr. Reed is realist enough to say that such a system cannot come quickly. He is courageous enough to say that, in his opinion, it offers the only ultimate answer.

• • • •

COMPULSORY HEALTH INSURANCE, devised along the lines of other social security measures, he believes to be the answer in industrial States, while "the extension of general tax-supported services is the only feasible course of action in the agricultural States." Administration should be in the hands of a State health insurance commission, with local administration vested in city or county committees. Thus, he believes, will be solved not only the public's problem, but the physician will be enabled to secure the economic organization of medicine and, at the same time, enable himself to serve effectively according to the time-honored ethics of his profession.

Mr. Reed sees the hospital as the "natural medical workshop, the natural nucleus of group practice." And he concludes: "The medical profession is not like certain other groups. It considers that the profession has a definite responsibility toward the public, that the profession is the guardian of the people's health. If the analysis in these pages is correct, the profession should foster change, not oppose it."

"HEALTH INSURANCE," by Louis D. Reed. (Harper, $3.)

Pax Tobenkini

By

Claude O. Witze.

NEWSPAPER CORRESPONDENTS, of late, have been writing a lot of books. Fortunately, few of them indulge in wishful thinking but Mr. Tobenkin would appear to have left himself vulnerable to the charge. It is interesting to be an "International Inquiring Reporter" and visit 15 countries asking people how they feel about war, but not many of us who have been reading the headlines will take the results seriously. "The Peoples Want Peace." Yes, they have always wanted peace; they wanted it in 1914, but an archduke happened to get shot in Serajevo.

There is no denying that peace organizations the world over are working hard and this survey proves it. Mr. Tobenkin says that he was trying to find how the man in the street reacted to the idea of fighting in trenches, but it would seem that he weakened his story with too many sidetrips into chancelleries where he collected some poppycock that ought to be taken with a torpedoful of salt.

The author has great respect for the Scandinavians, who have little to fight about anyhow, and believes that underground movements in fascist countries will prove strong enough to halt Mars in his tracks when the time comes. The adventures in Ethiopia, Spain and China have been carried out in spite of what the people told Elias Tobenkin.

"THE PEOPLES WANT PEACE," by Elias Tobenkin. (Putnam's, $2.75.)

Tom McCarthy

"It'll Be Nice To Go South."

BECAUSE they were hard-boiled newspapermen they laughed like the dickens when the guy came up to them and hit them up for a meal.

Because it wasn't a very high class joint, the guy in the threadbare blue overcoat had been able to get past the door. But the newspapermen just laughed when he hit them up for a meal.

McCARTHY.

"G'wan," one of the newspapermen said, "you've got more money in your pocket than I have."

The bum didn't say anything at first. He just stood there looking at the newspaperman . . . and he came close to sneering. His dirty fingers kept rubbing up and down on the lapel of his blue coat.

His voice didn't come out in pretty shape when he did talk. He just kept looking, but he made his voice hard.

"You're wrong as hell," he said. And the newspapermen were sort of surprised. Because they could see then that the guy wasn't drunk and that he wasn't fooling.

"I haven't got any money," he said, "and I am hungry." His accent was Western, and his diction was sloppy, but he gave a sort of matter-of-fact dignity to the words. And he ran his long fingers over his stubbled face.

One of the newspapermen gave him a quarter then, and he started out the door. With the door half open he changed his mind and came back to the bar. The newspapermen winked.

"This guy was being open about it anyway," they thought. And they chuckled when he pulled his long body up on the bar chair. They stopped smiling when he ordered a glass of milk. And then one of them, who had probably drunk too much, wanted to give the bum some more money. But he refused it.

"This'll hold me for a while," he said. He smiled when he said it, and his teeth were very dark.

• • • •

THE NEWSPAPERMEN asked the bum to come over and sit down in the booth. He nodded and came over with his glass of milk in his hand.

"Where you goin'?" one of them asked.

"No place," the tall guy in the threadbare coat said. "I'm not goin' any place that matters. I'm goin' to duck into a flophouse before they close up at 9. But outside of that I'm not headin' any place, particular."

"You been here long?" one of the newspapermen wanted to know.

"Just passin' through," the gaunt guy said. "Just passin' through." He took off his old felt hat for the first time and showed a head of dirty gray hair.

"What're you doin' here?" another newspaperman wanted to know.

The guy sipped some more of the milk and came up from the glass with a little film of white around his lips.

"I'm dying," he said.

None of them said anything for a while, because they thought maybe he was kidding. Later, they thought maybe he was crazy, but even then it didn't make things seem right.

"I've got consumption," the guy said. And then everybody remembered he'd coughed once or twice. And they all looked at his hands . . . all bone and very little flesh. And they looked at his dirty face. They could see that he wasn't drunk, or kidding.

He told them that he came from Oklahoma. He said that he'd worked on road jobs, and that he'd been a shovel operator and crane operator. He said that he got good money in those jobs. But then one day he knew that he was too sick to work any more. Maybe it was fever that made him do what he did. Maybe it wasn't, or maybe it was just his story. He said that he just "lit out."

• • • •

"I'M DYING," he said. "And I know it. I haven't anybody. So I'm keepin' ahead of it."

After that they had trouble, for a while, following him. He wasn't clear. And really it didn't add up all the way, but there was an idea there. He had the idea that death was chasing him. He felt he had to keep on the move. He had to keep ahead of it.

It sounded sort of fantastic, sitting in a low joint with a nickel phonograph blaring out the "Dipsy Doodle." And it seemed sort of ridiculous that death should be chasing a tall, lank guy in a threadbare blue overcoat who had to beg a dime or a quarter to eat. It seemed that way . . . but it wasn't.

Nobody said very much for a time. They just ordered the guy another milk and watched him sip it. Then one of them asked him how he lived.

"I get some fun," he said. "I get glasses of milk. When I go to the flophouse I get sleep. When I bum a quarter I get food. When I eat I can feel it all the way down . . . and I get to feeling sleepy and good. And I got lots of things to think about.

"When I get dirty maybe I go that way for a while. But when I find a gas station with a nice guy on the pumps and he lets me wash up in the rest room, I got something else to be happy for. And all those little things make me feel good.

"I find a place out of the wind and that's good. I find a radiator grill on the sidewalk to warm my feet and that's good. I string all those little things out and feel fine . . . when I get them. In between I don't think much. I keep so busy livin', I forget I'm dying."

He'd broken up his speech by coughing a little, and when he got through there were tears around his eyes from leaning over, and coughing too hard.

"I got to go," he said. "They'll close the flophouse at 9, and I don't want to be out. Tomorrow maybe I'll go South. It'll be nice to go South."

Mother Relates How Mate Died In Rent Debate

Cab-Driver's Wife Tells Court Landlord Fired Over Lockout.

A slightly-built mother of five children yesterday in District Court told how her cab-driving husband, Ray E. Childress, 35, allegedly was shot to death by Donald R. Stanton when he sought to batter down a barricade erected to keep the family from occupying a small apartment at 69 New York avenue northeast because of nonpayment of rent.

Mrs. Childress asserted "Stanton had a gun in his hand when I reached the door. He fired one shot and my husband reached down and picked up a board and hit him on the arm."

Shortly after that the dimunitive Mrs. Childress broke down and a short recess was declared while she composed herself. She said Stanton, who is on trial for the slaying of her husband, boarded up the apartment while she was in the rear of the place, preparing a meal.

As Childress approached on his return from work, she said, there was an altercation and when Childress began to tear away the boarding, the men fought. Previously, it was testified, both men had gone to a police station where their troubles were aired and where they were told to go home and forget it.

"Stanton fired again, then twice or three times more, and I looked at my husband," Mrs. Childress said. "His hands were up in the air and his eyes were glassy—like." After taking a drink of water she described how he fell, partly on the floor and partly on the bed.

After the shooting Stanton called the police and awaited their arrival.

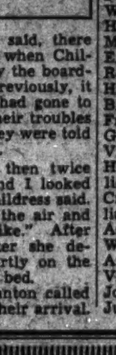
Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

The Trapped Trapper.

Like every other good thing in life and in bridge, "trapping" the opponents can be carried to excess. There are times when a player's holding in the opponents' suit is so strong that he can be virtually certain that the opponents will not select that suit as trump. East, in the hand shown below, thought he was "trapping," but found at the end that he himself had fallen into a net.

West, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.
Match-point duplicate.



The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	1 ◇	Pass	2 ♡
Pass	2 N T	Pass	4 ♡
Pass	Pass	Double	Pass
Pass	Pass

Lest it be thought that I approve of everyone's bidding except East's I hasten to state that South's jump takeout and later leap to six hearts were nothing but sheer "stabs." Admittedly South had a hard hand to bid. The extreme freakiness demanded a slam bidding device such as asking bids to investigate North's club holding, the danger spot. But North-South were not using artificial bids and thus, South, feeling that he could never find out the precise honor make-up of North's diamond bid, determined to gamble. If it happened that there were two club tricks off the hand, perhaps a fortunate opening lead would save him. That is exactly what happened.

Obviously, the only lead to defeat six hearts was a club, and West did not make that good guess. Instead, he opened his singleton diamond. Declarer won with a trump, and led a low spade away from the King. East, visualizing a singleton Queen in declarer's hand, hopped up with the Ace, and after that South could take the rest of the tricks, getting one discard on the established spade King and one on a high diamond.

When North opened the bidding with one diamond, East should have realized that there was virtually no chance that the opponents would end up in a diamond contract. Hence, East should have taken the opportunity to enter the bidding at the one level.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

ARMY AND NAVY GLAMOUR.

As every American knows, the American Army and Navy are subordinate to civilian power . . . That sounds swell in the Constitution; but in Washington life it doesn't really work out that way.

Mrs. Woodring . . . rows of soldiers

• • • •

Actually, a Congressman is elated at lunching with a Colonel, and when a Senator dines with a General or an Admiral you can practically hear him purr.

• • • •

This is not because of any militarist dominance; it is merely, I suspect, a hangover from the barbish glamour which surrounds everything connected with the Army or Navy. Uniforms, guns, battles, heroes!

"—in theory the civilian is tops"

Fortunately, American admirals and generals can take this hero-worship in their stride. They are a magnificent corps of men, imbued with both tradition and democracy, rigidly selected, superbly trained and fortified with security and tenure which makes an elected official seem an evanescent shadow.

• • • •

An officer who survives West Point or Annapolis is darned near Phi Beta Kappa quality as a student . . . At the Army industrial college or other service and staff schools he receives the equivalent of a master's degree.

• • • •

At the War College he is tinctured in the metaphysics of national defense, and emerges with what's virtually a doctor's degree . . . (Tut, tut; I seem a litle tinctured by that hero-worship myself.)

• • • •

By the time he's 40, the Army or Navy officer has been around, seen service in strange places, China or Europe, Hawaii or the Canal, and is quite a polished man of the world; and his pay is still that of a high-class clerk.

• • • •

His furniture has been moved a dozen times across continents and oceans; he cannot afford rare wines and whiskeys, nor much life insurance; but his place in the social scheme is secure, though not so velvety as civilians imagine.

"—but in practice—well—"

Civilians are vastly impressed at the Gen. Craig or Woodring or Swanson receptions by the rows of soldiers and sailors standing around; by the uniforms of the officers, when they wear 'em; and the word "general" rolls off a civilian's tongue unctuously, like the word "bishop" off a religious lady's. And they in turn treat a member of the Army and Navy Committees of Congress as if he were at least a field marshal.

• • • •

So it is not surprising that in naval and military affairs the say-so of a general or an admiral carries tremendous weight, with a cabinet officer who will be a picture on an anteroom wall in a year or two, or with a lawmaker who will be home practicing law again soon.

Gen. Craig . . . hero worship?

• • • •

Rich men's sons do not often go into the Army; the life is too tough, the discipline too onerous . . . And oddly enough, ranking American officers tend to become professorial rather than militaristic; and after years of tucking enlisted men in bed they even become ultra-fatherly.

• • • •

So long as a member of Congress gets a bigger thrill from an Army party at Fort Myer than from a foreign embassy reception, Army influence and Navy glamour will cut a wide swathe on the Hill.

If the Navy experts will protect the lawmakers from appropriating $85,000,000 for too many $40,000,000 battleships which a $100,000 airplane can sink, let the lid remain off on hero-worship.

First results in the National Symphony Orchestra's campaign to raise a $103,000 sustaining fund will be announced tomorrow at the Carlton Hotel, when 200 leaders in the drive make reports at a luncheon scheduled for 12:30 p. m.

L. Corrin Strong, general chairman of the campaign, will preside. The reports will cover work of the first two days on the part of more than 800 workers.

More than 40 business, scientific, musical and artistic clubs and associations are co-operating in the campaign, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. Eugene Byrnes, co-chairman with Mrs. Reeve Lewis of the associations' committee.

Japanese Have Not Conquered Manchuria, Can't Defeat China, Father-Son Banquet Told

Jack Gee provided piano accompaniment while fathers and sons at the Central High School father and son banquet burst into song.

Mothers waited on the table while fathers and sons dined in state last night at the first fathers-and-son banquet to be held at Central High School.

Sixty guests listened to speeches and musical solos—and the fathers forgot a little of their austerity and the sons a little of their dignity in gathering 'round a piano to sing.

Principal speaker was Dr. William C. Johnstone, jr., assistant professor of political science at the George Washington University, who talked on "The Stakes of War in the Far East."

"If the war continues as between China and Japan—without interference—I don't believe the Japanese can make good their conquest," said Dr. Johnstone, who spent several months in China in 1934.

Dr. Johnstone pointed out that the Japanese have never fully conquered Manchuria, except for the centers of population and the areas along railroad lines. "The longer the war endures, the more likely are the Japanese to crack before a united China," Dr. Johnstone observed. The invaders have failed even to break up or completely defeat a single Chinese army, he said.

"The United States can do nothing now," he declared. "When China and Japan are so exhausted that elements on both sides will be ready to quit, then we should step in—as we did after the Russo-Japanese war—and try to arrange a general international conference to settle the Far Eastern question."

Dr. Harvey Smith, assistant superintendent of schools; Lawrence Hoover, principal of Central High School, and Jay McCathran, representing the fathers, were among the speakers. Anderson Tackett, treasurer of the P.-T. A., was toastmaster.

Seniors who took part in the banquet ceremonies were Frank Mervine, Jack Gee and Wilfred Milofsky, soloists; William Bayliss, who gave the invocation, and Rodney McCathran.

Mrs. Prentiss D. Sale, jr., president of the Parent-Teacher Association, was in charge of arrangements. Assisting the mothers were two Girl Reserves, Gere Dell Sale and Virginia Rice.

Congress Urged To Finance D.C. Relief Inquiry

Thomas Wants Impartial Expert Hired to Make Thorough Study.

A proposal that the Senate and House Appropriations Committees or District sub-committee hire an impartial expert to conduct the local relief investigation was made yesterday by Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma.

Thomas said he would recommend to the Senate sub-committee that the committees retain control of the inquiry but that the actual investigation be made at once by a qualified authority, probably with the assistance of workers from the WPA and the Social Security Administration.

He said the question of whether $75 or $100 a month should be allowed any single family by the public assistance division also will be referred to the investigators. The House fixed a limit at $75, and the welfare department asked the Senate that it be raised to $100.

Inquiry Urged at Once.

Thomas emphasized that he wanted the inquiry made at once so that additional funds may be carried in the last deficiency appropriations bill if they are found to be needed.

"What I want are the facts on the relief needs here," he said. "We have heard so much conflicting testimony that I don't know what the truth is and I haven't the time or the facilities to make an investigation myself."

Thomas said the sub-committee will meet probably next Tuesday to mark up the District supply bill and that it will be reported shortly thereafter, probably during the week.

No Fight Expected.

He said he did not anticipate any serious differences between the House and the Senate in conference.

Yesterday the sub-committee listened to various requests for community improvements in colored residential sections. Most of the items, however, have not been passed upon by the Commissioners or the Budget Bureau, Thomas pointed out, and consequently cannot be added to the District bill.

Among the witnesses heard were: Woolsey W. Hall, of Central Northwest Citizens Association; Charles M. Thomas, president of the Federation of Civic Associations; Elzie S. Hoffman, president of the Barry Farm Citizens Association; Edgar G. Brown, of the United Government Employes; H. D. Woodson, of the Northeast Boundary Citizens Association; Mrs. Daniel Murray and Mrs. West Hamilton.

Thief's Climb Sets 'High' in Ingenuity

A new high—about 20 feet—in thieves' ingenuity was reported to police last night.

The telephone company reported that someone had climbed 20 feet up a telephone pole Monday and laboriously removed 33 feet of heavy cable in an alley between N and O and Sixth and Seventh streets northwest. Phone service was interrupted only temporarily.

College Head Scores Laxity In Education

Delivering a biting attack on the curriculum and philosophy of the average American college and university, Dr. Stringfellow Barr, president of St. John's College, last night called for a return of higher education to the fundamental aim of cultivating "intellectual discipline."

"Our typical liberal arts college has simply become a place where students have a great deal of liberty," the youthful educator asserted. "Few college presidents or deans could say today exactly what they mean by liberal arts."

Young men, according to Dr. Barr, instinctively seek discipline. Denied it in the classroom, "they turn to extra-curricular activities, especially athletics.

"Then the faculty try to make their courses equally attractive and offer instruction in journalism, coaching or financial management. These things prove dull in the classroom, so now I believe the student has taken to drink. Perhaps that will be incorporated in the curriculum."

"Faculty members have become just as dull as these new subjects," Dr. Barr said. "Highly trained and badly educated specialists have developed a terminology which makes your mouth feel as if it were full of felt—you can't swallow and you can't spit it out."

Dr. Barr spoke at a dinner meeting of the education committee of the American Association of University Women.

Bandit Suspect Is Blamed for Robbery Attack

Police Arrest Purse Snatcher, Finds He Fits Description.

Police last night believed they had captured the colored bandit who beat and robbed Mrs. Kathryn Goodwin, 39, of the Jefferson Apartments, Tuesday night.

A colored man answering the description of the robber who assaulted Mrs. Goodwin in the 1100 block of Sixteenth street, beat her unconscious and fled with $25, was arrested shortly before midnight.

With him was captured another colored man. Officers said they were detained because of an attempted pocketbook snatching at Twenty-ninth and M streets northwest.

Their intended victim, Mrs. Myrtle Baker, of 440 Fourth street northeast, was driving her automobile when she stopped at a signal light at the Georgetown intersection. A man leaped on the running board and snatched at her purse. She clutched it tight, and threw the car into gear. The man jumped into a car which had drawn alongside and sped away. Mrs. Baker jotted down their license number and gave it to police.

Lieut. Arthur Belt and Detectives Elmer Dahlstrom and John Meschkoff spotted the car and arrested the occupants.

Rep. Boren Scores Businessmen Lacking Confidence in Future

Business should have confidence in the Administration and in its own future, Representative Lyle H. Boren, of Oklahoma, told members of the Columbia Heights Businessmen's Association at their thirteenth annual dinner and dance at the Shoreham Hotel last night.

"Some business groups want something for nothing," said Boren, who was the guest speaker of the evening.

"They are afraid of the ghost of the national debt. But they must be willing to live and let live and have confidence in the future. Businessmen must be forward looking, and plan for tomorrow, not harbor fears of yesterday carried forth into tomorrow."

About 250 members and their wives attended the affair. George A. Ford, president of the association, introduced the officers who serve with him. They were W. T. Gary, vice president; H. D. Gordon, second vice president; Mrs. Velma B. Merriam, third vice president and H. C. Phillips, secretary-treasurer.

Gordon Hittenmark, of the National Broadcasting Co., was master of ceremonies. Theodore S. Grape, president of the Federation of Businessmen's Associations, spoke briefly. W. R. Schumucker served as song leader and Miss Ethel Lynch as pianist.

The dinner committee included Wayne C. Stone, general chairman; Carl H. Donch, vice chairman; Ferguson Gemeny, and James Root, also vice chairmen.

Hearings End, Choice of D.C. Tax Unsolved

Committees to Thresh Out Problem; Data Still Lacking.

Witnesses Unanimous in Denouncing Business Privilege Levy.

Upon concluding two weeks of intermittent public hearings on the District tax bill yesterday the House subcommittee on fiscal relations appeared as sharply divided as at the beginning as to the relative merits of the business privilege and income levies.

Proponents of the income tax were the only members who got any satisfaction out of the hearing, as the business privilege tax was almost unanimously denounced by witnesses.

"Opponents of the business privilege tax seem to have made out a good case for the income tax," observed Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, author of the latter proposal.

Chairman Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, who has defended the business privilege levy against all attacks, had nothing to say other than that the subcommittee will meet shortly and will consider suggested amendments to the business tax.

Data on Deficit Lacking.

The subcommittee still has no accurate information on the size of the anticipated District deficit for the next fiscal year and probably will not have for another week.

Present indications are that efforts will be made in closed sub-committee sessions to scrap either the business privilege or the income tax. Nichols has several times predicted that the income levy will be eliminated, while Dirksen is just as confident that it will not.

On the previous test vote Dirksen won by lining up Representative Wood (Democrat), of Missouri, with the two minority members, Representative Cole, of New York, and himself.

While Nichols expressed the hope that the sub-committee will be ready to report the bill to the full District Committee next Wednesday, an intra-committee fight may delay it.

Among the various amendments to be considered are a variety of proposals to revise the business privilege tax, a new income tax plan, a beer tax, and a provision repealing the 60-40 law relating to Federal payments to the District.

Dirksen said he would study the proposal that the District income tax be based on a percentage of the Federal tax collected from Washingtonians, but he foresaw many difficulties, such as obtaining revenue from non-residents who earn only part of their income in the Capital.

Tolles Offers Plan.

The percentage plan was put forward yesterday by B. Arnold Tolles, chairman of the civic affairs committee, United Federal Workers of the District, as a simple method of collecting the levy.

The suggested income tax would be one-sixth of the Federal payments made by individuals or corporations, Tolles recommended discontinuance of the business privilege tax.

Samuel Lipkowitz, of the National Labor Relations Board Union, took a similar stand.

The sales tax was urged by a group of trade representatives and Mrs. E. Morgan Pryse, of the District Federation of Women's Clubs. Among other witnesses, all of whom denounced the business privilege tax, were A. Julian Brylawski, speaking for a council of trade organizations; Willard M. Kochenderfer, executive secretary of the Washington Hotel Association; Harry Shubin, of Good Will Stores, Inc.; Gordon Sudure, who spoke for a group of food, clothing, and jewelry merchants, and Nathaniel Goldberg, attorney for wholesale tobacco and candy firms.

Man Gets Shoe Shine, Then Robs Boy of $3

It wasn't enough that John Archie Hinnant failed to get paid for shining a colored man's shoes in his basement shoe shining parlor at 1201 New Jersey avenue northwest last night.

The man who didn't pay him turned out to be a holdup man with a blue-steel revolver who took the $3 Hinnant's business had earned yesterday and walked off with a companion.

'Filipinos Love Him,' They Say At Banquet Honoring McNutt

Paul V. McNutt, United States High Commissioner to the Philippines, was wined and dined at the Willard last night by Philippine officials, headed by Quintin Paredes, Resident Commissioner to the United States.

McNutt, who returned to Washington Wednesday, almost exactly a year after his appointment to the Philippine post, was characterized by Paredes as "a real friend of the Filipinos, who found in him a fine gentleman and an able statesman, sympathetic to the needs of the people and always ready to be of help in the solution of our problems."

"I find no words," Paredes said, "that will properly and sufficiently convey our appreciation of his friendship other than to say: we, the Filipinos, love him."

McNutt, Indiana's former Governor and present "white hope" for the Democratic Presidential nomination in 1940, spoke "off the record."

Among the guests at the dinner were Jose E. Romero, majority floor leader of the Philippine National Assembly; Manuel A. Roxas, minority floor leader of the National Assembly; Benito Razon, former technical adviser to President Quezon, and numerous United States Senators, Representatives and other Government officials.

Among the invited guests who failed, for one reason or another, to attend was Senator Frederick Van Nuys (Democrat), of Indiana, New Deal foe whom McNutt's Indiana organization has declined to back for re-election.

Miss Enya Gonzales, accompanied by Carlo Edwards, was vocal soloist. Chairman of the committee on arrangements was Dr. Diosdado M. Yap.

Special Guards Posted at Cell of Limerick Suspect

A special guard of uniformed Metropolitan Police is being maintained outside the District Jail cell occupied by Robert Langdon, former policeman indicted in the murder of Buelah Limerick, The Post learned last night.

Three policemen in three eight-hour shifts are watching the "cop" in the "whoopee girl" murder, a high police official revealed, to guarantee against any "slip-up" in Langdon's trial. The official declined to comment further, but it was learned from another source the watch is being maintained in addition to the usual jail guard, at the request of Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent.

Langdon's cell is in the death block usually reserved for prisoners convicted of a capital offense. A few cells away in the same block sits Norman Wesley Robinson, sentenced to die March 18 for the murder of Mrs. Florence Goodwin, 43-year-old Government typist.

Letter Is Posted In Alarm Box; 8 Fire Engines Reply

How to mail a letter with a maximum of trouble and a minimum of efficiency was demonstrated last night in one easy lesson.

Precisely at 6 p. m., a fire alarm was sounded at the corner of Georgia avenue and Lamont street. Eight pieces of apparatus, including three engine companies, screamed through the streets to the scene of action—but when they arrived, they discovered life proceeding normally, without even a trace of smoke.

The firefighters were about to return home and chalk up another false alarm when one of their number strolled over to the fire-box and looked in. He found there a letter, duly stamped and addressed.

Usual procedure in such cases is to investigate the sender, who, if caught, is likely to face a $300 fine.

Full of kindness, however, was the fireman who discovered the letter. He mailed it.

Hazen Calls Parley Upon 'Sacred' Cars

D. C. Heads to Map Policies on 'Privileged' Licenses.

Huge File of Protests From Tagged Congressmen Is Bared.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Methods of dealing with Washington's so-called "Congressional immunity" and "special privilege" class of motorists will be studied next week at a conference of ranking police officials and city heads in the office of Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, it was reported last night.

Insisting no orders to "lay off" Congressional and official cars had been issued to police, Hazen said problems of enforcing District traffic regulations against drivers of these autos will be presented to the various police captains and inspectors for "serious consideration and action."

Letters Are on File.

The Commissioner refused to comment on reported proposals to impound the cars of habitual offenders who, shielded by an act of Congress granting them immunity, refuse to obey instructions or answer traffic violation notices.

"I prefer to withhold any statement until after our scheduled meeting," said Hazen. "We intend to discuss the matter just as soon as the press of current business permits."

Investigation revealed yesterday that numerous letters from members of Congress—inclosing traffic tickets placed on their autos—are on file at police headquarters and the several precincts.

Claims of "official business," it was learned, are the usual excuses offered for ignoring or requesting tickets to be "taken care of."

"Official Business" All Night.

On one recent occasion, according to records, a ticket was issued to the owner of a Congressional car parked near his home. The offending machine remained throughout the night parked contrary to regulations and blocking traffic.

That ticket, however, was returned promptly to the precinct captain with a written refusal to comply with the request to post collateral.

The law governing use of Congressional tags states specifically they are intended to facilitate the transaction of "official business" only.

Immunity Act Cited.

Approved December 19, 1932, the Congressional tag act reads in part: ". . . for their official use, which, when used by them individually while on official business, shall authorize them to park their automobiles in any available curb space in the District of Columbia, except within fireplug, firehouse, loading station and loading platform limitations, and such Congresional tags shall not be assigned to or used by others."

In addition to members of Congress, "special privilege" tags are issued to several Capitol Hill employes, certain Government officials and members of the Diplomatic Corps.

The Constitution of the United States prohibits the actual arrest of a member of Congress while traveling to and from and while attending Congressional sessions—except for "treason, breach of the peace or felony."

Under this, police are powerless to force Congressional tag holders to answer traffic tickets or heed warnings.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Man's Marriage Goes on Rocks; He Takes to Drink; Wants His Wife Back; Asks What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a man 28 years old. Two years ago I married a girl of 21. I thought a lot of her and am sure she cared as much, or more, for me. We were very happy together for a year, and then we began to disagree on nearly everything. I don't know what came over her. I know her parents never cared for me, and for that reason I never went around them, although I was invited several times. On the other hand, my people thought she was an angel and they still feel the same.

* * * *

Things went from bad to worse with us. I got to the place where I thought I hated her. I began to drink heavily. We stopped going out together. She would go out alone and so would I. But I went more than she did and stayed out later. Several nights I did not come home at all. She drank only a little and that was at home with me. I had to fix my own meals and anything else I needed for myself. She would go to see her parents quite often, and seemed indifferent to what I thought about it.

* * * *

She had a good job making almost as much as I did, and for that reason was very independent. I provided the home and she had all her money to herself. Sometimes she would ask me if I needed any money, and would buy me little things she thought I would like, but still we did not get along, so finally she suggested that we separate. I told her it was okay with me if that was what she wanted, so she went back to her people. Since then I have been very miserable. I know I still care for her, but I did not realize it until she left. I see now I was mostly to blame for everything. She had her faults, but mine were greater.

* * * *

No matter where I go or whom I am with, I am not satisfied. I think of her all the time. I cannot forget her. I want her to come back, so I can start life over again. I can never be happy without her. I don't know what to do. I can hardly think. I have got to the place where I have to drink all the time and I know it is doing me no good. So please tell me what to do and how to go about it. I have confidence in your advice and I am sure you can tell me what to do. H. D. B.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR H. D. B.: Show me a person who thinks or proclaims himself "unable to live without" some other person and I will show you one who is—so far as his psychological and emotional development are concerned—still in the howling infant stage of individual evolution. And that, probably, is what your wife married in the first place—a self-centered, domineering, spotlight-claiming, hypersensitive, bad tempered, badly spoiled brat. I suppose "what come over her," after a year's patient, self-abnegating effort, was the realization that the more she tried to please you, the more impossible of satisfaction became your fretful and peevish demands. So is it always with the spoiled child.

* * * *

Thereafter, she probably reached the decision any mature, sensible woman would reach under similar circumstances—namely, a decision to give you reasonable consideration, no more and no less, and let it go at that. She probably hoped you would come to your senses, but when she found the formula didn't work, after a fair trial period, she decided to leave you. And, again, she was wise in that. When she began leading her own life, refusing to let your infantilism warp her existence any more than it already had, you, sensing the shift in attitude, forthwith attempted to punish her in every way your imagination could devise. Everything you could think of that might hurt her, you did.

* * * *

What you subconsciously counted on finding in a wife, I suppose, was a combined mother and worshipful slave; not, in any sense, a free and equal mate. You wanted a nurse and a leaning-post, not a partner. Whether you still love her, or ever did, is problematic. Whether you are, at this present stage of your development, capable of love, is open to question. Certainly you haven't conducted yourself as one capable of experiencing, and giving expression to, a generous, co-operative, unselfish, adaptive, contributive, protective devotion, of a kind which honors the giver, enriches the life of the recipient, and stands for something sound and fruitful in the general social scheme of things.

* * * *

Now, if you want your wife back, the thing to do is to make of yourself something worth while, in the way of a manly husband, for her to come back to. You can't simply go to her, wailing and sniffling, and beg her to come back on the promise that you're going to be "a good boy" hereafter. It is to be presumed you have passed out of boyhood's estate, for good or ill. You have no right to expect her to supply you, out of the stuff of her own character, the material which will make you into a man. Whatever of manhood you are ever to have must come out of your own nature.

* * * *

For one thing, cut out drinking, immediately. Alcoholism is nothing but a coward's evasion and escape from reality; from problems that must be faced and competently coped with. If you are suffering from the mawkish delusion that your unhappiness has driven you to drink, or that you are an object of merited pity because you're going to the dogs, you are only fooling yourself. Maybe you're hoping your wife will hear of your terrible plight and come rushing back to play the ministering angel's role. If she's wise, she won't. Everybody owes something to himself before he takes others' needs into account. She has her own salvation to work out; you have yours.

* * * *

Cut out drinking, as I say; create a useful, purposeful program of work and social activity. Don't look to others to be an opiate for your heartbreak—which is more remorse and self-pity than anything else. And the remorse is less for what you have done to your wife than for what you have done yourself out of. Instead of wasting your leisure hours drinking and seeking solace in frivolous companionship, look around for some constructive activity. Take an interest in politics, in civic affairs, and so on. Join a men's club, the Y. M. C. A., if you can think of none other, for whatever of social, cultural and educational benefits it has to offer. Go to church and join a men's class—not for the probable effect such an appearance of salutory reform will have on your wife, but for the potential good it will do your own self. Get interested in your work. Make a firm resolution to do the most outstanding piece of work in that particular field that has ever been done, and then get busy doing it. You might read Dr. Henry C. Link's "The Return to Religion," to get a few pointers on how to reorganize your whole mental and social attitude toward life; and you might read Florence Guy Seabury's "Love Is a Challenge," to get a clear understanding of why you failed as a husband, and how you can turn that failure into success—if not with your first choice in a wife, then with some later, better-advised choice. Your greatest mistake, my good man, has been in supposing that love solves everything. But love is no substitute for character, and where character is lacking, love promptly withers and dies.

* * * *

When you have made something more of a man of yourself than you are today, then go to your wife and try, in a man's way, to win her heart and hand all over again. But don't let too much grass grow under your feet, or some other man may get there first. There is, in my opinion, no other solution to your problem.

That Poured-in Look Requires Special Exercise

EVEN if not in their contracts, it's an unwritten law that movie players must keep their waists slim. Here you see June Storey, a Twentieth Century starlet, illustrating an excellent waistline exercise which involves a twisting and stretching to stir up lazy muscles.

Stretch, Twist and Bend for a Debutante's Midriff.

By Ida Jean Kain.

UNLESS YOU have curve control, that poured-in look, as stylists describe it, the new spring silhouette will come closer to what P. G. Wodehouse calls "poured in and forgot to say when." It's no season to have weight in the wrong places, for fashions conform to the line of the figure—concealing, they reveal in silhouette.

Since all the styles hug the waistline, let's begin with the midriff. Stretch, twist and bend until your midsection is as firm and limber as it was when you were 21.

A Waistline Slimmer.

Here is a waistline slimmer that is easy to do, so don't stand on your dignity and let the years pad your figure.

POSITION—Sitting on the floor, knees straight and feet wide apart.

MOVEMENT—Stretch arms high above head. Then twist and bend at the waist and touch fingers of left hand to outstretched right foot, at the same time flinging the right arm out to the side. Without interrupting the rhythm, swing around and touch right fingers to left foot. Now stretch the arms high overhead again and repeat the exercise 25 times. Continually pull up with the diaphragm.

Since most of us are limited in our exercise time, let's get all we can out of each movement. There is a double reason for first stretching the arms high overhead in the above exercise. This not only flattens out the spare tire about the midriff, but it also reaches the pectoral muscles and tends to raise the bust contour to normal position. If the bust measurement is a real problem, however, you need additional exercises, such as the following:

POSITION — Stand with arms stretched high overhead and hold this position.

MOVEMENT—Keeping the shoulders fairly still, twist and turn the arms in opposite directions so that one arm is forward and the other back. Continue the upward stretch. Reverse the position of the arms for 20 counts. Be sure to keep your chin up. If you will practice this exercise several times a day it will make a decided improvement in a sagging bustline.

Hip Exercises.

Shoulders are broad this season, but hips are slim. The following exercise slims the hips and flattens the tummy:

POSITION—Lie flat on the back on the floor, one leg extended downward, opposite leg raised high in air to right angles with body. Have knee straight and toes pointed.

MOVEMENT—With the pointed toes describe large circles, circling in one direction for six counts and then in the opposite direction for six counts. Repeat with other leg.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Feb. 24.

A FEW NIGHTS ago, on special invitation and the well-known cuff, I scooped up my fellow Murray Hillbillies, the Mel Rivards, and the feebly squalling spouse, and lugged them to our Versailles Night Club, there to see and hear the reappearance of one of the town's pet song birds, Gertrude Niesen—just back from two years' exile in Hollywood. And so I learned all over again what magnificent remodeling and repaint jobs the movies can do on the girls.

ALICE HUGHES

I think that Gertie and Kate Smith, among all the popular larks, have the most wondrous and exciting natural voices. They open their mouths—amazing sounds come out. The Niesen is on the thrilling baritone side. Her booming of a torch song can set a strong, stern man to weeping into his schnapps, especially if he has already inhaled a few drops. When Gertrude went West, she billowed in all directions. Her hair was a huge and unruly mass of black. An amazing performer of her type, she sadly lacked what we Times Squareheads call "class!"

And now? You should see! The slender, shapely critter who smiled her way to the microphone must have been two other girls. Hollywood had performed another of its astonishing feats of glamorizing! She must have shed at least 30 pounds, and in her tight black velvet evening gown, cut very low fore and aft, she was indeed a tasty and alluring dish—according to my helpmate, who was dosing himself with charged water till bubbles floated from his ears. Her black hair has become a rich gold, worn with a fine set of bangs, and a long bob in the rear. She looked lovely, her rich voice showed signs of finessing, she was a new Niesen, but with all the old horsepower in her throat. When she gave out "Night and Day," the crowded room collapsed. Now she's off to London on a new adventure, she tells me. How wonderful is Hollywood as it performs its magic on its chosen girls! If you don't think so, catch a glance at Gertie!

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—I guess our cutest girl visitor of the winter is this little Judy Garland of the films, who is running neck and neck with Deanna Durbin for child-star honors of the movies these days. This pretty mite who went from Grand Rapids, Minn., to Hollywood has been making personal appearances on Broadway and winning thousands of hearts. But the big town has worn out the child and she longs for the peaceful slavery of the studio.

Not so pleasant a report can come from me on the Rev. Charles Jaynes, jr., aged 7, who is working on the countless sinners of Brooklyn at present. "Doom, doom, doom!" cries the Rev. Master Jaynes. "Sin is black and life is short!" With this announcement, he slapped a coffin nail from the hand of an evil reporter, remarking that nicotine would give him cancer. These infant professors of high and ghostly matters give me the shivers. I view them, heaven help me, much as I do the mathematical chimpanzee who can add two and two and make four.

The town clowns have a new joke that will kill you—with annoyance. They ask you to call a number and ask for Mr. McCarthy—the number being that of the company which sponsors the Bergen-Charlie broadcasts! Watch for this on April 1, friends!

Among the 16 boys and girls just awarded scholarships at the Columbia School of Journalism was Jane Davis, a pretty lass from Minneapolis, and I wonder why she came all the way here to bone up on the newspaper business when they have such a fine journalism school at the University of Minnesota, where I spoke a few weeks ago? Well, maybe Jane wanted to see something of this town, too.

The latest cocktail snack here was born in Holland. They are cheese sticks in the shape of bottles, and the cheese is flavored with that tasty liqueur, kummel. Very tasty, indeed, and not expensive either.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

The Answer Is "No!"

"These dresses really look a lot different when they're on . . . Now if you'd just step into the fitting room . . ."

"Could you give me just three minutes of your time? . . . No, it's really a personal matter . . . Yes, but all I need is just three minutes to explain our little plan whereby when you are 65 . . . Yes, but did you know that at that age, 95 per cent of all women . . . Well, won't you at least let me leave you this little leaflet?"

"Say, how would you like to go over to the Putters' some night and see her things? She's picked up some of the most priceless old pewter . . ."

"Good morning. It's certainly a beautiful day, isn't it? . . . Have you a satisfactory foundation? . . . Oh well, but OUR foundations are different . . . Now I don't want to be personal, but with the proper foundation, you would look at least 20 pounds lighter . . . Well, if you'd just let me take your measurements . . ."

"Can you come over tomorrow night to play bridge with the Oxleys'?"

"Will you please fill out the attached six-page questionnaire on 'Why I Have Not Succeeded' and add as full amplifying remarks as possible? Also, since my thesis must be in by the first of next week, will you please send same by return mail?"

"Say, couldn't you go with me next Thursday to the Excelsior Club luncheon? They're going to have a perfectly fascinating man talk on . . ."

"Now won't you PLEASE write me a nice long letter and tell me all about yourself?"

"I wonder if you could come to a committee meeting just after lunch Saturday? . . . Well, what about 9 o'clock Sunday morning? . . . Well, ... any time?"

"Do you read good magazines? . . . Well, but just let me explain—how would you like to get three of the foremost women's magazines for the price of one with this complete new Encyclopedia of Movie Stars thrown in for . . ."

"Say, I wonder if you would mind letting us use your name as one of the sponsors of the Mickey Mouse Pageant? You'd only have to be responsible for ten tickets . . ."

"Have you a recent photograph of yourself? . . . But listen, don't you want your friends to know ten years from now how you looked when you were still—if you'd just let me show you some of our beautiful enlargements . . . now all you have to do is to sign this coupon . . ."

"Do you brush your teeth night and morning—the time is now 9 o'clock and 11 seconds—and use Hokum's Lily White 100 per cent Ivory Polisher and Cleaner?"

"Now just a minute . . . No, I'm not trying to sell you a thing . . . no, really, I haven't a thing on earth to sell, just let me explain . . . Well, all I ask is the opportunity to give you . . . yes, but it won't cost you a cent . . . I just want to give you this beautiful, this wonderful, this exceptional . . . Oh, Madam!"

Today's HEALTH TALK

by Logan Clendening, M. D.

Colitis Treatment.

THE TERM "colitis" implies inflammation of the large intestine. In order to understand its nature, we must know something of the structure and function of the colon.

The colon, or large intestine, has an internal lining of mucous membrance, two muscular coats of circular and longitudinous muscles, and an outside coat of serous connective tissue so that it makes a fairly tough, flexible, expansive and elongated sac. It is well supplied with nerves so that derangement of its functions are felt in the form of symptoms or pain.

Its most important function is that of holding bulky digestive products and waste until they can be conveniently eliminated. The second important function is delivering to the body the water which has been imbibed and poured into the small intestine during digestion.

Absorption of minerals, sugar, salt and some drugs takes place from the colon.

Most of the bacteria which have formed in the intestinal contents are detoxified or killed after they reach the large intestine. The chief secretion from the colon is mucus. Its function is obviously that of a lubricant.

Colitis can be said to exist only when there is demonstrable evidence of inflammation of the intestinal wall or lining.

There are various forms and causes of colitis:

(1) Amebiasis. This is becoming more and more common in the United States and is due to the invasion of the mucous membrance of the colon by amebic parasites. Amebae usually enter the body with contaminated food. When they invade the mucous membrance of the colon they usually cause ulcerations. These ulcerations may be quite deep and lead to great intestinal unrest, with pain and cramps, diarrhea and the formation of blood, pus and mucus.

Besides the examination with the X-ray, diagnosis will depend upon the recovery of the ameba from the stool.

When treatment is promptly and properly given, acute amebic colitis responds very rapidly. Most of the treatment is designed to kill off the parasite. For this purpose a number of drugs have been used, such as ipecac and its derivatives, emetine, stovarsol, vioform and bismuth resorcinol.

As in all forms of colitis, rest with the use of a soft, low residue diet, should be instituted.

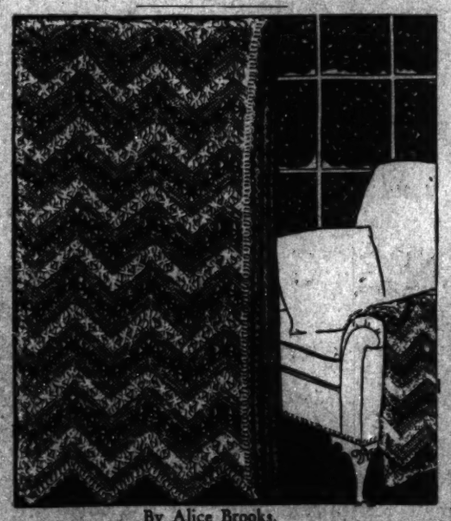
Striking Pattern for Afghan Employs Daisy-Chain Crochet



By Alice Brooks.

HERE'S a pattern that would have set tongues wagging in the olden days, it's so gay, so striking and so quickly crocheted! The daisy-like chain alternating with rows of plain crochet are easy to do and make the afghan grow by leaps and bounds. Soft four-fold Germantown wool in three tones of one color or in three different colors makes a striking afghan. In pattern 5772 you will find directions for making the afghan; an illustration of it and of the stitches used; material requirements, and color suggestions.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post, Household Arts Department, 259 West Fourteenth street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

New Hair Ornaments.

Paris (AP).—By far the newest, and certainly the most flattering, of hair ornaments are ostrich feathers. Multi-colored ostrich curls are being bound on the filmsiest of veils, which are swirled over eyes and throat. The Marquise de Polignac is particularly fond of this arrangement. A black net princess cap circled with a tiny ribbon of flame-red ostrich feathers is worn with the chow high on the forehead.

The new Jelleff's

End of one season—beginning of new — merchandise from both—in our February, monthly, one-day and in many ways remarkable—

AVERAGE Half-Price Day!

One or two customers (no more) have misunderstood because everything in our half-price days is not exactly half price. They read the headline, but not the editorial which explains fully. An average half price on the whole—some things are a little more, some less. Merchandise from our own stocks and from makers we know, who clear through us at an average of half! Sixty to seventy thousand dollars' worth, roughly estimated at regular retail prices, for today's event! Partial listing of items below—hundreds more on sale today!

Some few people also do not understand that all sales of half-price merchandise are positively final—no credits, no refunds, no exchanges, no C. O. D. and no mail orders! No goods held for anyone under any circumstances; pin fittings 25c, a charge for gift boxes, no deliveries promised for same day on half-price day merchandise—service the best we can provide but frankly not up to Jelleff standards. Please co-operate and do not ask that an exception be made in your case. Very sincerely, Frank R. Jelleff, Inc.

Army Officers' Splendid New Blue Uniforms Steal Show As President and Mrs. Roosevelt Stage Service-Set Reception

Navy and Marine Corps Guests Bring Gathering to 1,600 at Closing Event of White House Season; Gen. Craig Attracts Most Attention.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Outfeathering the peacocks in sartorial splendor, high-ranking Army officers in their "new blues" took the spotlight last night when the Army, Navy and Marine Corps called at the White House—1,600 strong—to shake hands with the President and Mrs. Roosevelt. The occasion was the annual service-set reception, terminating this season's White House social calendar.

The blue of the Navy uniforms, with their elaborate epaulets . . . the Marine uniforms, heavily ornamented with narrow gold braid in a maze-like design . . . even the sequins, satins and velvets of the feminine guests faded into the background while Army officers preened and pranced about in their "new blues." These striking ensembles combine the single-breasted feature of pre-war dress uniforms with the gold buttons used on the long-skirted "full dress blues," and striped trousers—very snappy.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Yet, despite the fancy regalia of the male contingent, which also boasted a splendid array of gay ribbons, citations and medals, the party turned out to be the least formal, and probably the gayest, of the five receptions given at the White House this winter. From the minute the crimson-coated Marine Band struck up "Hail the Chief" and the "official family" started its march from the state dining room until the dancing was finished in the East Room several hours later, guests mingled and chatted in a manner htat marked the reception as one of the most successful of the season.

Chief of Staff Is Center of Interest

"Have you seen Gen. Malin Craig?" someone asked as guests drifted through the lobby and into the East Room before the party began. "He designed his own uniform and it puts all the others in the shade," someone else observed. At that moment the affable Chief of Staff entered the lobby, trimly turned out in a uniform that easily made him the "man of the hour." Fashioned with a double-breasted coat, stripes and gold buttons, it also included a high-standing collar.

Only three Cabinet members and four Cabinet hostesses were in the official family procession, following the President and Mrs. Roosevelt from the East Room to the Red Room. From there, in keeping with the regular arrangement, the Chief Executive and the First Lady went on to the Blue Room, where they received their guests.

The Secretary of War and Mrs. Woodring were there, the latter gowned in white with gold trimming and wearing a gold tiara in the form of wheat sheaves. The Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., also were present. She wore a black velvet frock with a silver flower, and a cream-colored train shot with black and gold. Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, who has attended every official reception this season, was there, wearing a becoming pink frock. The Secretary of Agriculture is out of the city. The Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, who make it a point to attend the White House functions, were on hand last night. Mrs. Roper was gowned in blue and silver lame, with a brief train and silver accessories.

Since the Secretary of Navy could not be present, the Assistant Secretary, Charles Edison, was in the official line. With him was Mrs. Edison in a handsome white crepe gown, trimmed in tiers of wide white fringe.

Mrs. Roosevelt wore one of her most becoming gowns—the pink and plum-colored chiffon fashioned on simple lines, terminating in a train. A small orchid corsage completed her costume.

Congress Also Well Represented

Secretary and Mrs. Woodring led the long line through the Blue Room. Next among those shaking hands with the host and hostess were Assistant Secretary and Mrs. Edison, Senator James J. Davis, who was accompanied by his daughter, Miss Jane Davis; Senator and Mrs. M. M. Logan and Senatory Berry. Senator Davis is on the Senate Naval Affairs Committee; Senator Logan and Senator Berry are both on the Committee on Military Affairs.

"Well, it's the first time the Army has ever outshone the Navy at a White House reception," somebody said to Admiral Leahy. "How does it make you feel, Admiral."

"Pretty jealous," he replied, eyes twinkling. "We'll have to do something about it."

A by-stander volunteered that last year most of the Army turned out in olive drabs. "Only a few bought "blues" to wear to the White House. "This year the new uniform was compulsory."

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon.

ONLY SELDOM does Washington get a look at a real, honest-to-goodness Sultan, so the visit of His Highness, Sey Yid Said Bin Taimur, Sultan of Muscat and Oman, is being looked forward to with flutters of anticipation. Independent sovereign of some rather sandy land at the tip of the Arabian peninsula, His highness is only 28, speaks perfect English, and wears picturesque white robes and a varicolored turban with a tassel.

DUDLEY HARMON

The State Department is taking the Sultan under its wing during his visit, which begins the middle of next week. The secretary, Mr. Hull, has planned a men's dinner for Thursday evening; President Roosevelt will give him a luncheon, the Undersecretary of State, Sumner Welles, will give a dinner, and in between festivities the royal visitor will be conducted on sightseeing tours by members of the State Department. George T. Summerlin, Chief of Protocol, journeyed to San Francisco to meet him on his arrival in this country, as is the custom whenever the head of a state or other distinguished official sets foot on American soil.

• • • •

THE SULTAN ALREADY possesses an autographed picture of President Roosevelt, presented to him when the American Minister at Bagdad made a trip to Muscat several years ago. On this trip the Minister was royally received at the palace and tendered a dinner at which whole sheep were served, and everybody ate with their fingers in accordance with the Arabian custom.

America has had a trade treaty with Muscat ever since 1833. At that time the sultanate included Zanzibar and parts of the West African coast, and Yankee clippers did a big trade in spices. While that trade has fallen off to a large degree, the treaty still stands.

THE SOVIET EMBASSY had better look to its culinary laurels! The food served at her "at home" yesterday by Mme. de Bianchi, wife of the Portuguese Minister, hit a new high for lavishness. There were great bowls of fresh strawberry sauce over meringues, mountains of ice cream, salad, a huge chocolate cake with great pieces of chocolate sticking up in the middle, punch, orange juice, tea, coffee, cocktails, whisky and little packages of Portuguese candy all tied up in bright-colored papers. Then, besides all this, there were the usual thin sandwiches, peanuts, etc.

Mme. de Bianchi received in the drawing room, wearing a long black gown with gold bead embroidery. Her daughter, Miss Sibilla Skidelsky, and a younger daughter, Marie, assisted the Minister and their mother. Pink azalea plants, masses of red carnations and jonquils added to the elegance of the scene.

On view in one of the rooms were several photographs of paintings done by Henry Medina, Portuguese artist who is visiting Joao de Deus Ramos, of the legation staff.

Last evening the hostess wore an aquamarine dinner gown, simply made with a short train. A corsage of pink roses at the neck completed her costume.

The guests, who numbered over 30, assembled in a private dining room of the Carlton. The table was decorated with large silver bowls filled with spring flowers in pastel shades, and silver candelabra holding tall white tapers. Place cards were done in silver and white instead of the traditional gold and white.

Relief Apathy Is Criticized By First Lady

She Urges Women to Arouse Congressmen to Needs.

Actual Cases Dramatized by League of Women Voters.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

The Post Club Editor.

"Young and pretty" college women should give members of Congress personal courses of instruction in the relief needs of the District—and elsewhere—Mrs. Roosevelt yesterday told the Voteless District of Columbia League of Women Voters.

Mrs. Roosevelt struck out by inference at the lack of personal interest from Capitol Hill in relief needs of a city lacking a voice in its own government after she had seen a dramatization of actual relief cases uncovered by the league and the American Association of University Women.

"It is necessary that people who have power actually know conditions; most of them don't," she declared. "They never come in contact with the Training School (where Mrs. Roosevelt has been a visitor), the Receiving Home or the relief office. They deal with figures and when people deal for a long time with abstract figures they forget these represent human beings."

Mrs. Roosevelt suggested that the league send its "young and pretty" college women to educate Congressmen in order that the latter might see the reaction of "young and unhardened minds" to conditions that are permitted to exist. She urged that the young women take members of Congress on a survey of relief agencies.

She said petitions to Congress and hearings failed sufficiently to impress congressional minds.

"It isn't a question of real economy; what is being done in the District and in other places," Mrs. Roosevelt said. "What we call economy is real waste. The only thing that makes it seem more terrible is that the Government is here. You are the seat of the Federal Government, people whose voices can be heard all over the Nation."

Taking an indirect slap at the operation of some District institutions, although avoiding any reference to them by name, Mrs. Roosevelt said it was not common sense to erect new buildings which offered opportunities for improving conditions and then decide not to run them for the tended. She mentioned another purpose for which they were institution, to which an out-of-town scientist had been sent, who had been unable to carry on his work for lack of equipment.

Even as a "voteles league" there is much the District organization can do, Mrs. Roosevelt pointed out. She commended the members for the thoroughness with which they studied conditions before they recommended remedies; told them there were many ways of making their opinions count, and urged them to "use every possible method you can devise to make your influence felt."

"We women do not use our power to the limit, and often do not realize how much we have, or make up our minds we are willing to pay the price in sacrifice of time and money it may require to have our influence felt," she said. "Just now, we must begin by seeing that visual education goes forward."

A four-month survey of relief conditions in the District was made recently by members of the league's committee on government and econdmic welfare, headed by Mrs. David Cushman Coyle, and the social studies group of the A. A. U. W., headed by Mrs. Charter Heslep.

Mrs. Coyle explained that the cases dramatized were by no means the worst.

"If we had presented the worst we found you wouldn't have believed it," she said. "The women who made the survey could not sleep at night because of what they saw in their investigations—conditions among life-long residents of the District, American citizens, in the shadow of the Capitol."

Guests at the luncheon received copies of the summary of the findings, which this week were placed in the hands of the Bureau of the Budget and the Appropriation committees of the House and Senate.

"If you have a voice to raise, raise it now to help get the necessary funds for relief," urged Mrs. Louis Ottenberg, president of the league, who presided at the luncheon.

The study was made in public and private relief agencies, the summary explains, and members of the committees interviewed applicants at the time they were decided relief by the interviewers. Questionnaires were filled out and home visits made. Records of 418 cases were presented, covering 1,588 individuals, 793 of whom are over 16 and one third white.

"Contrary to the general belief," says the report, "the relief applicant is not a transient, is not an undesirable citizen and does not have a huge family. Twenty-one per cent of the adults were born in the District and 77 per cent have been here more than five years. Seventy-seven per cent of the families had fewer than four dependents and only 1 per cent had more than six. There are enough large families to make it advisable to have no maximum budget restrictions. The average allowance per family for 1937 by the Public Assistance Division was less than $30, which shows that the unrestricted budget privilege was not abused.

"The majority of the applicants made a good impression upon the interviewer and most of them have made a great effort to find work. At present there are more than 20,000 for whom there are no jobs in the District according to reliable estimates. Many of these are borderline cases who are not able to qualify for WPA jobs and at the same time are not eligible for private employment or for relief.

Frontier Nurse Service's Work Is Recounted

Founder of Group, in Report Gives Graphic Picture of Mountaineers.

Mrs. Mary Breckenridge, founder and director of the Frontier Nursing Service in Kentucky, yesterday presented her annual report before the meeting of the Washington committee in the George Hewitt Myers Textile Museum, at which Mrs. Roosevelt was present. The First Lady commended the nursing service, in which she has long been interested, and asserted that the people to whom it ministers represented sturdy Anglo-Saxon stock of which the country should be proud.

Mrs. Breckenridge wove a few statistics into her report but it was chiefly a human picture, painted with graphic accounts of individual cases and how they were cared for despite obstacles—impassable mountain trails, swollen rivers, undependable swinging footbridges, and great distances to be covered on horseback. She illustrated her talk with colored slides, showing the beautiful mountain country and the members of the staff on their rounds.

D. C. Women in Service.

Among the Washington young women who have served in the volunteer courier service are Mrs. John Pugh—the former Louise Chase Myers—and Miss Marion Shouse, both of whom were present yesterday, the former acting as hostess in the absence of her mother.

Last winter the couriers had to nurse their horses as well as the people of the section. Mrs. Breckenridge said, when the animals suffered attacks of influenza. One of the slides she threw on the screen showed the records of the horses' temperatures as they were posted in the stables. In some instances the couriers sat up all night caring for them, and all but one of the animals recovered.

The horses seemed almost as important as the men and women in the nursing services, as they were shown swimming across rivers, picking their way over difficult mountain roads and waiting patiently through the night for their riders while they ministered to patients.

POLITICS IS beginning to be a live subject among members of the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs—politics of the club variety.

Mrs. Arthur Charles Watkins has been indorsed by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of the District of Columbia as candidate for next president of the federation, of which the W. C. T. U. is a member. Mrs. Watkins is an educator, and writer and is now devoting most of her time to teaching and lecturing on problems of home, school and citizenship.

For 11 years she served as executive secretary of the National Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher Associations and, from 1930 to 1934, was education secretary of the organization. She also organized at Columbia University a course on "The Educational Significance of the Parent-Teacher Movement." She is now second vice president of the District Federation and parliamentarian of the W. C. T. U. of the District.

The decorations of red and white, representing both the birthday idea and the Confederate colors, will be carried out in candles and flowers.

The ballroom will be decorated with large United States and Confederate flags behind a bank of palms. The flowers massed on the mantels will be red and white, and tiny flags will decorate the punch table.

Navy Sponsors' Society Observes 30th Birthday

Official Service Set Joins With Members of Group to Celebrate Anniversary at Large Luncheon.

To the tune of "Anchors Aweigh," played by the Navy Band Orchestra, members and guests of the Society of Sponsors of the United States Navy yesterday took their places at a luncheon table at the Mayflower, appropriately decorated with red, white and blue streamers and candles.

The occasion was the thirtieth birthday party of the society, composed of women who have launched United States Navy vessels. Walls of the Chinese room echoed and re-echoed with reminiscences of members—each of whom will never forget when they voiced the familiar "I name thee—" and hurled a bottle of champagne against the bow of a ship.

Charles Edison, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, heading speakers here for the event, emphasized that "the United States needs a Navy second to none. There is no surer way to keep us out of war than for us to have a Navy so expertly trained that other nations will leave us alone."

Rear Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, and Rear Admiral W. G. DuBose were other speakers. All were introduced by Mrs. Russell C. Langdon, of New York, president of the society, who was gowned in slate blue crepe trimmed in white and worn with a blue turban. A corsage of gardenias and sweet peas completed her ensemble.

Birthday Cake Bears 30 Candles

A huge birthday cake, adorned with red roses and bearing 30 candles, was brought in and placed before the president of the society shortly before the program began. Other cakes set with one candle each were placed at either end of the speakers' table.

Among those attending were officers and trustees of the society, including, in addition to the president, Mrs. Henry Williams, first vice president, and Mrs. Stanton R. Norman, secretary-treasurer. Mrs. Emory Land, second vice president, is in Arizona. Trustees of the society who attended were Mrs. Edward J. Palmer, of Ventnor, N. J.; Mrs. Nathan Goff, sr., of Clarksburg, W. Va.; Mrs. Wilson Lee, of Silver Spring, Md.; Mrs. Albert Stahl, of Washington; Mrs. Albert Sutcliffe, of New York, N. Y.; Mrs. George Barnett, Mrs. Jennings Bailey, jr., and Mrs. Ella Micou, all of Washington.

Mrs. James M. Helm, wife of the late Rear Admiral James Meredith Helm, who has christened three vessels, was presented with two new bars for her official ribbon. Mrs. Reid Reilly, who attended the first meeting of the society, was asked to stand and before the program was over a number of notables took the floor amid a burst of applause.

Navy Notables Among the Guests

At the speakers' table were Rear Admiral and Mrs. Adolphus Andrews, the latter in black and white; Rear Admiral and Mrs. George Pettingill, the latter in an all-black outfit; Rear Admiral and Mrs. G. J. Rowcliff; Rear Admiral and Mrs. David Foote Sellers; Mrs. Charles Edison, who wore a moss-green crepe frock with off-the-face hat to match; Mrs. Leahy, gowned in black with a corsage of gardenias; George T. Summerlin, Chief of Protocol, Department of State; Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis.

Glimpsed among other members and guests were Capt. and Mrs. Chester Nimitz; Mrs. Herbert S. Howard, in a smart green frock with a small brown turban; Mrs. Edward Stafford; Rear Admiral Emory Scott and the Macneil of Barra and Mrs. Robert Lister Macneil; Mrs. R. H. Dunlap; Miss Frances Andrews, in a snappy black frock trimmed in green to match the band around her broad-brimmed black hat; Miss Virginia Hunt; Mrs. Albert Niblack, sitting next to Lady Lister-Kaye, the latter a guest of Miss Ruth Lawrence, of New York.

Also Col. Russell Langdon, Capt. and Mrs. Frank Sligluff, Mrs. Alfred W. Johnson, Mrs. Malvina Scheider, Mrs. J. L. Ackerson, Mrs. Charles Warren, Miss Helen Louise Sargent, Mrs. Ridley McLean, Mrs. Phillip Rhinelander, Miss Belle Bagley Miss Ethel Babley and Mrs. William J. Baxter.

During the luncheon, before it and as guests were leaving, the Navy Orchestra played under the direction of Lieut. Charles Benter.

Cheese Dish Wins Lenten Post Contest

Viennese Submits Best Recipe—U. S. Version of French Souffle.

Mrs. Maye Sadtler Is Second With Tuna Casserole Recipe.

A CHEESE SOUFFLE that does not collapse if guests are late wins the first prize in The Post's contest for unusual Lenten dishes. The recipe was submitted by Mrs. E. L. Frances, 2440 Sixteenth street northwest, who has only been in America two years. Her native city is Vienna. She finds American cooking satisfactory, especially in salad preparation.

This recipe for the cheese souffle is not Viennese, but is an American version of a French dish.

The souffle is made with rice and has no unusual ingredients. The texture is light and delicate, as for a French souffle. The chopped green pepper gives a tang that is especially good for spring menus.

Mrs. Frances recommends a salad as a proper accompaniment. A sauce of tomato or cucumber can be served with it. It is ideal for a guest lunch or for the Lenten dinner. If there is no maid, serve it in individual dishes, as this makes service easier and more neat.

CHEESE SOUFFLE.

2 tablespoons of butter
1 teaspoon of mustard
1½ tablespoons of flour
1 medium green pepper, chopped
1 cup of grated cheese
1 cup of milk
1 cup of cold boiled rice
3 eggs
¼ teaspoon of salt

Melt butter, add the mustard, flour, pepper, salt, grated cheese. Add milk slowly and cook in double boiler until the cheese is melted. Then add rice, mix well and let cool. Add the egg yolks and mix well. Fold in the three whites of eggs, beaten stiff.

Transfer to a buttered baking dish, set in pan of hot water and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees) for 45 minutes or longer.

The second prize of $2 was awarded Mrs. Maye Sadtler, Germantown, Md. The casserole of creamed tuna is given distinction by pinwheels of cheese pastry, baked as a golden topping.

TUNA FISH PIE WITH CHEESE CRUST.

3 tablespoons of butter
6 tablespoons of flour
1½ teaspoons of salt
3 cups of milk
2 slices of onion
1 large can of tuna, drained

Melt butter, add onion and cook until soft. Add flour and stir until well blended. Add salt and milk slowly, stirring constantly until thick and smooth. Boil 2 minutes. Remove from the fire and add one large can of tuna. Pour into a baking dish.

CHEESE CRUST.

1½ cups of flour
3 teaspoons of baking powder
½ teaspoon of salt
3 tablespoons of shortening
½ cup of milk
¾ cup of grated cheese

Sift flour, salt, baking powder together. Work in shortening and add milk to make a soft dough. Roll out ¼ inch thick. Sprinkle with grated cheese. Roll like jelly roll. Cut in inch slices and place on top of tuna mixture. Bake in a hot oven at 450 degrees.

Mrs. Lewis Cheeseman, 517 Prince street, Alexandria, Va., writes that the colored cook who used to live with them many years ago made a delicious corn pudding. "She could neither read nor write and would never tell me how she made anything. "A 'scrimmage' of this and a 'scrimmage' of that was as near as she ever got to an explanation of her excellent cooking. By watching her, when she was not conscious of the fact she was being watched, I worked out a recipe for her corn pudding. This is a dish she frequently prepared during Lent."

LENTEN CORN PUDDING DISH.

3 egg yolks
1½ cups of milk
1 No. 2 can of corn
3 tablespoons of flour
1 teaspoon of sugar teaspoon of salt
ash of pepper
tablespoons of melter fat
3 egg whites, beaten

Beat the egg yolks and milk together. Pour over the corn and mix well. Add flour, sugar, salt and pepper. Mix. Add melted fat and beat. Fold in the egg whites. Pour into a buttered casserole. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for about one hour. Fifteen minutes before the pudding is done remove from the oven. Dot with butter. Return to oven to brown. This serves six.

Scalloped salmon glorifies fish from a can. The milk and butter used in preparation makes it doubly nutritious as a protein dish. The recipe is a favorite with Miss Virginia Wheelbarger, 518 Ontario street, Lima, Ohio.

SCALLOPED SALMON.

1 9-ounce package of spaghetti
1 pound can of salmon
3 to 4 tablespoons of butter
3 tablespoons of flour
1½ teaspoons of salt
⅛ teaspoon of pepper
2 cups of milk
3 tablespoons of lemon juice
½ cup of bread crumbs

Cook the spaghetti until tender in salted boling water. Drain, rinse and drain again. Butter sides and bottom of a casserole. Remove bones and other undesirable portions from the salmon and flake into small pieces. Melt the butter in a saucepan. Add the flour, salt and pepper and stir until smooth. Gradually add the milk and cook until smooth and thick, stirring constantly. Place a portion of the cooked spaghetti in the casserole, add a layer of salmon and sprinkle with part of the lemon juice. Add a thin layer of bread crumbs and a portion of the white sauce. Continue adding alternate layers of the ingredients until all are used, having spaghetti as a top layer. Cover with bread crumbs, dot generously with butter and sprinkle with paprika. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for one hour. Remove from the oven and serve hot from the casserole.

The fifth prize was awarded Mrs. Grace P. Stark, apartment 435, 1900 F street northwest. The dish is highly seasoned, and combines okra, corn, tomatoes, rice and shrimp into a one-dish meal.

OKRA CREOLE.

1 large onion
½ cup of uncooked rice
½ pound of okra
1 small can of corn
1 small can of tomatoes
½ green pepper
2 tablespoons of bacon grease
1 teaspoon of salt
½ teaspoon of chili powder
¼ teaspoon of paprika
¼ teaspoon of celery salt
¼ teaspoon of white pepper
Shrimp

Brown onion in bacon grease, then add the dry rice. Brown this to a light yellow, then add the okra, cut lengthwise, and corn, and stir into the grease, letting it fry slowly. Add the tomatoes and green pepper. Season with paprika, chili powder, celery salt, salt and pepper. Add a little water so that the rice can be thoroughly cooked. Let this simmer slowly for about ¾ hour and serve hot. Fresh tomatoes and fresh corn can be substituted for the canned during the summer months. Season highly. Add the cooked shrimp. This recipe serves four persons and is a delectable Lenten dish.

Recipes from readers entered in the Lenten contest and chosen for honorable mention will be used in planning the "Menu for Today" on Tuesday and Friday during Lent.

A Make-up Shelf.

Why not have a "make-up shelf in your pantry? On it keep a supply of garnishing materials—marshmallows, cherries, colored gumdrops, chocolate beads, chopped nuts, etc. Before desserts or salads go on the table, pause and give them the final touch of "make-up" to enhance their appeal.

From Oven to Table

LIKE a breath of spring is the airy delicate brown cheese souffle which wins the first prize in the past week's Post recipe contest. Mrs. E. L. Frances (left), 2440 Sixteenth street northwest, takes the casserole from the oven and serves it at the table with a garnish of parsley and a background of spring flowers.

Spring Dishes Act as 'Tonics' For the Home Breakfast Menu

By Jean Green.

At this season of the year when it seems that life isn't worth living without a new spring print dress, menu planning is apt to enter the doldrums, especially in the case of breakfast. It seemed at times this week that I couldn't eat another breakfast off the same pattern. The mere thought of orange juice, toast and egg had lost all appeal. Thinking you might be in the same state, I have been devoting this whole week thinking up new ideas for breakfast fare.

JEAN GREEN.

Spring breakfasts should start with fruit or a tasty appetizer. Instead of the usual type of fruit, however, vary it with new arrivals. Stewed fresh strawberry rhubarb is excellent. Chopped fresh pineapple, now beginning to come in again, has a delicious tart flavor. Grapefruit served hot instead of chilled is "different." To perpare this, brush half the grapefruit with butter and place under the broiler for a few minutes until delicately brown.

For a Sunday morning "brunch," try fruit canapes made with an assortment of fresh fruit, cut in wedges or slices. Whole fresh strawberries served near a mound of powdered sugar, sections of orange and grapefruit, bunches of grapes and cubes of fresh pineapple make a colorful combination.

Toast, which seems indispensable to the usual breakfast, can be made more interesting by serving with a different jam or jelly. Apple grapefruit marmalade or loganberry jelly made from canned loganberry juice, are examples. Guava jelly and wild blackberry jelly are unusual, but seen at local stores.

If you favor hot breads, some of the new honeys featured are guaranteed to put them over in a most successful way. Incidentally, if you favor hot breads, you should try this recipe for pineapple muffins. It is quickly mixed and the added fruit makes a jelly or marmalade unnecessary as an accompaniment.

Pineapple Muffins.

2½ cups of flour
½ teaspoon of salt
4 tablespoons of butter
1 cup of milk
5 teaspoons of baking powder
4 tablespoons of sugar
1 egg
1 No. 1 can of crushed pineapple

Sift the dry ingredients into a bowl. Combine melted fat, beaten egg and liquid. Fold together the dry ingredients, liquid and drained crushed fruit. Pour into greased muffin tins. Bake in an oven set at 400 degrees for 25 minutes.

For the main dish at breakfast, ham and eggs are old teammates that never become tiresome. Instead of country ham, deviled ham can be used to give a new flavor. This ham is ground, blended and mellowed for fine flavor. It makes this recipe for poached eggs appetizing.

Poached Eggs on Toast.

2 No. ¼ cans of deviled ham
6 slices of toast
6 eggs
1½ cups of thin white sauce
Chopped parsley

Spread the toast with the deviled ham. Poach the eggs and place on the toast. Pour sauce over the eggs and sprinkle with parsley. Serve at once.

If you feel you are anemic and need iron, then choose food that are rich in this important element. Certain meats such as liver, brains and heart top the list as sources of iron. For breakfast, brains scrambled with eggs turn the trick. The dish is delicious if properly prepared and well-seasoned.

Scrambled Brains.

1 cup brains
1 teaspoon grated onion
1 tablespoon butter
3 eggs
2 tablespoons cold water
2 teaspoons salt
4 slices toast
2 tablespoons minced parsley

Parboil brains, drain, cool and remove all fibres. Chop fine and put into frying pan in which the onion has been cooked until yellow and soft with the butter. Stir until the brains are cooked. Add eggs beaten with cold water; cook over moderate fire, stirring until set. Season and serve on toast garnished with parsley. Serves four.

Market Tips

A local food shop has crumpets for sale. They are made from an old English recipe and are delicious toasted and served with tea.

Eggs are the outstanding food value this week. They are plentiful, cheap and the quality, as always at this season, is excellent. Include them on the menu for breakfast, lunch or supper and use them for baking.

Ducks are very attractively priced now. One hostess is serving roast duck with cherry sause. The fruit sauce adds a piquant tart taste to the duck and is superior to the usual applesauce.

A huge crop of apples, pears, oranges and grapefruit makes fresh fruit salads economical and practical. When you stew the fresh strawberry rhubarb, which is now available, try adding a few raisins. The wife of my favorite grocer says that it is worth trying.

Dry sausages such as thuringer, salami or cervelat are excellent for hors d'oeuvres. They can be quickly arranged on the tray with chopped pepper relish, sliced pimiento olives or cream cheese and served with melba toast or one of the new crisp canape crackers.

Cheese Recipe Prizes Offered In Post Contest

A visit to any local cheese counter will disclose dozens of varieties of cheese. In fact, one shop has as many as 50 different kinds of cheese, including both domestic and imported types. Some of the more popular cooking cheeses at this shop are cheddar, York State sharp and Italian Parmesan. Among the salad cheeses are French Roquefort, Danish blue and the cream cheeses.

How do you use these cheeses on the menu? Do you have special salads or main dishes that depend on the addition of cheese to give them personality and appeal? If so, what is your technique for using them? How do you gain a smooth-textured dish that has just the right amount of flavor?

Do you have a recipe for cheese cake that you think is superb, or a method of making English cream cheese soup that always brings you compliments, or a recipe for cheese dreams or cheese straws? These are only a few suggestions for the many ways in which you can use cheese on the menu.

For the five recipes chosen to be published The Post is awarding five cash prizes. The first is $3, the second $2 and there are three prizes of $1 each.

To enter the contest, write out your recipe, inclosing name, address and complete directions for preparation and mail to Jean Green, Post food editor, before March 5.

Fried Okra 'Discovery' Brings Many Requests

The story of how a French chef "discovered" an American dish on a North Carolina vacation has captured the fancy of many Post food page readers. Many requests have come in for the recipe and even though it is not seasonable, it is printed here so it can be led for future use.

Fried Okra.

Choose tender pods free from tough strings. Scrub the pods and cut off the stem ends. Prepare seasoned flour by adding generous amounts of salt and pepper. Cut the okra pods in crosswise slices. Roll in the seasoned flour and fry in hot fat for about ten minutes or until bright green in color and tender, but not soft in texture.

Lantern Slide Show Popular At Shoreham

Blue Room Patrons Enjoy Joining Lusty Song at Nickelodeon.

By Chanticleer

The Shoreham's Blue Room is crowded these days, and no wonder, for its nightly Nickelodeon Shows are the funniest in many years. The song slides have everyone singing lustily with practically no encouragement. For those who are not interested in movies of the bygone era there are two other top notch hits—La Trianita, a lovely Spanish dancer, and the team of Journet and Severin.

Special attraction at the Pall Mall Room today at luncheon will be a millinery fashion show, sponsored by Mrs. Neitah King, with debutantes and post-debutantes as models. Saturday is dedicated to a farewell to Eddie Daniels and his orchestra, who have made many friends during their engagement at the Pall Mall. Eddie says that he got sand in his shoes at the "Moon Over Miami" party and is heading south. Pall Mall patrons will miss his smooth, easy rhythm, but another orchestra, with Mario di Polo as m. c., opens Monday.

The Troika, which furnishes atmosphere for dancing and dining, is noted for its cuisine. Chef Feodor Karaka, who served several years at Vincent Astor's St. Regis in New York, offers such Russian dishes as Caucasian shashlik en brochette, a flaming offering that might well have come direct from the czar's table in Petrograd. There's crisp pirojok served with borscht and exotic blinichiki. On Saturday at noon the regular dinner menu is served for 75 cents. Mrs. Hamilton has a new show in rehearsal and complete details are promised next Wednesday.

The date of the Mayfair third anniversary celebration promised last week in this column is March 10. The management promises surprises, additional entertainment, favors, flowers and special menus.

The new songstress, Evelyn Oakes, now featured at the Shar-Zad room of the Carlton with Frank Hagen and his orchestra, seems well on the way to top-notch popularity. Her rendition of "Thanks for the Memory" brought down the house.

A new show opened this week at the Lotus, featuring Mildred Ray and her Gay Parisiennes. Also billed are Maurice and Rodell and Vivian Francis, dancers, and Buddy Shaner and Marion Dawn in songs of today. Nelson and the battling cats are also features. Bill Strickland and Al Norton have worked out proper music to accompany the fight.

The Winter Garden Revue currently at the Bamboo Gardens offers Dottie Dunn and Rod Todney in novelty tap numbers, and Ginger Harris in an acrobatic control dance.

Brinkley's continue their policy of no cover or minimum charge. Mac McCaffrey and his orchestra provide music.

Milt Davis, of the Rainbow Room, has some new arrangements of popular songs that are quite amusing.

New faces seem to be a policy at the Hi-Hat. A new vocal trio appears Monday with your favorite song hits.

Ford Lot Transfer Vetoed by Mayor

Richmond, Va., Feb. 24 (AP).—The city ordinance conveying to the State the Ford lot, site for the projected $1,000,000 State library building, lay under the shadow of Mayor J. Fulmer Bright's veto today.

In his veto message Mayor Bright said the city was without assurance the State would appropriate $1,000,000 for the library. The mayor said the interests of both the city and State could "be properly safeguarded" only by making the ordinance a binding contract, incorporating various proposals made by the State.

Man Admits Killing Woman Barkeeper

South Amboy, N. J., Feb. 24 (AP).—A heavy-set laborer, Prosecutor Charles Morris said, admitted the eight-month-old slaying of a woman tavern owner today and casually puffed on a cigar as authorities dug up her body from a shallow grave to which he led them.

The victim was Mrs. Myrtle White, 44, whose disappearance last June provided a mystery that remained unsolved until Frank Wendelek, 47, married and the father of six children, admitted he shot Mrs. White "because she started going around with another man."

Va. Methodist Group Opposes Merger Plan

Richmond, Va., Feb. 24 (AP).—The congregation of the Monument Methodist Church South was on record today as opposed to unification of the Methodist Episcopal Church South with the two other branches of Methodism.

"We believe the plan of unification to be dangerous, and that if adopted, it will be injurious to Methodism in the South," read the resolution adopted by the congregation last night.

The Virginia Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South voted recently to support the plan of unification.

4 Are Indicted In Hagerstown Gaming Drive

Grand Jury Ends Inquiry; Witnesses Reluctant to Testify.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 24.—All forms of illegal gambling in Washington County must stop, Judge Frank G. Wagaman told the grand jury tonight when it presented its report after a week's exhaustive investigation of an alleged gambling racket here. Few indictments resulted because of the reluctance of many of the more than 100 witnesses examined to co-operate.

The court notified the grand jury that it will be reconvened March 28, instead of three months hence, if conditions by that time are not improved.

The net results of the longest session of the grand jury in years were four indictments, one charging the accepting of bets on horse races, the others with gambling. Jacob Polack, who operates a shoe repair establishment here, and who during the period bookmaking was legal here operated one of the largest bookie establishments, was indicted for bookmaking today and gave bond in $1,000. Otha P. Myers, Ralph A. Rhodes and John Wilhide gave bond in $500 each on gambling charges in connection with alleged slot machine operations.

The report of the grand jury asked for an aroused public opinion against illegal gambling and a willingness on the part of citizens to testify, as well as full support of officers whose duties are to enforce the laws. A number of persons sought for questioning by the grand jury, it was reported, disappeared when the jury convened last week.

In commenting upon the report of the grand jury, the court said that it had been estimated that $500,000 is spent here annually in gambling which must be saved for legitimate business.

John Ackerly will give the invocation.

Town Doctors Protest Traffic Signs' Removal

Frederick, Md., Feb. 24 (AP).—Objections to removal of "no parking" signs by physicians and others who have paid for the privilege of posting them in front of their properties, puzzled Frederick police today.

Permission to use the restricting signs was granted under an ordinance which required property owners to pay a nominal fee. Because of the numerous types of signs, ranging from ornate enameled plaques to cardboard warnings, the board of aldermen ruled recently that all signs must be removed and a standard painted arrow, be placed on the curb.

Speaks as the Perfect Average Man

Sinclair Lewis, novelist, who spoke last night at Constitution Hall as the "perfect average man," is shown with Charlotte Knight and Mark Sullivan, political commentator. Lewis nominated Robert Hutchins, president of Chicago University, for President of the United States. He termed Hutchins the "superman."

Sinclair Lewis Picks Hutchins For President

Novelist Lauds Chicago University Head at Constitution Hall.

Sinclair Lewis rubbed his left cheek with his left hand a couple of hundred times, unleashed upon last night's Constitution Hall audience his boundless and uncorralled vocabulary and finally nominated Robert Maynard Hutchins for President of the United States.

Undoubtedly referring to the big McNutt doings of the last few days, Lewis spoke of "the new mode in American political procedure whereby candidates do not wait for conventions which may be stampeded by weariness, cajolery, or other cause." Office boys usually get a trial before they're put on the payroll, he said, and "the time has almost come when this country might hear about its President before he is elected."

Speaking as the perfect average man whom "the tax people chase, the Army defends and who must drive on the roads the Government builds," the novelist quit his worldwide wordy meanderings to name as the qualities of his ideal President:

Integrity, ideals, ideas, executive ability, executive experience, personality and experience, humor ("like Lincoln and Roosevelt") not made by publicity, no political tie-up.

Met Him Sunday.

"In other words, a superman," said Lewis, pausing.

"He is Robert Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago. I met him for the first time last Sunday night."

Lewis, as you probably know, is a strange sort of gent; a sort of super-lazy super-genius; a man whose trade is making fun of the middleman with just that touch that makes the middleman love it and think its some other middleman all the time. He's made a lot of money and a lot of enemies with his wandering words and his straight-aimed written ones. He undoubtedly aspires to be America's Shaw.

Quicker with words and thoughts than even the most experienced reporters, he confounds his interviewers. Adept at phrases he keeps forum audiences awake late thinking of retorts they might have made. But last night Sinclair Lewis, after he was through with the introductory half hour of wisecracks which he figured his audience expected, became for a few minutes as sincere a middleman citizen as there is in America.

Gives His Reasons.

After the fireworks, Lewis presented to his surprised audience concrete reasons why the young university president should lead the country. He sketched his life, told how he was "the only person ever born in Brooklyn except Walt Whitman who ever emerged," how after two years of war he became dean of Yale law school at 26, bow at 30 he was president of Chicago.

He told of the educational reforms he had instituted, called his idealism that "of an even greater Woodrow Wilson." Lewis said the United States, for the first time facing a world-wide threat to all democracy, might dispose of political parties, nominate the best man.

"I am for him because he is not a candidate, because he doesn't know I am speaking for him here tonight, because he is not a favorite son and because he has no political organization back of him," the writer concluded.

As a sort of postscript to the address, Lewis, reminded that the advertised title of his speech had been "How to make your friends go with the wind," delivered himself of an old-fashioned castigation of Dale Carnegie, the man who preceded him on the series sponsored by the Washington Forum.

New "Gideon Bibles."

Using as text passages from Carnegie's best seller, he declared the tome which "has taken the place of Gideon Bibles in hotels," is a real danger, because it advocates the making of dollars through personality and front above technical knowledge and learning for learning's sake.

Comparing Hutchins and Carnegie, Lewis said of the educator:

"He is actually such an anarchist as to believe that professors are more important than athletic coaches, that examinations at stated times are not infallible tests of knowledge, that the wisdom of Shakespeare, the Bible and Aristophanes still is higher than the wisdom of Dale Carnegie."

Before his address, Lewis warned that this was the last of 25 speeches and that they could expect anything. "I'm going to be a private citizen again," he said, "and after tonight I won't be an authority on anything."

Nice Embarks On Inspection Of Oyster Bars

Governor Wants Dredgers' Opinion of State's Policy.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Feb. 24.—Gov. Harry W. Nice left Baltimore tonight aboard the State steamer McLean, flagship of Maryland's "oyster navy," for a week-end tour of Chesapeake Bay oystering grounds.

The Governor said he would visit the oyster bars to "see for myself the true conditions of oysters in the State."

Capt. Amos Creighton, commander of the State conservation patrol fleet, was in command of the McLean. No specific route was selected for the trip, Gov. Nice said, and the selection of oyster beds to be visited was left to Capt. Creighton's discretion.

"I want to try and see and talk with the dredgers and tongers on the bars, and get them to give their opinion of the conservation situation," he added.

The trip will end Sunday afternoon.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 24 (AP).—The Anne Arundel Board of County Commissioners today adopted a resolution requesting the State Road Commission to prepare estimates on the replacement costs of the Spa Creek and Stoney Creek bridges.

The board also requested the State Roads Commission to remove five oak trees on the Fort George G. Meade road as a means of protecting school children from traffic danger.

Record U. S. Debt Reported; Deficit Is $1,008,685,794

By the Associated Press.

The Federal deficit has passed the $1,000,000,000 point and the debt has risen to a new record high of $37,616,605,571, the Treasury said yesterday.

Dr. Townsend Changes Mind; Will Fight Jail

Arriving to Serve Term for Contempt, He 'Talks Things Over.'

Dr. Francis E. Townsend yesterday changed quickly from martyr to fighter. He arrived in town prepared to serve 30 days in the District Jail for contempt of a House committee, but after talking things over with Elisha Hanson, his lawyer, announced he would appeal to the United States Supreme Court.

Meantime the gaunt, 71-year-old physician, who would have Uncle Sam give 10,000,000 "old folks" a monthly pension of $200 to bring back prosperity, will make speeches in Philadelphia and Brooklyn and then go to Florida. He said his followers down there had been "clamoring" for him.

Changes His Mind.

"Getting off the train early yesterday, Dr. Townsend told reporters that he would enter the District Jail immediately "unless they bar the doors against me." However, after talking to Hanson, he issued the following statement:

"The principle involved is so tremendous that I feel as do hundreds of my friends that this case should be fought to a finish.

"Being without funds to prosecute a further appeal, I have asked my counsel, who have represented me up to now, if they would be willing to carry on for me, and they have agreed to do so because of the principle involved and their sense of obligation to a client. They will now proceed to ask the Supreme Court to review the case."

Spent All His Funds.

Dr. Townsend said he had never been able to "accumulate" any of the money that had come to him as leader of the Old Age Revolving Pensions organization. He said he had spent it on the movement as fast as he received it.

"I haven't any more today than when I started," he said.

The reason he broke with Earl Clements, his erstwhile associate, Townsend said, was because Clements insisted on saving his share of the dimes, nickels and pennies that rolled in from the old folks.

Insists Group Is Growing.

Dr. Townsend admitted his organization had encountered "apathy" after the 1936 election, but insisted it was growing again. His own faith in the pension plan, he said, is stronger today than ever. Give the old folks $200 a month, compel them to spend it, he said, and unemployment and misery will disappear from the land.

"Wouldn't you like to look forward to $200 a month after you are 60?" he asked his interviewer.

He said the Townsend organization had now been purged of the "drinkers and carousers," as well as those who had been piling up debts.

"Goaded" Into It.

Explaining his action in walking out on a House Committee that was investigating OARP, Townsend said he had been "goaded" into it, and expressed the belief that he did just what the committee members hoped he would do.

"There was nothing but malice behind the investigation," he said. "To begin with, Representative Jasper Bell, of Missouri, gets up in the House and says I am a scoundrel, a racketeer that ought to be in jail. Then Bell is made chairman of the investigating committee—prosecutor, judge and jury. What could be expected from a set-up like that?"

Dr. Townsend to Fight 30-Day Term

Ickes Address to Britain Condemned as Dangerous to Peace of America.

The recent broadcast to the British Empire by Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes was denounced in the House yesterday by Representative Taber (Republican), of New York. Taber declared the broadcast which Ickes had said he delivered as an "individual," was "dangerous to the peace and liberty of this country."

"I call on the President to explain if this broadcast had the approval of the Administration," said Taber. "I call on him to say whether he is embarking on a program of Stalin of Russia, or Hitler of Germany to promote Nazism in the United States." The speaker concluded by terming the speech "the most dangerous thing to international relations that has come in a generation."

An immediate investigation by the Federal Trade Commission of automobile manufacturer-dealer relations was recommended yesterday by the House Interstate Commerce Committee. A resolution introduced by Representative Withrow (Progressive), Wisconsin, calling for such an inquiry was approved by the committee.

The resolution is similar to one approved by the Senate Commerce Committee a month ago. It authorizes a $50,000 appropriation for the investigation and would have the commission report its findings to Congress.

America's foreign policy has suffered a reversal with England's "change of front" toward European dictatorships, said Senator Hiram Johnson (Republican), California. He said he thought it was time to renew his query about the Nation's foreign policy. Secretary Hull recently replied to Senator Johnson's question denying there was any military or naval pact with Great Britain.

Grasshoppers and other insect pests will be fought to the tune of $2,000,000 under a bill on which the Senate completed action yesterday. The measure which now goes to the White House also contains a $5,000,000 appropriation to begin the new crop control program.

Groups Forcing Doctrines Upon Schools Scored

John Dewey Society Names D. A. R., Legion as Foes of Democracy.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 24.—Curtailment of academic freedom by "pressure groups" which seek to impose their doctrines on the Nation's school children was held by the John Dewey Society today to be "definitely on the increase."

Describing it as one of the "most vital issues of the day," the society said in announcing its 1938 yearbook that teachers have been reprimanded and "even dismissed from their jobs for teaching accepted facts about history, science and civics which, for one reason or another, were disagreeable to certain groups in their communities."

Progressive as well as conservative organizations which seek to hamstring school teachers with rules and regulations, both during and after class hours, were denounced in the yearbook as enemies of democracy.

Among them were listed the "ancestor worshipers"—with the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Sons of the American Revolution and the United Daughters of the Confederacy included in that category—military organizations like the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and patriotic organizations like the National Civic Federation, the Paul Reveres and the Kay Men of America.

"These organizations sponsor a peculiar brand of patriotism and an exaggerated nationalism," the publication said. "They seek to repress teachers who do not favor their program of imperialism, huge armaments and jingoism."

The yearbook was prepared by Dr. Boyd H. Bode and Dr. Harold B. Alberty, both professors of education at Ohio State University. It was edited by several other progressive educators. The John Dewey Society is composed primarily of liberals and progressives.

Cost of Living Boost Blamed On Price-Fixing

Results of Trade Group's Inquiry Will Go to Roosevelt Soon.

By the United Press.

The Federal Trade Commission soon will inform President Roosevelt that monopolistic and price-fixing practices have sharply boosted the cost of living, it was learned last night.

On November 16, the commission began a Nation-wide investigation of food and clothing prices at the request of Mr. Roosevelt, and will file a formal report about April 1.

The report, some sections of which have been drafted, will show:

That price-fixing and monopolistic practices, against which the Chief Executive has ordered a concerted drive, have hiked living costs in many lines.

That the Miller-Tydings act permitting price-fixing contracts between manufacturers and retailers and between manufacturers and distributors of standard brand goods in States with fair trade practice acts, contributed materially to the increases.

In asking the inquiry Mr. Roosevelt cited instances of what he called "unwholesome methods of competition." In consequence, he is expected to make the report part of a special message on business practices.

Administration leaders doubt that legislation based upon the findings can be prepared before next year because it will take the Department of Justice considerable time to complete its recommendations for revision of the anti-trust statutes.

Receiver of Bank Files Suit on Note

Boston, Feb. 24 (AP).—Declaring Robert Fechner, of Quincy, had failed to satisfy a judgment of $2,500 against him, for non-payment of a note, Cary A. Hardee, receiver of the Commercial National Bank of Washington, today brought suit for that amount in Federal court.

Hardee asserted the valuable Quincy Kennard estate, formerly owned by Fechner, was transferred to Fechner's wife, through a third party, in an effort to avoid its attachment.

The Fechner address listed in court records was that of the national director of the CCC. Neither Fechner nor his wife, Claire, named in the papers, could be reached here for comment.

New Camera Sees When Eye Fails To

Actions too fast for the human eye to see, such as the firing of a shotgun, the bursting of a bubble and the popping of corn, are made visible in remarkable new motion pictures taken at a speed of 6,000 exposures a second to be shown before members of the National Geographic Society in an illustrated lecture by H. E. Edgerton tonight at Constitution Hall.

With the high-speed camera, developed by Edgerton and associates at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, it is possible to record in slow motion the flicker of a snake's tongue, water gurgling from a jug and human muscles contracting and expanding.

Biological Index Is Discovered Predicting Person's Life Span

Pulse Rate and Body Shape Used to Determine Who Shall Survive Attacks of Disease Sufficiently to Expect Ripe Age.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 24.—Discovery of a biological index that predicts the length of a person's life in average figures after he is adult was reported here tonight by Dr. Raymond Pearl, famous biologist of the Johns Hopkins University.

Dr. Pearl also reported the first "life table" on tobacco smoking. It showed that all smoking, even in moderation, shortens life.

He talked to the New York Academy of Medicine on "the search for longevity." He made the first public announcement of the "index" for foretelling length of life.

His figures covered only those persons liable to die of heart disease and blood-vessel troubles. Similar indices have been found for pneumonia and cancer.

The indices are biological measurements, ranging from pulse rate to body shape. They show in effect who shall survive the attacks of disease sufficiently to expect a ripe old age.

In the heart and blood vessel class two groups of white men, 193 each, were compared. They were first seen in ages ranging from 20 to 60, an average of 40. They were followed until all died.

One group was long-lived; the other short-lived. The long-lived men averaged 26 years apiece more than the others.

These long-lived men had slower pulse rates. The differences, Dr. Pearl said, were quite small, around four beats a minute less. But this slight difference was statistically significant. The men who lived long averaged 6 pounds each less weight. They had smaller chest girths at expiration of breath, and smaller waists.

The tobacco smoking tables, Dr. Pearl said, show that "moderate smokers' lives are definitely shorter than those of total abstainers."

Similar tables, Dr. Pearl said, show that moderate use of alcohol does not measurably affect longevity.

12 Persons Held After 9 Numbers Raids in S.W. Area

Fifteen policemen raided nine alleged small "numbers joints" in the Southwest yesterday and arrested 11 colored persons and one white man on charges of conspiracy, operating a lottery, and violation of liquor tax laws.

Police charged the white man, who gave his name as William B. Rowe, 49, 1502 Nineteenth street northeast, was the "pick-up man" for a series of numbers places. He was charged with conspiracy to violate the gaming laws.

Vice squad police yesterday arrested two colored men, picked up separately, charged with operating a lottery. They were Joseph S. Bruce, colored, 51, 2036 Seventeenth street northwest, and Benny L. Sullivan, colored, 39, 2002 Seventeenth street northwest.

New Death Date Is Set for Slayer Of Mrs. Goodwin

Justice Jesse C. Atkins in District Court yesterday reprieved Norman W. Robinson, colored slayer of Mrs. Florence Goodwin, 42, of 1102 Sixteenth street northwest, who was to have been electrocuted in the District jail today. The new date set for the electrocution was fixed for March 18.

David A. Pine, acting United States attorney said Robinson was sentenced while there was pending an appeal which later was dismissed. The Government thought it best to resentence Robinson.

Physician Blamed For Traffic Death

A coroner's inquest into the traffic death of Mrs. Frances Johnston, 72, yesterday held Dr. Ernest L. Morgan, 1909 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, for the Police Court under the negligent homicide act.

Mrs. Johnston, who lived at 1734 H street northwest, was the mother of Dr. Francis Johnston, mathematics professor at George Washington University.

THE WILKEN FAMILY
BLENDED WHISKEY—IT'S OUR FAMILY'S WHISKEY, NEIGHBOR!

It wasn't take Grandpa a second to spot the real thing!
If there ever was a distiller with the knack of putting his finger on the kind of grain calculated to turn out tasty whiskey, Grandpa Wilken was him. Why he'd act just as tickled as a kid when he got hold of a specially good batch! We learned off Grandpa how to size up grain.
Harry E. Wilken

Grandpa taught us how to spot grain that makes extra tasty whiskey!

Just take note of the special tastiness this grain gives to Our Family's Recipe!

You'd be real surprised at how much extra tastiness us distillers can put into our whiskey by knowing all the little tricks of sorting out the particular kind of grain that's exactly suited for good whiskey making.

That's where our family is so lucky. There never was a distiller that had the hang of it like Grandpa Wilken—and it was off him that the rest of our family learned all the ins and outs of sizing up grain—and of picking out just the kind with the makings of real tastiness in it. In making our personal recipe we don't bother with any other kind of grain at all. And that's got a lot to do with the special tastiness Our Family's Whiskey has got!

*X WASHINGTON: FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 25, 1938 21

This Morning..

By Walter Haight.

Charles Hart, who celebrates his twentieth anniversary as principal of Eastern High School today, did not win his letter for competitive sports as a student at the school he now heads. However, if high school athletics attempted to pay off Charles Hart what they owe him in monograms, about the only feasible way would be to back up a truck at the school and dump a few tons of those alphabetical soup letters.

HAIGHT.

"So you want to talk of athletics? Just a second, I'll call Chief Guyon. He is our authority on athletics," insisted Mr. Hart after our exchange of greetings. I might have fallen for his modest gesture but for the fact that I have known Mr. Hart since the days when I was All-High waterboy at Business High School.

"No, Mr. Hart, I want to talk about high school athletics and you," I replied.

"Just a minute," came back Mr. Hart and, turning to his secretary, he said, "Get out the file on Chief Guyon."

Finally, with a shrug of his shoulders and "I am afraid I shall make a dull subject," Mr. Hart surrendered.

Aside from a dash of tennis in his youth, Mr. Hart has taken no physical part in athletics, but he has been prominently identified with high school sports since 1899. He had been a teacher at Business High only two days when a group of students, headed by Clarence Dodge, now a vice president of the Weaver Bros Real Estate firm, asked him to take charge of athletics. He consented and, despite a mountain of other duties down through the years, he never has lost interest in or failed to work for the betterment of high school athletics.

* * * *

Prior to 1901 there were no eligibility rules applying to high school athletes. That year, Mr. Hart helped draft the first set which included only three rules: "To represent a school in athletics a boy must be a bonafide student. He must be under 21 years of age. He must take four major subjects." No mention was made of passing marks.

In naming some of the early century stars at Business High, Mr. Hart revealed that "Buck" Werber, father of Bill Werber, the present infielder for the Philadelphia Athletics, was the star pitcher of the 1900 team. The elder Werber, as well as Bill's mother, were among his pupils.

Mr. Hart said his first big thrill in high school athletics came in 1903 when Business High won its first championship in any sport, taking the city baseball crown. Some of the outstanding stars of that and the period immediately following were Joseph Loughrin, Percy Pickford, James Fitzgerald and Tubby Walsh.

* * * *

He ranks Harry Harris, afterward one of the East's outstanding college football stars, and the Wise boys, Ray, Ralph, Buck and Joe, as the best gridiron players while he was at that school and places high on his list Richmond B. (Bullet) Keech, now vice president of the Public Utilities Commission.

"I came to Eastern in 1918 and two years later we obtained Chief Guyon. From that moment, athletics were on the upgrade here," said Mr. Hart, as he fingered a pamphlet marked "Mr. Guyon." He did not tell me that Eastern's athletic fund was some $3,000 in the "red" and that he balanced the budget in a short time, but it was with enthusiasm that he showed me Eastern's record for the last ten years.

The school has won five basketball titles and tied for two others, eight baseball crowns and tied for one and one football championship, tying for two others. He names Andy Oehman, Bob Snyder, Al Kidwell, Bruce Kessler, Tommy Nolan, Julie Radice and Harry Bassin among the best athletes since he has been at Eastern.

* * * *

One of the most thrilling basket ball games he ever saw was the Central-Eastern title game in 1927. Due to the bedlam, the referee did not hear the timekeeper's whistle and Cy Hogarth's shot from midfloor went through the ring. A near riot followed. A replay was decided upon and that game also ended without a real decision.

Mr. Hart is in favor of retaining baseball as a high school sport.

He believes track is most beneficial of all athletes for boys and contends that any healthy boy can find a branch of track suitable for himself. Then again, says Mr. Hart, a boy may have native ability that will allow him to star at football, baseball or basketball but in track, achievements are the result of hard practice and self-training.

As we were saying goodbyes, Mr. Hart placed a couple of sheets of paper in my hand. I looked at them when I was outside the building. They were two pages from Chief Guyon's file.

Louis Draws Thomas for April 1 Bout

Second Tune-Up Carded for Champion With Adamick Victim.

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, Feb. 24.—All fistic paths lead unswervingly to the forthcoming return match for the world heavyweight title between champion Joe Louis and challenger Max Schmeling. And it looks like they are going to be crowded, whether the big fight of 1938 is held in the Yankee Stadium, as expected, or, on a sudden shift play, in Chicago or Detroit . . .

On the heels of his three-round knockout of Nathan Mann last night before a $100,000 "house," Louis was matched today for the second of three "title tune-ups." It will be held in the Chicago Stadium, April 1, and the Brown Bomber's opponent will be Harry Thomas, the Eagle Bend, (Minn.) trial-horse who was bounced all over the Madison Square Garden ring last December by Schmeling and stopped in the eighth round.

Thomas got the match, not only because he offers a special yardstick for further comparison of Louis and Schmeling, but because of his "fighting finish" against young Jimmy Adamick of Detroit in the Garden last week. Adamick, who won a close decision, turned down an offer to become jarring Joe's next victim.

Schmeling vs. Dudas.

Meantime Schmeling is booked, in April at Hamburg, for the third and last of his own tune-up series. Steve Dudas, veteran New Jersey heavyweight, will be the party of the second part.

It all adds up to the best and undoubtedly the most profitable heavyweight build-up program since 1927, the year of the second Dempsey-Tunney fight. Regardless of where the return Louis-Schmeling match takes place it figures to draw close to $1,500,000. It's a "natural" that is now being throughly re-flavored, to offset the two-year lapse since the German flattened the Negro.

The movement to get back on the Louis band-wagon was well under way today. Frank (Doc) Bagley, veteran fistic handler, spoke up for a big contingent when he remarked: "The Louis of last night would have stopped Schmeling in five rounds." Referee Arthur Donovan opined Louis has "come back a long way" and that there's more paralysis than ever in the Negro's left hand.

Same Arrangements.

Louis-Thomas arrangements call for the same percentage split that prevailed last night—40 per cent for the champion, 12½ for the challenger. Joe's share of net receipts of $102,999, including radio and movies of last night's encounter, amounted to $40,522. Mann drew $12,158, five times as much as he got for any previous bout.

Promoter Mike Jacobs may pick the bomber's final "tune-up" opponent from the following: Al McCoy, of Boston; Andre Lenglet, of France, now campaigning on the West Coast; Buddy Baer, Max's brother, or Gunnar Barlund, Finnish heavyweight.

The idea is to give Louis his final "prep" in May, possibly in Detroit. Adamick would be the best "draw" in the motor city but his pilot, Jack Kearns said today Jimmy would not be "ready" for Louis for at least six months.

Mat Crown To Eastern

Western Second, Trails by 9 Points.

Marching along to another banner sports year, Eastern High last night added the fourth annual interscholastic wrestling championship to its list of athletic triumphs at Roosevelt High gymnasium.

Fred Mulvey's Gordon Junior High boys won the title in the junior high division of the tournament, which was sponsored by the Community Center Department. Gordon had 18 points. Its nearest rivals were Alice Deal and Leland, of Bethesda, with 11 points each. Next came Powell with 8, Paul with 5, Taft with 4 and Calvert with 3. St. Anne's failed to score.

In winning the tourney for the second year in a row, the Lincoln Parkers came within four points of doubling the score of its closest competitor, Western, the count being 26 to 15. Anacostia, the baby of the meet ran Western a close race, losing by 2 points to finish third.

Kendall and Woodrow Wilson High finished in a tie for fourth, each having five points, while Roosevelt and Devitt brought up the rear with three points each.

One of the winners in the junior high class was 84-pound Fred Vinson, of Alice Deal, son of Representative Fred Vinson, of Kentucky, who defeated a fellow teammate, Bill Conant with a time advantage of 2 minutes and 15 seconds.

Three of the favorites came through as expected in the persons of Kirk Millar and Zeke Clift, of Eastern, and Joe Farmer, of Anacostia. Millar, captain of Eastern, last year's 155 pound champ, took the 165 pound honors by defeating Charles Krey, of Western by a fall in 3:45. Clift won the 155 pound event, pinning Bill Leach, of Woodrow Wilson in 3:56 while Farmer threw Harry Pritchett, of Devitt, in 1:50.

In team scoring first place counted five, second, three and falls, one.

Gamecocks, Citadel Favored in Tourney

Champion Maryland Team Is Dark-Horse Entry in Classy Field as Southern Ring Event Opens Tonight—Action on for 2 Days.

By Bob Garrison.

Fifty boxers, representing seven Southern Conference schools, stand ready to climb through the ropes and fight their way to conference championships tonight when the twelfth annual classic opens at College Park.

Eighteen bouts are listed for first round action that will see four Maryland mittmen take the first step toward successfully defending the crown they inherited from last year's championship team of seniors. Four other entries have drawn byes and will not see action until semi-finals tomorrow afternoon. Finals are set for tomorrow night.

Promptly at 7 p. m., Maryland's George "Red" Dorr will clash with Bobby Price, Duke 115-pounder, and the tournament will be on. On into the night will go the bouts until the field has been reduced to the round of four in each of the eight classes.

Two Co-favored.

Strangely enough, the two teams that traveled the farthest to complete, Citadel and South Carolina, are favorites to relieve the Terps of the title. Citadel posted a 5-3 victory over the Gamecocks, recently, to take a prominent position in the pre-tournament choices and will offer in Hugh Rogers, heavyweight, one of the favorites.

Other odds on favorites include Danny Farrar, Duke, in the 145-pound class, and Russell Dorn, of Clemson, in the class 10 pounds heavier. Farrar lost to Ivan Nedomatsky, of Maryland, in the finals last year, but is expected to have little opposition this year. Dorn will find things a little tougher in his division, however, than last year, when he won the middleweight crown.

Benny Alperstein, National Intercollegiate 135-pound champion, has drawn a tough assignment in the opening round, being pitted against Ripper Murray, of Clemson, in his quest of the 125-pound title. He has fought both 135 and 145 pound foes this season, but was dropped into the featherweight division by Coach Heinie Miller to allow Nathan Askin, other Terp stalwart, to fight in the 135-pound division.

Maryland Dark Horse.

Maryland, with two men, Jose De Peralta, in the 145-pound class, and Newton Cox, 165-pounder, who have fought but once this season, is a long shot favorite to repeat, with North Carolina and Duke also regarded as outsiders.

Action is scheduled for 2:30

Kuhel Signs, Accepts Cut

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Orlando Fla., Feb. 24.—Clark Griffith's hold-out troubles were further diminished today when First Baseman Joe Kuhel accepted a salary cut and penned his name to a 1938 Washington contract.

Kuhel, who was a $10,000 performer last season, is believed to have settled for a $9,000 wage next season. In 1937 the fancy fielding first baseman failed to hit .300 after compiling a .321 average in 1936.

Kuhel's job as the regular first baseman on the Nats is threatened this year by the presence of youthful Jimmy Wasdell, who will be given a thorough trial. Wasdell impressed Manager Bucky Harris with his clever fielding and long-distance hitting proclivities last fall.

The capitulation of Kuhel leaves only Pitchers Wes Ferrell and Monte Weaver and Outfielders Johnny Stone and Al Simmons without the fold. Simmons and Stone are waging a drawn-out salary battle with the Nats' owner.

The Nats' roster was reduced by one today when Griffith sent Second Baseman Jimmy Bloodworth to the Chattanooga Club on option. Bloodworth was unimpressive in his trial with the Nats last fall. Henry Coppola, who is scheuled to come out of retirement after a year away from baseball with a sore pitching arm, will report to the Nats' camp a week late. He has recently undergone an appendix operation.

Uzcudun Tries Comeback.

Salamanca, Spain, Feb. 24 (AP).—Paulino Uzcudun, Basque woodchopper, announced today he had started training at Burgos for a ring comeback. Once a trial horse for the world's best heavyweights, Paulino renounced the ring when he joined the insurgent army. Now, however, he is preparing for a series of exhibition before starting "serious fighting."

James Pins Martinelli

Backdrop Finishes Foe; War Eagle Fouls.

(Pictures on Page 23.)

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Jesse James and Gino Martinelli, wrestling's top-notch tumbling team, did their exercises together at Turner's Arena last night, James getting three pats on the back and Martinelli a game leg after 40½ minutes of fast calisthenics.

The result made James' claim of superiority over the handsome Italian official, for he pinned him the night before at the Coliseum in New York.

The match featured a fair card, rounded out by the following bouts: Boris Demitroff drew with Walter Podolak; Tony Siano pinned Carlos Montanez after 18¾ with a flying tackle; Louis Bacigalupi threw Chief War Eagle in 25 minutes with a disqualification (aided by the referee), and Pancho Valdez disposed of Nick Packos in 16 minutes, using a body press.

James used a backdrop to finish Martinelli after a series of body slams by both boys. Martinelli was about to give his opponent another heave-ho over his shoulder when the Greek double-crossed him by collapsing. They went down together, James on top, and it was a comparatively easy matter for him to keep Gino there long enough for Referee Al Baksh to lope over and end the match.

Action was at a brisk pace while it lasted. They did everything but pick their teeth, and James did do a little kicking in the mouth. For the first 37 minutes, however, they confined their efforts to stuff you can get on the radio any morning at 10 o'clock. First James put Martinelli down and sat on him, then the Italian had his turn on top. For variety Martinello clamped a crab-lock on James, and soon after fell into a face-twisting (to designate pain) rocking chair split.

The audience thought it was all over about five minutes before the actual end when James picked his adversary up and splattered him on the mat like a heavy hot cake. But they sat down in amazement as Martinelli reversed the procedure and spattered James on the carpet. The splattering business continued up until the final three seconds when the loser subsided with a sodden and sudden squwush.

Fans Crowd Court; Lights Are Dimmed

Harte Misses on Tying Shot Amid Boos Following Long Delay.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Chick Harte, high-scoring St. Thomas College forward, missed a foul shot that would have tied Catholic University last night, under the following conditions: The game was not officially over, yet half the lights in the C. U. Gym were out. Fans were lined up on each side of the foul line, jeering and hooting at the top of their voices. The officials stood by, waiting to order an extra period, if Harte made his shot.

C. U. won the game, 38 to 37.

It was one of the wildest, most disorderly and roughest games ever played in the District. A 15-minute dispute occurred at the end of the game with few in the gym knowing who had won the game, whether it was ended, or if there would be an extra period.

It also saw one of the oddest records in collegiate basketball established by the Tommies, who in a 21-game schedule won all of 12 games at home, but lost all nine games on the road, including last night's encounter.

Ambrose in Star Role.

Wayne Ambrose, the stocky C. U. forward, who is pacing the District scorers, added to his lead with a 16-point performance, including the winning points, that, however, trailed Chick Harte by 3. The latter scored 7 field goals and 6 foul shots for 21 points. Irish Carroll trailed Ambrose with 13.

Two incidents preceded the dynamite finish that alone were unusual. Ambrose made a basket that did not go through the cords but was allowed because the net was caught around the rim. Immediately following this, St. Thomas scored three straight points that were not allowed because a whistle preceded them.

Leading up to the finish, the Cards took an early 12-to-5 lead with Irish Carroll pacing the attack, but Harte led a visitors' rally that knotted the score at 12 all. Guyon, Pirro and Ambrose then paced the Red Birds to a 24-19 lead at half time.

The game—that was apparently out of the officials' hands soon after the opening whistle—see-sawed through the last half. Savine gave the Tommies the lead for the first time at 29-28, but Carroll put the Cards back ahead at 34-32. Harte gave the visitors another lead at 35-33, but Ambrose tied the score at 35-all with three minutes to play.

Wayne then scored a sensational side-court basket for a 37-35 lead and increased with a conversion from the foul line. With only a few seconds to play, Coleman then brought the St. Thomas team to within two points of the lead at 36-38.

Harte Is Fouled.

Then a C. U. player shoved Harte just as he was about to shoot, and at the same time the whistle blew, ending the game. There was only a second or two between the two incidents.

The St. Thomas squad insisted Harte had two foul shots coming but the Catholic U. timer said the game was over before Harte was fouled. Arguments went back and fourth, with the fans joining in with the coaches and players in telling Referees Boyd and Simpson what happened first. Lights were thrown off in the mean time, adding to the confusion.

After 15 minutes of discussion, during which the Catholic U., players were down getting dressed, Simpson allowed Harte his two fouls, but did not clear the floor.

Harte stepped to the foul line, with some 50 fans lined on the foul line, and the gym in semi-darkness. He made the first shot good. His second effort was short of it's mark, giving C. U. the victory.

D. C. Garden Sanctioned

The Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday approved the plans of the Capitol Garden Co., Inc., which will give Washington an adequate indoor sports arena by next winter. The company now will begin to sell stock, and work on the building, to be located at Second and M streets northeast, is expected to get underway at an early date.

The stock outlay will consist of 6,000 shares preferred, at a par value of $50, plus 12,000 shares of common.

The arena will have facilities for ice hockey, basketball, boxing and track meets. It is expected to cost about $300,000.

Woodward Pinmen Hold League Lead

The pace-setting Woodward & Lothrop bowling team, apparently heading for the Department Store League Championship, increased its lead to three games by taking the odd skirmish from Lansburghs last night at Recreation Alleys. Tom Scrivener's 358 led the winning charge.

Kann's bowlers, defending champions, led by Robert Sproul's 360, made it six in a row by sweeping their set from the second place Credit Bureau, despite Dave Williams' 372.

The Hecht Co. deadlocked the Credit Bureau for second place when the Hechtmen took a 2-1 decision from Lamb Seal & Stencil Co.

Rome May Get 1940 Olympics in 'Deal'

Japan, Harassed by Boycott Threat, May Make Shift; British Group Factor; Obtained Games From Italy at Last Meeting.

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 24.—Harassed by a threatened boycott of the 1940 Olympiad, Japan may make a deal with Italy to shift the games from Tokyo to Rome.

This possibility is being discussed in Britain Olympic circles, where a boycott of the Tokyo games now is under consideration. The British Amateur Athletic Association already has decided on such a boycott and will ask the I. A. A. F. take similar action at its Paris meeting, February 28 and March 1.

Under the "deal" Italy would undertake to stage the games in 1940 provided Japan is given the thirteenth Olympiad in 1944.

Another such "deal" gave Tokyo the games in the first place. In 1935 the international Olympic Committee awarded the 1940 games to Rome.

Japan, remembering the 2,600th anniversary of the founding of the Japanese Empire came in 190, set its diplomatic machinery in operation to have the games changed.

The Japanese Ambassador in Rome went to see Mussolini about it. Mussolini agreed and the plan was taken to the I. O. C. Several members of the committee resented this as an outside political maneuver, but the plan was finally passed.

On the basis that Rome could have had the games in 1940, Italy now is assuming she will get them in 1944. The 1944 games will not be awarded until the I. O. C. meets in 1939 but Italy has already planned a new stadium seating 100,000 and ten new hotels.

Great Britain, however, has two other ideas. The first is that London should have the 1944 games. The second is that it is time the Olympics were protected from the political controversy which inevitably results when they are awarded to a militaristic country.

Italy will be advised of Britain's views on the 1944 games when the I. O. C. meets at Cairo, March 10-11. At that meeting Lord Aberdare will invite the committee to London for its 1939 meeting when the 1944 games will be awarded.

It is felt here that when Italy finds Britain bidding against her she may be willing to take the games of 1940 if Japan by any chance voluntarily gives them up.

With the various delegates already on their way to Cairo for the meeting, three facts are evident: 1—There is no widespread boycott or even sympathy for a boycott of the Tokyo Olympiad in Europe; 2—Japan will not give up the games or make a deal with Italy unless the Far Eastern conflict and the threatened British boycott become much more severe; 3—The I. O. C. is in danger of being divided into political blocs in world affairs.

British Olympic officials are openly afraid of any political alignment in the committee. Still, it is recognized here Germany, Italy and Japan, the members of the anti-Comintern pact, will undoubtedly stick together in the disputes over the games which likely will arise in Cairo.

Judge Signs With Hoyas

Joe Judge, former Washington first baseman, and coach of Georgetown University's undefeated 1937 baseball team, was signed to a two-year contract to handle the Hoya nine yesterday and immediately made preparations to face an 18-game schedule.

Judge piloted the Hilltoppers through a perfect 14-game season last spring and will be aided this year by the return of many of the team members who accumulated the impressive record.

A cancellation of the St. Bonaventure game, originally scheduled for Monday, will lead Georgetown University basketball team to close its season, tomorrow night, in New Haven, Conn., against Yale.

Tonight the Hoyas will clash with the Temple University's five, at Philadelphia, in their last conference clash. The Owls have clinched the conference championship, having lost only to the Hoyas. Coach Fred Mesmer's men, who have had considerable difficulty winning on the road, will be seek-

Flying Lee, $23.50 Shot, Wins Hialeah Feature Over Muddy Track

Long Prices Dominate on Florida Card

Overnight Rains Bring Sloppy Oval; Opener to Xanthein.

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 24.—One of those rarities of Florida racing—a muddy track—prevailed here this afternoon as an off-day program was staged under sunny skies. Overnight and early morning rains left the racing strip thoroughly soaked, and as the day wore on, the going was getting tougher for horses as well as for players of public choices.

The Cresthaven purse, a mile event for Grade C 3-year-olds, saw the talent going down for the sixth straight time when the W. J. Sprow-Mrs. K. Ramsey entry of Birdlea and Stringalong, which closed at odds of 3 to 5, failed to do better than third.

H. P. Headley's Flying Lee, paying $23.50, suddenly regained her top form in the mud and lasted to win by a neck from William Zeknor's Memoirs. Birdlea was beaten a half length for the place, while Stringalong was headed out of third money. Flying Lee needed 1:42 3-5 to negotiate the eight furlongs.

Greenski broke on top from the outside position and stole a long lead in the first quarter mile, with Eddie Arcaro holding down second place astride the ultimate winner. Boggle was eliminated at the break, which was a poor one.

Greenski "came back" near the far turn and Flying Lee darted into a narrow lead around the bend. The pennant filly widened her advantage after turning for home but was forced to the limit in the finish strides. Memoirs, next to last at the start, closed with a game challenge on the extreme outside to outfinish Birdlea. Stringalong raced well up and seemed a threat entering the stretch, only to tire in the final drive.

The going held no terrors for the first-time-starter Xanthein, a road son of Theatrical that came up a "good thing" in the 3-furlong opening test for juvenile maidens of the male division. Although a bit slow to get into his stride, the light coated colt worked his way up with a game exhibition and prevailed over the pacemaking High Blame by a half length. Satin Marvel always well up, lost the place by another half length. Galpen lacked speed in the role of favorite. Xanthein ran the distance in 35 1-5 to return $11.10.

Day is done, a filly that couldn't get close in two previous starts at this point, woke up with a bang in the second race. Mud seemed to work a miracle with the daughter of Brown Bud, for she raced within range of the early pace and ran over the leaders in the last furlong to click by two lengths under Kempton Knott. She returned $42.80 and rounded out a daily double that paid $563.80. There were 31 winning tickets sold on the combination. Saranite saved second money by a half length from Time and Again, while Suburbanite, the choice, dropped back to fourth after showing early speed.

Minstrel Star Wins.

Minstrel Star, a gray gelding with odds of 6 to 1 against his chances, was hard ridden to eke out a neck decision over Grand Token, a well-backed newcomer in the field of seven maiden 3-year-olds that contested the third event. Paul Scarlet burned up the talent's money by finishing third, three lengths away. Grand Token raced Paul Scarlet into defeat and held on well, but Minstrel Star caught him at the eighth pole and outlasted the K. T. Dawes representative.

The long shot players prevailed again in the fourth race of 6 furlongs, which went to the $41 for $2 shot, Dusky Maid, by a length and a half. Nance was second, with Spanish Maid three lengths farther back. Harvey Keppler had Dusky Maid close to the early leaders, Conniption and Nance sent his mount into a clear advantage after straightening for home, and made the grade in a drive. Early Evening broke slowly and never gave the talent a chance to get excited.

SARANITE, well up all the way, took a brief lead in the last furlong, but then faltered, yet outlasted TIME AND AGAIN. MINSTREL STAR moved up steadily on the outside after leaving the backstretch, responded courageously when the final issue came and outlasted GRAND TOKEN. The latter, lugged to the front in the run down the backstretch, saved ground rounding the lower turn and made a game effort when challenged, but was unable to stave off the winner. PAUL SCARLET, a forward contender in the early stages, made a game effort when put to a drive, but could not keep pace with the leaders.

DUSKY MAID, a forward contender from the start, saved much ground after leaving the backstretch, gradually improved her position and opened up a winning lead entering the stretch, but was vigorously urged to withstand NANCE'S bid. The latter, on the outside and in closest pursuit of the leader in the early running, was carried wide into the stretch and closed with good courage through the stretch, but could not reach the leader. SPANISH MAID worked her way up and outlasted CONNIPTION.

VASSAR moved into contention rapidly on the inside in the run down the backstretch, forced a steady pace thereafter and shook off SINGING SLAVE through the stretch. SINGING SLAVE, quickest to begin, displayed good speed and held on gamely to the last sixteenth mile and then faltered. DIDUTELLUS, slow to settle into her stride, bettered her position slowly in the last three furlongs and disposed of the others after straightening out into the stretch.

SIXTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $1,000. The Cresthaven. Class C. For 3-year-olds. Start poor from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:35. Off 4:36. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLYING LEE, $23.50, $11.20, $3.00; MEMOIRS, $7.30, $2.70; BIRDLEA (entry), $2.20.

FLYING LEE followed the leader under light restraint in the opening half mile, took command leaving the backstretch and carried the field out entering the stretch and was ridden a sizzag course through the stretch while clear, but preventing her opponents from obtaining a clear course and then bore out in the last 70 yards to block MEMOIRS, which finished with a rush on the outside. MEMOIRS, slow to get going, moved up strongly while going extremely wide in the last quarter mile and just failed to overhaul the winner. BIRDLEA, in near pursuit of the leader on the outside, was unable to secure clear passage in the last three-sixteenths of a mile.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-half miles (out of chute). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 5:08. Off 5:08½. SEAWICK, hustled to the front, drew out into a long lead in the run down the backstretch, was then steadied until straightened into the stretch, and continued gamely under a strong hand ride. BABWRACK moved up steadily on the inside after entering the backstretch and responded stoutly to vigorous pressure through the stretch and outlasted MINE BOY. The latter, intermittently punished in the entire trip, closed resolutely on the outside, but could not get up.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 5:44. Off 5:48. Winner, J. M. PEEDEEQUE, on the outside the entire journey, moved up stoutly rounding the lower turn and closing with a determined challenge through the stretch, wore the leaders down and won going away. MIDSHIPMAN, on the inside in the early running, went into a pocket endeavoring to slip through between the leaders entering the stretch, was taken back and to the inside, then responded to punishment and wore CHRYSMUTE down in the last stride. CHRYSMUTE moved up stoutly entering the stretch, assumed a brief lead, but then faltered.

Abrams' Next Opponent to Go Under Fistic Microscope in Workout

Public Show Is Order of Fight Body

Ciaccio Must Prove He's 'Fit Foe' for Local Middleweight.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Tony Ciaccio, prospective target for George Adame' jabs and right-crosses Monday night, arrives here today to undergo a microscopic examination at the hands of the local boxing commission and complete training for the forthcoming bout.

The itinerant Italian, if you're still interested, belted out Eddie Guerra in five heats Wednesday night at Dick Curley's club in Harrisburg, Pa. Guerra, prodding further into the records, remained upright six rounds with Ivan Nedomatsky here recently, and gave the Baltimorean a good run for his money even though he lost.

Ciaccio has a number of other good victories in his book, but insofar as the commission is concerned he might as well be recently arrived from the amateurs, for that body wants to be shown. The invader's workout this afternoon will be open to the public, and the commission is particularly requested to attend, en masse, or individually.

The commission is doubly anxious to have a peek at Ciaccio because of his Wednesday night engagement. Under the law a fighter engaging in a fight of more than four rounds is ineligible to compete here until six days have elapsed. If he is not cut or injured, however, the rule may be waived.

Meanwhile Abrams' training has been retarded by a slight cold in the chest, which, while not serious, is enough to slow him down. Naturally a lazy gym worker, Abrams looked worse than usual yesterday, but Manager Syd Fishel said he would be ready for the bell Monday.

In Ciaccio the local middleweight contender encounters a man who cannot only ppunch with him, but may outpunch him. He can win, and win by a knockout. But he's no superman, no world's champion, and Abrams has an even chance. The big difference in Ciaccio and Abrams' former opponents seems to be experience and ring age. He's had enough training to be good without being a rundown veteran. He's in his prime as a fighter, with 46 good bouts under his belt.

Fishel does not like the idea of taking Ciaccio this early, but would prefer waiting another month. The District lad's pilot thinks the fans are being unfair when they accuse him of booking set-ups for Abrams, whereas he claims to be bringing him along slowly, breaking him in at a steady, even pace.

The "Toots" Bernstein-Steve Mamakos eight-round semi-final will supply an abundance of action, but an Ivan Nedomatsky-Mamakos scrap would have been better. The former University of Maryland mauler signed to meet the Golden Greek, but developed a sudden cold Wednesday morning and begged off.

This is the second engagement Nedomatsky has ducked here and it looks as though he is picking his spots. Mamakos might not whip Ivan, but would give him a rough half hour in any ring. It would be a fight the fans would appreciate, but the Baltimorean evidently wants no part of the District middleweight.

Local Pros Play Snellenburg Five

Come Sunday, Heurich's Professional quintet will entertain the strong Snellenburg five, of Philadelphia, a team that has won 40 out of 41 basketball tilts this season.

The visitors boast of one of the outstanding free-line tossers in the East in the person of Tom McGrath, former LaSalle College star. Besides McGrath, Snellenburg will bring to town a young lad by the name of McIlheny, who is one of the main reasons why they have chalked up such an impressive record.

Tourney Hard On Favorites

By the United Press.

Coral Gables, Fla., Feb. 24.—Frank Strafaci, defending titlist, teaming with Roy Penzel, of New York, was eliminated from the championship list of the Miami-Biltmore amateur four-ball golf tournament today in a first round which generally was disastrous for favorites.

Strafaci and Penzel, who were upset 2 and 1 by Arnold and Bruno Minkley, of Buffalo, N. Y., were joined on the sidelines by last year's runners-up, P. B. Lucas, former British Walker Cup player, and Fred Hannan, Wallaston, Mass. The latter team lost, 1 down on the twentieth, to William Reed and Richard Kell, of Indianapolis.

Earl Christiansen and Harvey Draughon, Miami's golfing cops who finished in the finals last year, bowed to Joe Bydolek, of Buffalo, N. Y., and Ed Romfh, Miami, 1 down on the nineteenth.

Charley Whitehead, South River, N. J., and Frank Allan, Pittston, medalist team, played to form and trimmed J. A. Boyle and Bob Odum, of New York, 6 and 5.

Dick Ciuci, New York, and Bobby Dunkelberger, Highlands, N. C., beat E. J. Rogers and Harrison Smith, of Oklahoma City, 1 up. Dick Chapman and Billy Meany, Greenwich, Conn., defeated Roger Lowry, Shamokin, Pa., and W. B. Armstrong, Darien, Conn., 3 and 1.

Columbus Boxers Tackle Villanova

Meeting with defeat for the first time since 1931 when it was nosed out by the Citadel last Monday night, Columbus University faces its third major test within a period of eight nights tomorrow when Villanova's ringmen are met at Villanova, Pa.

A week from tonight, March 4, the Explorers close their 1938 schedule with King College, of Bristol, Tenn., at Turner's Arena.

Conqueror of Villanova when the teams last met, Columbus resumes athletic relations with the Wildcats on a home-and-home basis, meeting Villanova in Washington next season.

Hall Upset by Burns.

George Burns upset Doc Hall, handing the latter his first defeat of the District Amateur 3-cushion billiard tournament by a 35-31 count last night at the Lewis and Krauss Parlor, 817 Fourteenth street. Gene Ruark leads the tourney without defeat and also holds the 1938 record run with 9 points.

Mounts Play Laurel High

Mount Rainier High School's basketballers, a team that has not lost a Prince George's tilt in over two years, will be attempting to keep its record clean as it closes out the 1938 season with county opponents tonight at 8 p. m. by entertaining Laurel High in the Mount Rainier Gym.

With only one game remaining and that with Montgomery Blair tomorrow night at Takoma, Silver Spring, the Mounts are anxious to cop tonight's engagement. A win would set the lads right as they prepare for the Metropolitan Tournament next week.

Coach Perry Wilkinson will probably start the following lads: Jack Glynn and Kenneth Taylor, forwards; Robert Crump, center; Gregory O'Connor and James Miller or Frank Landolt, guards. Laurel will have on hand Mervin Benton and Olin Merson, forwards; Holton Merson, center; Wallace Stanton and Bill Wenzel, guards.

Riders Seek 2d Place in Series Today

Meet Western in Clash to Decide Runner-Up Berth.

By Jack Munhall.

Grimly determined to make their best interhigh showing in years, Roosevelt's bare-legged lads fuss with Western tonight at Tech gymnasium in a game that will decide second place in the basketball series.

This game follows an engagement at 7:30 between Central and Wilson, who are seeking to escape an honor—the cellar position.

Although Eastern's untimely clinching of the title has jaded the attractiveness of their game, Roosevelt and Western are equipped to offer one of the closest and exciting battles of the series.

Roosevelt, given little chance for the crown at the start of the campaign, has improved as steadily as any contender, and now is capable of extending even Eastern. Western, too, has improved, although it was sadly off form in yielding its championship to Eastern Wednesday.

Perlo to Play.

This game probably will decide more than second place for both teams are anxious for revenge on Eastern and retribution may be forthcoming in the Evening Star tournament. Although Eastern, the champion, and Western, the defending champion, already have been invited, Roosevelt by seizing second place would enter a serious challenge for a spot in the tourney which will also draw St. John's and Bethesda.

Roosevelt, whose rush in the series dates back to the February acquisition of Hymie Perlo and Jack Smith, will look to this pair of young men to lead its assault against Western's stiff defense. On Tuesday, Perlo, clever ball-handler, apparently found his scoring eye and dumped 10 points through the hoops to pace his team's victory over Wilson.

The remainder of Roosevelt's lineup will find George West, teaming with Perlo at forwards and Billy Robertson and George Zuras, at guards. Smith, a 6-foot 2-inch lad, is the center.

Custer to Start.

Western will probably start Bob Custer and Bob Hollaran, at forwards; Len Stanton, at center, and Tom Saylor and Irving Needle, at guards.

Central, without a victory in nine series games, figures to at least gain one against Wilson although the contest probably will be very close. The Mount Pleasant lineup will include; Len Sokol and John Fanning, at forwards; Tom Farr, at center, and Archie Panago and Harry Martin, at guards.

Wilson will counter with Bill Hawksworth and Malcolm MacDonald, at forwards; Don Findely, at center, and Dave Maloney and Don Fugler, at guards.

Patty Berg Victor; Emery Paces Houston

Patty Beats Sally Guth, Scores Lowest Round in Local History.

By the Associated Press.

Ormond Beach, Fla., Feb. 24.—Flaming-haired Patty Berg, of Minneapolis, swept over Sally Guth, Webster Grove, Mo., 6 and 4, to gain the semifinals of the South Atlantic golf championship today.

Miss Berg went out in 36, 2 under par—the lowest ever recorded for a woman golfer on this course, and was only 1 over on the back nine.

Miss Guth went out in 39, but was 3 down at the turn. She was able to win only two holes, the third with a birdie 4 and the sixth when she chipped in the cup 25 yards off the green.

Miss Berg got a birdie on the fourth, where she was on the green in 2, and a second on the seventh, when she hit a smashing iron hole high and dropped an 8-foot putt.

Mrs. William Hockenjos, of Lake Hopatcong, N. J., won 1-up in a thrilling finish match with Mrs. Jane Cothran Jameson, of West Palm Beach.

Both played poor approach shots on the eighteenth and were just on the green. Mrs. Hockenjos putted first and was up for a sure 5. Mrs. Jameson, 25 feet from the hole, took a chance and lipped the cup. Mrs. Hockenjos was out in a par 38 to Mrs. Jameson's 39.

Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., and Fort Pierce, Fla., and Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I., rounded the turn with Miss Miley 3 up. They divided honors on the tenth and eleventh, and two well-played pars on the thirteenth and fourteenth gave Miss Miley the match, 5 and 4.

The defending champion, Kathryn Hemphill, of Columbia, S. C., played par golf on the outgoing nine to lead Dorothy Traung, San Francisco, by three holes. The match went to Miss Hemphill, 3 and 2.

Smith, Walker Cup Ace, Beaten by Emery in Texas Play.

By the Associated Press.

Houston, Tex., Feb. 24.—Nervy Walter Emery, his big black cigar curling smoke at every stroke, dropped Reynolds Smith, doughty Walker Cup star, from the Houston Country Club invitation tourney today with an amazing bunch of golf shots.

Barely able to squeeze into match play after being forced to go four holes in a play-off after the qualifying round, Emery came back in the first round to eliminate, one up, a youngster who turned in a 69, two shots under par.

Square at the end of nine holes, the pair came into the seventeenth hole still even. Emery, 1935 National amateur finalist, and former Walker Cup star, cracked a tremendous second shot that nestled on the green of the 483-yard hole. He was down in two putts for a birdie and held the lead at the home hole when Smith's desperate 12-footer for a birdie brushed the side of the hole and stayed out.

Tomorrow Emery faces Jack Munger, former Southern amateur titlist and twice quarter finalist in the National Amateur.

Johnny Goodman, National Amateur champion, sliced two strokes off par to eliminate Bobby Riegel, Beaumont, Tex., former Southern amateur titleholder, 5 and 3.

Six birdies dropped in the hole for Johnny Dawson, Chicago stylist, in his 5 and 4 victory over Bill Skeeters, former Southern Methodist football star. Tomorrow Dawson plays the feature match against David (Spec) Goldman, Dallas' iron man who went into the finals of the 1934 National Amateur Meet.

Favorites, with the possible exception of Smith, got by the opening round.

'Flash-Light Golfers' Are Up And About While We're in Bed

New Foursome Starts at 6:25 A. M. to Tote Clubs Around Golf Course—Defies 'Early Birds.'

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Rock Creek's Early Bird Golfers, who, for several years, have been the first to tread the dew on the uptown public links course, have been outdone by a foursome that defies the darkness for a morning round of golf.

Armed with flashlights and plentifully supplied with ambition, the quartet, composed of Marvin S. Pope, Secretary to Congressman Chandler, of Tennessee, Joe Hayes, of the G. A. O.; Arthur Seaton, of the Board of Tax Appeals, and H. L. Elmslie, Department of Agriculture, haven't missed a week of play all winter.

Pope, spokesman for the foursome, defies the Early Birds Club, saying that his foursome can play nine holes and have their feet tucked under the breakfast table before the Birds show up, which is plenty early.

This week the group has been starting about 6:25 a. m. They tee the ball on the first hole aided by the flashlights and then after driving go groping for somthing white in the eerie light of the dawn. Sometimes its a piece of paper and others, the sought for pellet.

By the time they play two or three holes it is light enough to dispense with the artificial light, and the only hazard is the Rock Creek dew that makes the Atlantic Ocean a sissy in comparison.

In the summer the starting time is around 4 o'clock for the pre-daylight linksmen and they have ample time to complete nine holes before preparing for the office. Nowadays they can only play five, and sometimes seven. They usually average between 45 and 49 for the nine holes of play.

The mild winter has aided the quartet in playing nearly every day. If the thermometer is below 20 they find that excuse enough to turn over for another 40 winks, but 20 and above they're out there stroking.

They were total strangers before they began to see each other out there early in the morning and finally started making dates to be there before the milkman. Sometimes only two of them can make it but bar snow or zero weather the foursome is represented.

One of the chief requirements is a plentiful supply of golf balls that they all carry in order to get that first hole played before daylight.

The early bird catches the worm, according to an old axiom, but Pope has dubbed his gang the Early Worms, and if the Early Birds want to get them they'll have to install floodlights.

Molesworth Navy Coach

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 24 (AP).—Capt. E. W. McKee, director of athletics at the Naval Academy, today announced the appointment of Keith Molesworth, quarterback of the Chicago Bears, as assistant backfield coach of the Navy football team.

Molesworth, who recently finished the professional football season with the Bears, is in Tampa, Fla. He will report at the Academy to begin his new duties on Saturday. In addition to working with the football team, he will assist with baseball and basketball.

John N. Wilson is the present backfield coach of the Navy varsity football team. Molesworth will be his assistant.

Molesworth has played professional baseball and basketball. He has been quarterback on the Bears for seven years. He played baseball with the Baltimore Orioles and the Syracuse team of the International League. Before entering the professional ranks he played as quarterback of the Alabama team in the Rose Bowl. Capt. McKee said the rest of the Navy football coaching setup would be announced early next week. Spring practice will begin on Monday.

Eastern Five In Tourneys

Eastern High's championship basketball team is assured competition in two tournaments and is likely to play in a third, it was learned yesterday. The Lincoln Parkers will vie in the Evening Star Tournament before leaving for the annual Washington and Lee scholastic struggles. Eastern expects an invitation to the Glens Falls (N. Y.) tournament in which previous Light Blue and White fives have played with distinction.

John B. MacBride has been appointed coach of the Eastern High School basketball team for 1938-1939. He will take charge at the close of the present season. Practically all of this year's regulars graduate in the spring and it will be necessary for the new coach to rebuild the team.

MacBride came to Eastern two years ago from the Sparrows Point, Maryland High School where he had charge of basketball and track. Before going to Sparrows Point, MacBride coached in three major sport at Southport, West Baden, and Bloomfield, Indiana. In addition to his coaching, MacBride has officiated in both basketball and football.

Table Tennis King Enters Local Event

Canada's Champion Set to Take Part in Tourney Here.

Canada's national table tennis champion, V. Lee Webb, of Detroit, last night joined the United States' No. 1 player in the Eastern championships, when his entry was received by the committee in charge of the big event starting tomorrow afternoon at Heurich's gymnasium.

In fact, Canada's two best players entered simultaneously, for Henry Davis, runner-up to Webb in the Dominion's last national tournament, also sent word that he was coming. Davis, like Webb, lives in Detroit, and two other entries from the big motor center gave that city its first representation in the sectional classic.

It was further proof that the tournament here is being recognized as one of the country's biggest for, like the country's No. 1 player—Sol Schiff—all decided to forego the Western tournament nearer their home in preference to the Eastern.

As it stands today, Washington entries give the host city more representatives than any other one city, but out-of-towners make up the majority of contestants in both men's and women's singles. Philadelphia, led by Isadore Bellis—eleventh national ranking player of the land—tops "foreign" cities with ten entrants, with Baltimore sending over nine, and New York and Detroit sending four each.

That there is quality as well as quantity in the draw, which will be announced today, is seen from records which show that in addition to the aforementioned national champions, there will be seven men and seven women with national rankings, the Eastern mixed doubles champions, two Middle Atlantic title-holders and various State and city champions.

Such a field assures fast action from the start of first-round matches at 1 o'clock tomorrow afternoon until the last of four title matches are played on Sunday night. Quarter-final round matches in all events—men's and women's singles, men's doubles and mixed doubles—will wind up the program tomorrow night, setting the stage for semifinal matches which will precede the final rounds Sunday evening.

Chrysler Corp. Omits Dividend On Its Common

Business Prospects Too Obscure, Says Finance Chairman.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 24.—Directors of Chrysler Corporation failed today to take action on the common dividend usually declared at this time. In December a dividend of $3 was paid. At this time last year a dividend of $1.50 a share was declared on the common. Other payments were $2 in June and $3.50 in September.

B. E. Hutchinson, chairman of the finance committee, said, "After careful consideration, Chrysler Corporation directors decided not to declare a dividend at this time."

He noted the company had paid $22 a share from earnings in the past two years, aggregating $25.91 a share. Such dividend disbursements, he said, were high in proportion to earnings, but the incidence of the undistributed profits tax on earnings retained in the business was such as to make it too expensive to retain in the corporation's treasury any more substantial proportion.

Effect of Tax.

"So long as taxation of this character remains in force," Hutchinson said, "directors are not in a position to adjust the dividend rate of the corporation to a long-term stable dividend policy, and dividends may be expected to fluctuate.

"At the present time the immediate prospects for business are too obscure to warrant the directors making any assumptions with respect to such dividends as this year's operations may justify," he said.

The corporation reported net income for 1937 of $50,729,211, equal to $11.66 a share on the capital stock. This compared with $62,110,543, or $14.25 a share in 1936. The latest earnings are the second best in the corporation's history.

The balance sheet report revealed a decline in cash as of the end of last year to $35,397,377, compared with $46,551,620 at the end of 1936.

Excess Reserve Up 50 Millions

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday that excess reserves increased $50,000,000 to $1,410,000,000 in the week ended February 23. This assured comfortable supply of money available for lending to business.

Total reserves of the banks increased $24,000,000 to $7,240,000,000, principally because of the putting into circulation of $32,000,000 of money which the Treasury had on deposit with the Federal Reserve system.

The Federal Reserve banks made no changes in their portfolios of Government securities during the week, discontinuing, at least temporarily, a movement to reduce holdings of long term Government securities and to increase short term holdings by an equivalent amount.

Brokers' Loans Drop $10,000,000 for Week

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $578,000,000. The week ended Wednesday and the total represented a decrease of $10,000,000 when compared with the previous week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $1,053,000,000.

Wheat Prices Sag With Good Crop Outlook

30,000,000 Bushels Left Available for Export Expected to Be Taken.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 24.—Swayed by official reports of generally satisfactory growth conditions for the domestic winter crop, wheat prices tended downward today, but declines were only fractional.

A sustaining influence was an authoritative estimate that less than 30,000,000 bushels of United States hard winter wheat now remained available for export. It was predicted all this wheat would be taken by importing countries because of smallness of the world supply of hard milling wheat at present.

On the other hand, North American wheat export business today totaled but 300,000 to 400,000 bushels, including United States hard winter wheat as well as wheat from Canada.

At the close Chicago wheat futures were unchanged to ⅜ lower compared with yesterday's finish, May 93⅜@93⅞, July 89⅝@89¾, corn ¾@⅞ down, May 59¾@59⅞, July 61⅛, oats unchanged to ⅛ off, rye showing ⅛@⅜ decline and provisions varying from 2 cents setback to 7 cents advance.

Anaconda Declares 25-Cent Dividend

New York, Feb. 24 (AP).—Anaconda Copper Mining Co. declared today a dividend of 25 cents on capital stock, payable March 28 to stock of record March 7. This compared with 50 cents paid in the three preceding quarters. A 25 cents payment was made a year ago.

Greene Cananea Copper Co. declared a dividend of 75 cents, payable March 14 to stock of record March 7. In December the company paid a special dividend of 25 cents and a quarterly of 75 cents. Most of the stock is owned by Anaconda.

The Market

Stocks and Commodities Yield in Less Active Trading; U. S. Government Bonds Firm.

New York, Feb. 24.—Stocks and commodities rested from their recent efforts to advance. Profit taking came into the stock market at the start and while no great dislodgment of prices was brought about, the market failed to rally much. The lower opening was followed by backing and filling to leave the stock list irregularly down at the close on a sales volume of around 700,000 shares, or about 40 per cent under the previous day's business. United States bonds held firm. Dollars were higher. May wheat closed ⅜ of a cent lower at 93¾ cents a bushel. Cotton dropped sharply.

A sharpl y accelerated pace in prices, with increased sales volume and a wide list of stocks coming into sight, is the traditional sign of at least a temporary change in the stock market's position. This morning's lower opening was therefore looked upon as a logical sequence to the several days of rising prices, reaching a climax yesterday in the trading, which brought gains of 2 to 4 points in leading issues, with some extreme jumps of 6 to 8 points in preferred and inactive shares. The foreign news, suggesting a postponement of actual conflict in Europe and a period in which rearmament in all countries would go forward with increased vigor, provided the news front for the market climax.

More Caution.

Today the markets looked about for further sustenance and found mostly food that needed more deliberate mastication to insure proper digestion. The passing of time adds to the number of prophets, business executives and other observers who venture the opinion that the worst has been seen and that some improvement from this point is to be expected. So far, precious few people have been willing to predict sustained improvement in business sufficient to insure rising profits for business.

On every basis the postponment of a war is a bull point, but the prospect of more intensive rearmament that seems to hearten buyers of steel, airplane, shipbuilding, chemical, metal and certain other stock classes is certainly not a bull point on long term. Such activity hardly will be accompanied by serious efforts to remove the barriers to international trade. On the contrary, the barriers will be increased and heightened, through currency troubles if nothing else. Most nations now engaged in spending vast sums for armaments already have hard financial problems to solve. Currency inflation will be the answer, which eventually means a further setback to trade, even though no war takes place.

Temporary Aids.

Even on the commodity side, the efforts to create credit inflation and the promise later of currency depreciation are not lasting aids. A speculative rise in commodities is more likely than not to intensify existing price disparities and throw business further out of adjustment. Meanwhile the Federal deficit for this fiscal year has passed the billion mark and several months of high spending remain. What the deficit will be next year no one knows, but it easily could be double this year's high score. The burden can't be borne indefinitely.

Meanwhile the Government has discovered that the trade depression deepened to the middle of January. The Labor Department's report on employment and pay rolls estimates a rise of 1,300,000 in unemployment outside the farms in mid-January as compared with mid-December. Employment in factories was estimated as 14.5 lower in January compared with a year ago and pay rolls fell 21.6 per cent, indicating a return of share-the-work schedules.

Profit-Taking Appears.

Merely on the side of trading operations, the market seemed entitled to a setback. Profits of large size, on a percentage basis at least, could be shown on the movements of the past week or ten days. Weakness in stocks did not go far. Steel gave up as much as 2 points, as did Chrysler, but the average was only fractional in common shares. A number of preferred stocks dropped 1 to 3 points. Some of that class also found buyers and went up a point or two. Eliminating the preferred stocks, the common share list was a rather narrow affair.

As was to be expected, the bulk of the selling took place in those issues which recently have enjoyed the most support. U. S. Rubber, Harvester, Case, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, Anaconda, Nickel and Central receded. Bethlehem was steady and Standard Oil edged forward a bit. A. P. W. Paper showed a loss of nearly 2 points on its first sale of the year. General Steel Castings preferred was a feature of dealings at the odd-lot post, with unusual activity in a fall of more than 2 points. Rail shares came down a fraction to a point.

Odd Lots.

The Lackawanna Railroad is no mastodon among American corporations, yet the road last year filed more than 127,000 separate tax returns, with Federal, State, county and municipal authorities. President Davis reports . . . The loss of $1,372,000 reported for New York shipbuilding last year suggests that even a ship building company cannot live indefinitely on hope . . . As some view it, this country is unlikely to build a navy large enough to employ any very large percentage of the country's shipbuilding capacity, and it would require an enormous merchant shipping subsidy to put any life into the merchant marine, with increasing cost of operation and quickening competition . . . Oil companies operated in the black last month and are still running in that color.

Passing the Hat.

The board of directors of Missouri Pacific Railroad recently mailed a letter to stockholders soliciting contributions to keep the road alive through the reorganization period. Under the court orders no funds are available for directors' fees or expenses. It is reported that several stockholders dropped contributions into the hat. Any chance stockholders might have to dispose of their MOP stocks is threatened by the proposed SEC investigation which will determine whether MOP 5 per cent preferred and common stock should be suspended or withdrawn on the stock exchange. With a more difficult market for the stock there is not much else the stockholders can do but contribute and hope to save something on their holdings in reorganization, in which case an assessment probably would be made.

Advertising Held Vital to Bank Relations

Financial Advertisers Call Newspapers Most Important Medium.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Newspaper advertising is regarded as a most important medium in banks' public relations programs. This opinion is brought back by Publicity Manager Eliot H. Thomson, of Washington Loan & Trust Co., a member of the governing board of the Financial Advertisers Association, from a meeting of that group in New York. Dr. Thomson announces the next annual convention of the organization will be in Fort Worth, Tex., October 31, November 1-3.

Executives, directors and members of the organization's senior advisory body passed a resolution recognizing increase of small or personal loan departments in banking; expansion of checking services on a non-balance basis, and extending facilities of loan departments to keep abreast with requirements of the construction industry in new building and repair work.

The group referred to newspaper advertising as "a vital factor in the public and customers' relations of banks," and it is regarded as a medium to reflect the work of banks in adjusting their facilities to constantly expanding requirements of individuals.

Underwriters' Dinner.

Paul D. Sleeper, president of the District of Columbia Chapter of Chartered Life Underwriters, has appointed H. Cochran Fisher as chairman of a committee to organize the annual dinner to be given by the chapter Friday, March 18 at the Carlton Hotel. Mr. Fisher's committee is composed of the following Chartered Life Underwriters: John B. Cleland, jr., Richard W. Griswold, Bernard Wilner, Joseph A. Marr, who are in charge of the guest list; Harold D. Krafft, in charge of arrangements and program, and Russell Shelk, publicity.

The feature of this year's dinner, to which business and professional leaders and underwriters will be invited, is an address of genuine public interest by Dr. S. S. Huebner, president of the American College of Life Underwriters. Dr. Huebner has announced his subject as "Life Insurance, A Multiplicity of Services to Policyholders."

As an outstanding educator in life insurance and its economic and social relations, Dr. Huebner's message is anticipated by Washington underwriters as one of great value to all interested in life insurance, especially the insuring public. There are more than 60,000,000 owners of life policies in the United States, and Dr. Huebner is conscious of the great obligation of life insurance institutions to this large number of thrifty Americans.

Record Membership.

A roster of members of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association has been completed and published, revealing an all-time record in membership for that organization. The list include more than 225 names and there are numerous additions in prospect. The latest membership roll of the association is the most elaborately prepared in the history of the organization.

It was compiled by the membership committee, headed by Charles W. O'Donnell, chairman; Arthur M. Niner, vice chairman; Richard W. Griswold, J. E. McCombs and Laurance H. Riggles. The local organization has had a most successful existence. Washington agents wrote more than $74,000,000 in new life insurance during 1937, recording a 6 per cent advance over the previous record year and doubling the national average of 3 per cent.

Bankers as Speakers.

There is a continued demand for services of the speakers unit of the District of Columbia Bankers Association on the part of various organizations, and its members are being booked for more and more addresses. Organized by Executive Vice President and Cashier Thomas J. Groom, Bank of Commerce and Savings, who is president of the bankers' organization, the group has as its chairman, Secretary Frederick P. H. Siddons, of the American Security & Trust Co.

The local movement follows one initiated by the American Bankers Association to better public relations and create an improved understanding of the work of banking institutions together with their special problems.

D. C. Insurance Gains.

Sale of new life insurance in the District of Columbia still continues active, the Life Insurance Sales Research Bureau of Hartford, Conn., listing a 4 per cent gain for Washington in January business compared with that of the month last year. Average sales for the entire country receded 12 per cent in the comparison, placing the local mark 16 per cent ahead of the Nation. Last month's business was also good in the District's bordering territory. Maryland sales were within 1 per cent of the January, 1937, total and those of Virginia within 5 per cent.

Cities Service Units Under Holding Act

By the Associated Press.

The principal units in the Cities Service system, one of the major utilities systems in the country, registered yesterday under the public utility holding company act of 1935. Registrations were filed by 68 subsidiaries operating in 18 States and Canada.

The Cities Service Co., top holding company in the system, asked for exemption for itself on the ground that utilities are incidental to its principal business. The system includes vast oil industry interests and other businesses.

Commission officials estimated that with the addition of the estimated $428,000,000 assets of the Cities Service utilities, 41 per cent of the assets of utility companies subject to Federal regulation have registered.

Bank Clearings Slump 32% From Year Ago

Year-to-Year Decline Has Continued for 15 Consecutive Weeks.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 24.—Bank clearings volume for the shortened period just ended dropped rather heavily from that for the preceding five-day week. This widened the percentage decrease from the comparative 1937 totals to the largest for more than three years, and extended the year-by-year decline to 15 consecutive weeks.

Total transactions for 22 leading cities of the United States for the week ended Wednesday, February 23, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., amounted to $3,804,457,000, against $5,591,156,000 for the for the corresponding 1937 five-day period, giving a decrease of 32 per cent. This compared with a loss of 23 per cent in the similar comparison for the preceding week.

New York clearings volume dropped 39.2 per cent to $2,231,561,000 from the $3,669,368,000 recorded last year, while the turnover at outside centers shrank to 1,572,896,000, a decline of 18.2 per cent from the $1,921,788,000 for the same week a year ago.

Clearings for the latest week dropped $492,730,000 from the total of the week preceding. This contrasted with a gain of $12,500,000 reported for the two similar periods of 1937.

'Modernizing' Plan Given to Exchange

New York, Feb. 24 (AP).—The way was further cleared today for transition of the New York Stock Exchange from the old regime to the new one of a paid president and a revised administrative set-up.

A special committee of members, under the chairmanship of E. H. H. Simmons, former president of the Exchange, presented to the governing committee an amendment to the constitution providing the merchanical means of "modernizing" the Exchange, following closely the lines proposed several weeks ago by a group representative of Exchange and non-Exchange interests under the leadership of Carle C. Conway, chairman of the board of Continental Can Co.

Calling for a paid president, who would be the chief administrative officer of the Exchange, and providing for a board of governors representing the general public as well as the Exchange, the amendment was taken under consideration by the governing committee and if approved will be presented to the membership for a vote around March 3.

Crime Courts' Housing in One Building Asked

Hazen Calls Conference of Legal and Police Officials on Plan.

Housing of all criminal court proceedings in the new Police Court Building was proposed yesterday by the District Commissioners.

The move, which would necessitate transferring two judges from the United States District Court to the Police Court Building would not require Congressional legislation.

Commissioner Hazen, spurred by co-operation from members of the local bar association, has called a conference March 5, on the proposal.

Letters of invitation to the conference will be sent Presiding Police Court Judge John P. McMahon; Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat of the United States District Court; Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of Metropolitan Police; Acting U. S. District Attorney David A. Pine; Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal; Capitol Architect David Lynn; Bolitha J. Laws, president of the District Bar Association; John Townsend; former Corporation Counsel E. Barret Prettyman and Thomas E. Lodge, past president of the Federation of Citizens Associations.

It was pointed out that under the present system, criminal cases are slowed up considerably by lawyers, police and witnesses with cases in both buildings having to run back and forth between the Police Building and the United States Court Building.

Many times when a lawyer has a case in both buildings scheduled for the same time the presiding judge may have to postpone the case.

Should both wings of the criminal proceedings be incoporated in the new building the busy lawyer would not hold up proceedings, it was explained.

Another advantage of the plan, it was stated, would be to place all criminal records in one building.

Problems facing the conference include who will be assigned to the Police Court Building, how long will be the assignment, where will be the permanent office of the justices, and will the proposal defeat the long-time expansion program of designers of the building.

According to Commissioner Sultan, the new building, which is located on Fifth street, between E and F streets northwest, will be ready for occupancy not later than March 15.

WORK WANTED.
My quest for work as draftsman, clerk, Seems such a waste of time,
Perhaps this Ad, if not too bad,
Will bring a job thru rime.

So, today, I write in verse.
The aim: to find work of my choice.
Should no "Hoped for answer" come,
This rime sure must be really dumb.

How can a man find work to do
When answers are so very few?
The ilkes o' me can starve and wait,
While Labor's lull is charged to Fate.

My last appeal: I need a place
To earn a meal, to save my face.
Perhaps there is a job somewhere—
Just write and tell me, if you dare.

Bob Burns Says—

It don't take a very smart policeman to detect crime after it's been committed. There wouldn't be near as much law-breakin' in this country if all officers could anticipate crime and stop it before it started like Grandpa Snazzy when he was chief of police down home.

One day he walked up to Doc Meier's soda fountain and took a stranger by the arm and said "You're under arrest for violatin' the 'anti-noise law'—you just drank a bi-carbonate of soda!" The man says "Well, what of it? I ain't made a noise yet!"

Grandpa says "No, but you will in a minute! Let's go."

Does America favor pensions for widows of all World War Veterans?

There's a drive in Congress for pensions for widows and children of all World War veterans—regardless of the cause of the veteran's death. Observers say that Congressmen may say "yes" in an election year. Opponents say that if the bill is passed it might ultimately cost the taxpayers about $20,00: 00,000. The Gallup Poll put the questio up to the voters of America. What did they say? Don't miss the Gallup Poll in Sunday's Post.

Trade Practice Inquiry Asked By Consumers

Lack of Accurate Data on Our Economy Deplored by Federation.

Federal investigation of "current trade practices" and establishment of a Federal agency to place consumers on a par with labor, business and agriculture were proposed to President Roosevelt yesterday by a committee form the Consumers National Federation.

With the claim that "in a democracy, no economic system makes sense which is not run so as to maximize consumption," the group asked executive support for an inquiry by a special commission "to analyze how current business structure and practices lead to underconsumption, inadequate returns to farm and factory workers and to recurrent business bankruptcies."

The consumer representatives released a statement maintaining that "no one knows precisely how free or un-free our economy is," although "no candid person today pretends that 'free competition' controls our economic life."

Accurate Data Their Aim.

Asking "how effectively our elaborate productive and merchandising structures really serve the consumer?" the group requested the investigation because "we know today virtually nothing with accuracy as to the scores of points at which 'business competition,' 'monopoly,' 'administered prices' and other routine aspects of business and financial processes cripple the consumer."

The proposed consumer agency in the Federal Administration would aid in defining standards and qualities for consumers' goods, conduct research and publish information valuable to consumers, and represent consumers before such regulatory bodies as the I. C. C.

Furthermore, the agency would co-operate with consumers' bureaus which now exist in several governmental departments. These bureaus would be represented in the new agency, it was suggested.

Called of Little Avail.

Pointing out that "the growing complexity of our economic life leaves the consumer in a progressively worse bargaining position," proponents of the agency asserted that "the wage earner's or farmer's bargain for his income is of little or no avail if his wife's bargain over the counter is ineffectual."

"One thing should be made unmistakably clear," they said, "We want all the abundance that lies within our grasp, but we do not want that abundance to be wrung out of sweated labor or dispossessed farmers."

The committee included Miss Helen Hall, president of the National Federation of Settlements and chairman of the National Consumers Federation; Dr. Robert S. Lynd, professor of sociology at Columbia University and author of "Middletown" and "Middletown in Transition;" Felice Louria, technical adviser to the New York constitutional convention committee; Michael Quill, president of the Transport Workers Union and New York councilman, and B. F. McLaurin, of the Union of Sleeping Car Porters.

Meet With Senators.

Earlier in the day, members of the consumers' group met with Senators Robert M. La Follette, jr. (Progressive), Wisconsin; Elbert Thomas (Democrat), Utah, and Lewis B. Schwellenbach (Democrat), Washington. According to Meyer Parodneck, counsel for the federation, the Senators were "very much interested" in the proposals.

"We have no facts today on which to base all this economic legislation," Parodneck declared. "We want to know why increases in wages are accompanied by greater increases in prices."

During their two-day stay in Washington, the consumer representatives also conferred with a group of liberal Representatives, Undersecretary of Agriculture M. L. Wilson, C. I. O. and A. F. L. leaders, John Carson, consumers' counsel of the National Bituminous Coal Commission; D. E. Montgomery, consumers' counsel of the A. A. A.; A. S. McAllister, of the National Bureau of Standards; Dr. Faith Williams, of the Bureau of Labor Statistics; Ruth O'Brien, of the Bureau of Home Economics; Ruth deForest Lamb, of the Food and Drug Administration; Dr. Corwin Edwards, economic adviser to the Federal Trade Commission; Dr. Thomas C. Blaisdell, of the Social Security Board, and others.

Mellon Attorneys Dispute Tax Claim

By the Associated Press.

Attorneys for the late Andrew W. Mellon differed with the Government yesterday over a computation by the Internal Revenue Bureau that Mellon's estate owes $415,508 on his 1931 income taxes.

The Mellon representatives said their calculations were about $15,000 less than the bureau's and that the discrepancy would be argued before the Board of Tax Appeals on the basis of whose ruling the computation was made.

Put Foe's Name On Gable Threat, Man Tells F.B.I.

Arrest of a Fonda, Iowa, man in connection with the writing of a $1,000 extortion letter to Clark Gable, signed with the name of a woman against whom the prisoner had a "grudge," was announced last night by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

"If you value your life and your future then send me $1,000 right away and tell no one, or else," the bureau said the letter read.

According to J. Edgar Hoover, director of the F. B. I., the prisoner, Gaylord Forsyth, 30, confessed writing the letter to Gable, "heman" movie star, over the signature of a woman neighbor "as a spite proposition, as he had a grudge against her."

The F. B. I. said Forsyth declared the woman, Alice Schnetter, also of Fonda, "knew nothing whatsoever about the extortion letter."

The letter, dated February 9 and addressed to Gable at Hollywood, was turned over to the F. B. I. upon receipt.

$18,276 Is Given To Justice Group For Crime Fight

Washingtonians have subscribed a total of $18,276 to the Criminal Justice Association's crime control fight, according to an announcement yesterday by Clarence Phelps Dodge, chairman of the membership drive.

Captains of the ten soliciting teams met yesterday in the Willard Hotel to report progress of efforts to secure an operating budget of $35,000. More than 100 volunteer workers are soliciting.

The organization's purpose, under present plans, will be expanded during the coming year. Its efforts to remedy crime conditions in the District have been repeatedly lauded by local and Federal authorities.

The next report meeting, Dodge said, will be held Monday in the Willard.

Flood in Arkansas Gradually Recedes

Fulton, Ark., Feb. 24 (AP).—Fulton's river folk appeared victors by inches tonight in a battle with the swollen Red River.

Flooding wide plantation areas east and west of here, the stream was beginning a slow drop from the 30,000 sandbags piled atop the main levee in front of the town. Elsewhere in Arkansas the flood situation abated.

Husband Hiding In Closet Wounds Mate, Kills Rival

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Feb. 24.—Charles Smith, 41, shot his wife through the neck and killed a man he found embracing her in his home today, he told the police.

Mrs. Eva Smith, 36, ran screaming from the house and a motorist took her to a hospital. Her condition is critical.

The dead man was Joseph R. Davis, father of seven children.

Smith said he went home early and hid in a closet. He said that after an hour his wife and the man arrived and went to a bedroom. He followed and shot them.

As Mrs. Smith ran from the house Smith followed and walked across the street to the home of William Doyle.

Doyle said Smith told him:

"My wife got down on her knees and prayed for me not to shoot her, but I shot her anyway."

On the advice of Doyle, Smith called the police.

The Smith's three daughters were at school.

$22,677,575 Paid In Income Tax by Confused Citizens

By the United Press.

The Nation's folk who perennially wrestle with a Federal income tax blank amid sweat and swear words paid the Government $22,677,575 last year because they didn't know simple arithmetic, officials of the Internal Revenue Bureau said yesterday.

An analysis of returns made last year showed that 152,366 taxpayers got confused while filling the income forms. Their greatest trouble was in calculating deductions allowable for interest on personal debts, State taxes, and failure to take credit for the proper deduction on earned income.

Officials estimate that 7,000,000 returns will be made this year and that $2,692,000,000 will be collected.

Rival Factions Fete Bennett And Jackson

New York's Democratic Leaders Embarrassed by Double Bid.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 24.—Partisans for two Democratic gubernatorial aspirants provided sounding boards for their favorites at rival dinners here tonight, and party leaders of this pivotal State moved gingerly in embarrassment resulting from invitations to two simultaneous affairs.

The New York Young Democratic Club honored Robert H. Jackson, the Assistant Attorney General who is now Solicitor General-designate and the supposed favorite of the Roosevelt Administration for Governor of New York.

In Brooklyn, an American Legion summer camp committee staged a reception and banquet at $10 per diner with State Attorney General John J. Bennett, jr., in the seat of honor. The tariff was for charity.

To complicate things even more, Gov. Herbert H. Lehman was guest of the State civil service employes in Albany. He never has closed the door to a possible attempt at a fourth term for himself.

A current visit to Florida saved Postmaster General James A. Farley, who as President Roosevelt's chief political officer might have the task of helping steer a Jackson campaign, from making a choice between the banquets.

Dogs Lag in Poll, So Tails May Not Wag in Greenbelt

The Government-sponsored community of Greenbelt has no dog problem and there is strong indication that it will not have one for a long time, Mayor Louis Bessemer declared last night.

"The reason is that we have no dogs," he said. "And sentiment is against admitting them."

When two-thirds of the residents of the town are in their homes, however, a community referendum will be held to settle the question officially.

An unofficial poll of public opinion, being conducted by Harry Falls, shows a 9-to-1 opposition to permitting dogs there.

"The town council had as public hearing on the subject and only three persons appeared urging dogs, while many favored their exclusion," Bessemer said.

Brown, chief of police; obert L. Haycock, first assistant superintendent of schools; and several members of Congress. Earl C. King has charge of arrangements.

Dr. Fendrich formerly held pastorates in several Eastern and Pacific Coast parishes.

U. S. Held Sure Of Success in Syphilis Drive

Public Health Official Says Almost Perfect Means of Treatment Found.

Assistant Surgeon General R. A. Vonderlehr of the Public Health Service last night predicted the complete success of the Government's campaign to bring syphilis under control.

"We can't control it in two years, but we can do it, with public cooperation, in 20 to 40 years," he said in the Public Health Forum at Georgetown University.

Dr. Vonderlehr made no direct reference to the $9,000,000 approved by the Senate Commerce Committee to start a national drive for the eradication of venereal diseases, but his remarks were understood as being directed at a Federally sponsored program.

"We have the means to control syphilis but not gonorrhea," Dr. Vonderlehr said in presdcting "an exact control" of the former disease. The Public Health Service has found a sure and almost 100 per cent perfect method of treating syphilis.

Because venereal diseases are communicable, he declared, the Government will employ the same methods to bring them under control that it uses in controlling any form of communicable diseases. This is no new theory, he explained, and was advocated as far back as 1876 by Dr. J. Marion Sims, then president of the American Medical Association.

Dr. Louis Sandler of the Georgetown medical school, a member of the panel, urged compulsory blood tests "by labor unions, big and little business and insurance companies," to detect syphilis.

Drastic Regulation Of Giant A. T. & T. By U. S. Is Studied

By the United Press.

The Federal Communications Commission last night studied a voluminous report, understood to propose drastic regulation of the $5,000,000,000 American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

It is understood the commission may recommend:

Congressional action to regulate, and probably reduce, the charge made upon operating companies by A. T. & T. This is approximately 1.5 per cent of gross revenues, according to statements made at the hearings last year. The funds are to maintain the A. T. & T. research laboratories.

Revision of the system whereby long distance tolls go entirely to one fund, instead of being allocated partly to local exchanges, to handle the cost of long distance service. This was criticized in hearings on the grounds that local exchanges were, in effect, bearing a part of the cost of toll service without any recompense.

Possible suggestions that the pension plan should be revised to "level off" pension levels as between ordinary employes and executives.

The report as now drafted is not final, but must be approved by the commission before being transmitted to Congress.

After he kissed her, Mrs. Mowery said, "I would become weak, my knees would tremble." Mrs. Vivian Korth Mowery, 32, reported "his kisses were powerful."

The campaign of the Boys Club of the Metropolitan Police to raise $75,000 for expenses and expansion this year will be opened March 20, with J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, as honorary general chairman.

The 1938 campaign for funds will last from March 20 through April 9.
